SENATE ENDS WORK ON TARIFF

SWANSON GOES TO DENEEN'S AID IN SENATE FIGHT

Mrs. McCormick in New Attack on Foe.

BY ARTHUR EVANS.

The Republican senatorship battle burst last night into a crashing prelude to the final fortnight of campaigning. Ruth Hanna McCormick, at Aurora, dwelt upon "party regularity" and after a reference to "the Cermak-Deneen political alliance," remarked that it resembled a hookup of "the Jones 1 and 16 with a bottle opener."

As a curtain raiser for Senator Deneen's Chicago debut tomorrow night in the Aragon ballroom, State's Attorney John A. Swanson put forth a statement defending his office from criticisms made by Mrs. McCormick in her Chicago opening two weeks ago. Mr. Swanson said they constitute "a craven calumny" on his office.

Swanson Makes Reply.

In reply to Mrs. McCormick's charges that the rate of gang murders, bombings, and robberies indicates that criminals have not taken to heart Mr. Swanson's "crime on the go" slogan, Mr. Swanson declared he is "putting crime on the go to the penitentiary at the fastest rate in 20 years," and that he is "making for the redemption of Chicago."

Among other declarations Mr. Swanson said he has speeded up trials, has "destroyed the slot machine ring," and has "convicted seven bombers."

Senator Deneen spent the day resting from his downstate tour, in which he covered 99 counties in less than three weeks, and is preparing for his Chicago opening tomorrow night.

Mrs. McCormick's Warning.

Mrs. McCormick last night took the trail to Aurora, where Senator Deneen at a meeting on the night before declared the coming two weeks will be "the bitterest part of the campaign."

"Senator Deneen," said Mrs. McCormick, "made a speech here last night saying the league of nations court will be the great issue in the last two weeks in Chicago. I warn him now it will not be the only issue he will face in Cook county. The people up there want to know about the senator's boasted party regularity.

"They want to know why he is 100 per cent regular in Washington, but is 40 per cent Republican and 60 per cent Democratic in Cook county. They want to know about his preélection and post-election deals and trades with Tony Cermak in the sanitary district and in the judicial election of last September. They want to know why he has not told the people downstate that he voted for the Jones bill and then rushed home to perfect a political alliance with Tony Cermak, a dripping wet Democratic leader who ran for the United States senate two years ago on a dry platform and used a bottle opener as his campaign emblem.

Questions for Deneen.

"I may ask the senator a few questions to further clear up the story of Diamond Joe Esposito. I may ask if he is responsible for the distribution by mail from his official headquarters of a vilainous pamphlet attacking my father and my husband. The shameless attack upon two distinguished Republicans, both now dead, shall not divert us from the genuine issues of this senatorial campaign."

Taking up the world court, Mrs. McCormick declared Senator Deneen in his downstate speeches has confirmed her statements that "the league of nations created the court, elects the judges, pays the judges, and uses the court as its attorney general."

"Senator Deneen," she said, "has adopted a new spring style in political attire.

"I have been asking the senator: Senator Deneen, will you vote for the Root formula if it comes to you in the senate, and why?' Some months ago when a group of women in Washington asked him if he was for or against the world court, Mr. Deneen replied: 'I have an open mind on it.'

"He had an open mind on the court, despite the fact he voted for it on Jan. 27, 1926, has been been trying to explain that vote ever since. Now what does he say when I ask him if he will vote for the Root formula, which is the most dangerous ingredient in this peace potion they are trying to induce us to swallow? Does he say 'Yes' or 'No'? He says nothing, as usual.

Senate Senator's Stand.

"He says when the new league court protocol comes to the senate for ratification it will be referred to the committee on foreign affairs. The committee may decide to rewrite it, and then can the senator say how he will vote? That open mind again!

"Senator Deneen said here last

HELD INNOCENT OF BRIBE THAT CONVICTED FALL

Same $100,000, but Different Jury.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., March 22.—[Special.]—Six years of civil and criminal proceedings growing out of the oil scandals of the Harding administration came to an end in the District Supreme court here today. A jury after 15 minutes deliberation exonerated Edward L. Doheny of the charge that he paid Albert B. Fall, secretary of the interior in the Harding cabinet, $100,000 for a lease on the naval oil reserve at Elk Hills, Cal.

Given the case at 11 o'clock this morning, the nine men and three women on the jury decided on their first ballot that the $100,000 passed to Fall during the lease negotiations was merely "an innocent loan," but they delayed announcing their agreement for exactly one hour, admittedly "for the sake of appearances."

Fall, convicted by another jury five months ago of accepting the same $100,000 as a bribe from Doheny, was sentenced to serve one year in jail and pay a $10,000 fine. He is free on bond pending the outcome of an appeal. The one time cabinet member was too ill to attend the Doheny trial.

A Contrast in Trials.

Today's courtroom scene was a striking contrast to the dramatic spectacle in the same courtroom when the Fall jury announced its verdict and provoked the most tumultuous scene ever witnessed in a local court.

On that earlier occasion, while Fall sat dazed, women of his family and old friends sobbed aloud, one of his attorneys collapsed in a faint, and above the confusion and clamor Doheny was heard at that time to scream at Justice William Hitz, "It's that damned court that did this."

Today, in contrast, a muffled shriek of joy from the Doheny family bench as Foreman Chesley Ray declared the jury's findings was silenced by the commands of bailiffs scattered through the courtroom. Mrs. Doheny, pale and trembling with excitement, stood supported on either side by friends until the jury was formally discharged.

Dohenys Embrace in Court.

Then she was swept past the rail and into Doheny's arms by the enthusiastic crowd, which rushed forward to engulf the oil man and his chief counsel, Frank J. Hogan. For a minute the Dohenys remained clasped in each other's arms, tears streaming down their faces as they kissed again and again.

Mrs. Doheny embraced each of the three women jurors and shook hands with each of the men, followed by Doheny.

In the midst of the excitement Owen J. Roberts and Atlee Pomerene, special counsel for the government, slipped out unnoticed. Neither would discuss the acquittal, but the Doheny side issued a barrage of statements.

Vindicated, Says Doheny.

"Twice now," said the statement issued for Doheny, "American juries have found me guiltless of charges made against me. My earnest hope now is that this ends the relentless prosecution by which I have been hounded for six years, and that I will be allowed to spend the evening of my life in peace."

"Once again my prayers have been answered and my faith has been justified," was the statement offered for Mrs. Doheny.

"This verdict," said Hogan, "represents something more than the acquittal of Mr. Doheny. It represents a vindication of the most priceless constitutional right still left to the American people, and that is the right to trial by jury. Trial by jury is at once the hope of all wrongfully accused citizens and the despair of persecuting politicians. I am gratified."

Judge Defines Bribe.

In his charge to the jury before it received the case for decision this morning Justice Hitz, taking cognizance of the defense plea that the $100,000 was merely a loan from one old friend to another, warned that the money "might be both a loan and a bribe—to loan a public officer in great need and dire distress without security might well be a bribe."

Doheny contended that, moved by an appeal to his patriotism against the menace of a "Japanese war," he

SOWING SURPLUS

U.S. Writ (Fla.) Pops Up to Aid Citizen Capone

Alphonse Capone, citizen of the state of Illinois, last night was accorded the protection of the federal courts to defend himself from molestation by Florida peace officers.

A temporary restraining order, prohibiting sheriffs of twenty counties in the northern part of Florida from interfering with movements of the gang chief when he visits his Palm Island home in Miami, was issued by Federal Judge Halsted L. Ritter in the United States District court at Miami.

Governor Orders Arrest.

The injunction was obtained by J. F. Gordon and Vincent Giblin, attorneys for Capone, after Gov. Doyle E. Carlton had telegraphed to each of the 67 sheriffs in the state to arrest the gangster and escort him to the state's border should he attempt to return to his Florida residence. Previously Capone's counsel had wired the governor demanding to know by what authority he may seize a citizen "who is not charged with any crime."

"We have seen what purports to be a telegram from you to the sheriff of Dade county, in which the sheriff is directed to seize our client if he comes into the county and escort him to the state border," the attorneys' message to the governor said. "We would respectfully request you to advise us under and by what authority you or the sheriffs of the state may seize and banish from this state a citizen of the United States who is not charged with any crime, who is an owner of property in this state and who is a taxpayer in this state."

Fears Gambling War.

Capone's intention to seek the protection of the federal law—which has been the most anxious to seize him—was announced by him in Chicago last night, only a short time before dispatches from Miami told of the issuance of the injunction. The gangster said that what worried him most was the war on gambling now going on in Florida. Although he said he has no connection with the gambling interests, he feared that he may become embroiled in the controversy when he visits his Florida home next week.

"Scarface Al" spent yesterday going over details of his Chicago affairs. He also spent much time receiving friends who had not yet been able to get to him since his return here, and he visited his home at 7244 South Prairie avenue.

"The police haven't bothered me," he said, "since I called on them for the purpose of getting things straightened out. I found none of them on the watch against me anywhere and it was a great relief to go peacefully about my business."

Recommendations of L. V. L. on Candidates

In the Metropolitan section of the Tribune today will be found the recommendations of the Legislative Voters league on candidates for state senator and representative in Cook county. The league points out that in many districts nomination is equivalent to election and warns citizens of the need to exercise care in making their selections.

FIND MAN SLAIN NEAR SCENE OF OBERTA KILLING

The body of an unidentified man, shot five times through the head and shoulder, was found last night in Roberts road near 94th street, a lonely spot about a mile north of the Roberts road ditch where John (Dinghat) Oberta and his chauffeur, Sam Malega, were found murdered on March 5. The police believed he had been taken for a ride and his body tossed out when his executioners had finished their work.

They started an investigation on the theory that the killing may have been a result of the Oberta murder, although finger print experts could find no record of the victim at the detective bureau. Another theory was that the slain man might have been a minor gangster or alcohol peddler who incurred the enmity of some more powerful gangster.

The body was discovered by William Kohr, 5130 South Kedzie avenue, a lineman employed by the Commonwealth Edison company, and his companion, Charles Rolff, 10218 South Charles street, Washington Heights, who were driving north in Roberts road. Their car nearly ran over the dead man.

The county highway police at Willow Springs were notified and immediately went to the scene. A pistol which had not been fired was found beneath the body, and five cartridges were discovered in one of the slain man's pockets. In other pockets were a gold watch and a small silver star bearing the words, "Ass'n Chief White Rose Ben Club." The star and its inscription mystified the police.

U. S. POLICE MAY JOIN WORLD WIDE WAR ON CRIME

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, March 23 [Sunday].—Following recent announcement of the tripartite police pact which has been concluded by Great Britain, France, and Germany to track down international criminals, it was learned that other European nations expressed their wish to join the scheme, and that the United States, Argentina, and other Latin republics also signified willingness to participate, according to the Sunday Times. It is proposed to exchange police.

Former U. of I. Athlete Seized as Holdup Man

Chester Francis, 29 years old, former University of Illinois athlete and a graduate of the university in 1923, was arrested by the Hyde Park police early this morning, a short time after he is alleged to have held up Mrs. Zelma Lynch in front of her home at 1353 East 47th street, and taken $7.

A neighbor saw the robber confront Mrs. Lynch with a weapon in his hand, take the money from her purse, return the purse and flee. He trailed the holdup man to the East View hotel, 4943 Lake Park avenue, and described him to the clerk, who said that Francis, one of the hotel guests, answered the description. The Hyde Park police were notified and Detectives James Keeley and Joseph Burbach went to the hotel and took Francis into custody.

Confesses Two Robberies.

The prisoner denied that he had held up Mrs. Lynch, but confessed robberies of two other women in the district, according to the police. Mrs. Lynch was unable to give a complete description of the man who took her money, but she, together with a score of other south side holdup victims will be asked to view Francis today in an attempt to identify him.

Another woman who is expected to look at him is Miss Blanche Hardiman, 6325 Kenwood avenue, a library employé at the University of Chicago. On the night of Feb. 13 Miss Hardiman was criminally assaulted by a gunman who seized her as she was crossing the Midway in Kenwood avenue on the way to her home.

Home Is at Freeport.

Francis told the police that his home is at Freeport, Ill., where his mother and stepfather reside. After his graduation from the University of Illinois, he said, he worked as a salesman, but recently has not been employed.

The University of Illinois year book disclosed that Francis was a member of the freshman varsity track team and an assistant track manager in his sophomore year. He obtained his diploma in the school of athletic coaching. He was a member of Theta Xi fraternity and of Delta Theta Epsilon, honorary coaching fraternity.

Fifty Policemen Rout 200 Communists in New York

New York, March 22.—(AP)—Two hundred communists—men, women, and children—who had walked down Fifth avenue from 110th street, were routed by fifty policemen today when they attempted to stage a demonstration in front of the Children's society in the Heckscher Foundation, Fifth avenue and 104th street. Eight persons were arrested by the police, who chased the radicals half a mile.

Plan to Begin Work in Fall on Postoffice

Washington, D. C., March 22.—[Special.]—Treasury building plans call for the beginning of construction work on the new $14,000,000 Chicago post office building some time this fall and its completion prior to the opening of the World's Fair.

Secretary of the Treasury Mellon announced today the contract for the new federal building at Chicago would be awarded as soon as the working drawings for the structure can be completed. Early passage of the Keyes-Elliott public buildings bill, which would permit the treasury to employ outside architects to complete the designs, would make it possible to begin actual construction in late September or early October, treasury officials said.

Accelerate Building.

The plans to speed up construction work on the new Chicago building were announced by Secretary Mellon today as part of a treasury program to accelerate building activities all along the line. This program, the secretary said, is in line with President Hoover's policy of increasing construction as a means of relieving unemployment. The program mapped out by the treasury calls for beginning work this year on $92,000,000 worth of public buildings in addition to the public buildings now under construction.

Depends on Congress.

The time when actual construction begins on the long delayed postoffice building at Chicago depends on the date when the Keyes-Elliott building bill passes congress. The reason for this lies in the fact that this measure carries a provision allowing the treasury to employ outside architects to design the working drawings on the larger buildings. These drawings must be finished before construction contracts can be let.

"Under present legislation the treasury is allowed to employ outside contractors for the preliminary designs, but the working drawings must be completed in the supervising architect's office. In the case of the Chicago post office the preliminary designs have been virtually completed by the architect's firm of Graham, Anderson, Probst & White. The treasury's architects have had only two or three years to work on these plans, but the headway has been slow.

Could Finish in 4 Months.

"By having the Chicago architects make the working drawings this work would be completed in three or four months," L. C. Martin, first assistant to Assistant Secretary of the Treasury Ferry K. Heath said today. "If the buildings bill passes within the next two weeks this would mean bids for construction of the Chicago post office could be asked in August or September."

Mr. Martin said six weeks is usually allowed for filing of bids. After the bids are received work might be begun, he said, in less than a week. He added it would take eighteen months to complete the Chicago building after work was begun.

Plenty of funds for carrying on the construction of the Chicago building are available, Mr. Martin said, so no difficulties on that score are anticipated. Treasury officials are hopeful that with the tariff bill disposed of it will be possible to pass the Keyes-Elliott bill in two weeks.

RESULT IS SURE, BUT FINAL VOTE WAITS ORATORY

Conferees to Discuss Some of Rates.

BY ARTHUR CRAWFORD.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., March 22.—[Special.]—Revision of the house tariff bill, in progress on the floor of the senate for more than six months, was completed tonight.

The virtual end of the struggle comes after numerous appeals that business all over the country has been held back seriously by the months of delay in reaching a settlement as to new tariff rates.

The senate adjourned at 8:15 o'clock tonight after advancing the bill to third reading. The rate structure was completed and final action taken on miscellaneous amendments to administrative sections.

Passage of the bill will come on Monday after a day of oratory, chiefly by the Democrats and radicals who wish to explain the alleged iniquity of provisions put into the measure over their opposition.

Enough Votes in Sight.

Ample votes are in sight for passage of the bill despite the dissatisfaction expressed by Democrats and radicals who until recently were in complete control. Some of the radicals may vote for the bill and half a dozen or more of the Democrats are certain to do so.

The bill following its passage will go to conference for adjustment of differences between the senate and house bills. This process is likely to take at least a month but the conflicts are expected to be ironed out and a bill sent to the White House late in April or early in May. It seems a certainty that the compromise bill will be in such shape that President Hoover will sign it.

The bill as it will be passed by the senate shows decreases in many rates below those of the bill as passed by the house last spring. Average duties as converted to an ad valorem basis by the tariff commission shows decreases in all schedules except those relating to agriculture and rayon from the rates of the house bill.

Farm Duties Increased.

The senate made an average increase of about 8 per cent in duties on agricultural products and an increase of a little more than 1 per cent on rayon, according to figures of the tariff commission. The senate cut duties on chemicals by about 5 per cent below the house level on earths, earthenware and glassware by 4 per cent, metals by 10 per cent, wood by 38 per cent, sugar by 16 per cent, tobacco by 6 per cent, cotton manufactures by 12 per cent, flax, hemp, and jute by 1½ per cent, wool manufactures by 2 per cent, silk manufactures by 3½ per cent, paper and books by less than 1 per cent and sundries by 29 per cent.

Some Increases Made.

Duties were increased on various miscellaneous items including photographic paper, and mixed fabrics containing wool. A proviso in the toll and toy paragraph which tended to increase rates if certain materials were used was eliminated. The Democrats and radicals failed by a vote of 29 to 39 to reduce the duty on agate buttons which has been increased to provide protection for the pearl button industry in Iowa and other states along the Mississippi river.

Senator Reed Smoot [Rep., Utah], chairman of the finance committee, who has had charge of the bill, said that "generally speaking" it is "a very, very good bill."

"It is much better than I expected we could get out," said Senator Smoot. "Of course, it has some things in it that I had rather not be there, but every man can't have his way all the time. I am sure that when it comes out of conference a good majority of the senators will be glad to approve it."

High Points of Bill.

High points in the principal rate schedules of the bill include the following:

CHEMICALS—Rates on chemicals are sharply slashed in the senate bill below the house rates and in some instances below the present law. The average ad valorem rate in the senate bill in the chemicals, oils, and paints schedule is about 36 per cent, as compared with 32 per cent in the house bill and 29 per cent in the present law. American valuation remains as the basis for dye rates in both house and senate bills.

EARTH, EARTHENWARE, AND GLASSWARE—Brick and cement, both of which are now on the free list, are made dutiable in both the senate and house bills. Both bills also carry increases on glass of various kinds and on such commodities as tiles and chinaware. The average ad valorem rate in this schedule is 52 per cent, as against 54 per cent in the house bill and 45 per cent in the present law.

Disagree on Aluminum.

METALS—The duty on pig iron is reduced to the rate of the old law in the senate bill, the house bill carrying an increased rate now in effect under a presidential proclamation. Aluminum duties are cut to those of the Underwood act in the senate bill, the house bill retaining present rates. The senate bill restores present duties on watches and clocks in place of house increases. Rates on automobiles are cut in the senate bill. The average ad valorem in the metals schedule is 32 per cent in the senate bill, as compared with 36 per cent in the house bill and 33 per cent in the present law.

WOOD—The senate bill carries a duty on soft lumber and on hardwood flooring, but eliminates duties on shingles and other hardwood lumber which are in the house bill. The average ad valorem rate in the senate bill is about 20 per cent, as compared with 25 per cent in the house bill and 15 per cent in the present law.

Sugar Duty Increased.

SUGAR—The senate bill increases the duty on Cuban sugar from 1.76 cents per pound to 2 cents, while the house bill boosts it to 2.4 cents. Neither bill increases the duty on blackstrap molasses. The senate bill average rate is 77 per cent, as compared with 92 per cent in the house bill and 67 per cent in the present law.

AGRICULTURAL PRODUCTS—Numerous increases on agricultural products are contained in the senate bill over those in the house bill, which also are considerably above the present law. Commodities on which boosts have been made in the senate bill include cattle, milk, cream, cheese, poultry, eggs, hay, and nuts. The farm groups are dissatisfied with action on casein and vegetable oils, on which some increases are given, and on starches and hides. The average ad valorem rate in this schedule is about 35 per cent in the senate bill, as compared with 33 per cent in the house bill and 22 per cent in the present law.

Duty on Wool Higher.

TEXTILES—Both bills carry the same increases in the duty on raw wool, the senate bill also making a large increase in the rate on wool rags. The senate imposes a new duty on long staple cotton. The duty on hemp is increased in the senate bill. There are scattering increases in protective rates on manufactures of wool, cotton, silk, and rayon in both bills. Average ad valorems show slight decreases in the senate bill from the house bill in rates on manufactures of all textiles except rayon, on which there is a small increase.

SUNDRIES—The senate bill restores hides, leather, and shoes to the free list, all of them being made dutiable in the house bill. The senate bill cuts house rates on diamonds and jewelry and boosts rates on cork and matches.

Power Restored to Congress.

High points of administrative features include the following:

FLEXIBLE TARIFF—The senate bill restores to congress the power to adjust rates, which is vested in the President under the flexible tariff provision of the present law. Provision for recommendations by the tariff commission is retained. Under the senate bill the tariff commission is continued as a bipartisan commission of six members, while in the house bill there would be a nonpartisan commission of seven.

EXPORT DEBENTURE PROVISION—The senate bill carries an export debenture provision, which is opposed by President Hoover.

CENSORSHIP—Both the house and senate bills retain the provision of existing law for censorship of obscene literature by customs officials, and both broaden the restrictions to include seditious literature. The senate bill provides for determination of disputed cases by the court.

Washington, D. C., March 22.—(AP)—The following is a detailed tabulation of the important rates as carried in the tariff bill tonight as it approached completion of the rate schedules.

It shows comparisons with duties in the house bill and those now in effect. Where senate and house rates disagree they will have to be settled in conference. The first figure shows the senate rate, the second the house rate, and the third the present tariff rate.

ASSESSORS PUT JUNE TAX BILLS UP TO REVIEWERS

Finish Valuation; Politics Blamed for Delay.

Responsibility for the completion of the reassessment to insure the issuance of all tax bills by June 1 was placed squarely on the board of review yesterday when the assessors, after seventeen months of labor, completed their share of the work of revaluation.

At the same time members of the board of review failed to appear at a forum at the Hamilton club at which they were charged with pursuing a policy of opposition for political purposes.

The charges were voiced by William H. Malone, chairman of the state tax commission, and George O. Fairweather, chairman of the joint commission on real estate valuations. The three members of the board, William H. Weber, Charles V. Barrett, and Edward R. Litsinger, and Charles R. Ringer, member of the board of assessors, were to have spoken at the meeting. All sent notices of regret shortly before the session opened.

Blames Tax Delay for Crisis.

Mr. Fairweather blamed the taxing officials for the recent financial crisis, which necessitated raising a $74,000,000 fund by the Strawn citizens' rescue committee to meet salary expenditures of local governments. He pointed out that prompt action and cooperation with the reassessment would have made the rescue unnecessary. Unless the program is pushed now the governments will face a far more serious crisis after July 1 when the rescue fund is exhausted, he said.

"These men in charge of taxation allowed a terrible system to go from bad to worse," Mr. Fairweather declared. "They had the power to prevent a critical situation. Witness the power they displayed in increasing the 1927 assessment to provide funds for spending orgies at the demand of politicians. They raised an assessment already on a riotously unequal basis, which resulted in the taxpayers' revolt and the reassessment.

Raps Attack on Reassessment.

"I regret that some of these gentlemen are not here. I am averse to speaking behind their backs. But I speak as I would were they here. Cook county methods of taxation have been a confusion of political advantages with the duties of office. Even now the party to which the majority of these men belong and which, in its rule for the last several years, fostered a condition of inequality, is circulating attacks against the reassessment which are either gross mistakes or gross misrepresentations."

Mr. Malone described the reassessment as a revolt against wholesale tax fixing by which some taxpayers shared the burdens of others through the activities of political machines. The fixers and politicians made no objection to the reassessment itself, but to the rules which ended tax grafting, he said. He charged the officials with delaying the program so that tax bills would not be out before the primaries in time to rouse voters against the old tax system. He predicted that 75 per cent of the taxpayers in Chicago will receive substantial reductions in their bills.

Complete Valuation Work.

The assessors completed the task of placing valuations on the 1,300,000 parcels of property in the 900 square miles of Cook county when the rolls for Evanston and Thornton were finished. The books for Evanston were turned over to the reviewers and those for Thornton will be delivered tomorrow morning as soon as their offices open. The staff is now computing the total valuation for the county by townships as found by the assessors with the recent changes brought about through complaints.

The reviewers set a pace in their revision by turning over the 54 books for the town of Hyde Park to the county clerk so that there are now 222 books in that office. The reviewers have 357 books. The board has promised to complete its work by May 1. This will give the county clerk and the county treasurer a month for their tasks.

Start 1929 Assessment.

The reassessment was ordered in June, 1928. The physical work of valuation was begun by Harry S. Cutmore, director, with nine men on Nov. 1, 1928, and was ended in 120 days as he had promised. The balance of the 17 months was spent in checking and making abstracts in compliance with the state tax commission's rules.

Tomorrow morning Cutmore will begin work on the 1929 assessment. This will be completed in 90 days in accord with his promise to Gov. Emerson, he said. Following this the staff will attack the 1930 assessment.

OIL MILLIONAIRE JUBILANT OVER ACQUITTAL

bid for and secured contracts to build huge oil storage tanks for the navy at Pearl Harbor, Hawaii, the contracts containing clauses giving the company preferential drilling rights in the Elk Hills naval oil reserves.

The evidence showed that at the height of the negotiations Fall approached Doheny for $100,000, ostensibly to finance the purchase of additional New Mexico ranch lands, and that the money, in cash, was carried from New York to Fall's Washington apartment in the now famous "little black bag" by the late E. L. Doheny Jr.

Fall Tried to Hide Deal.

When the oil scandals first broke Fall asserted to the senate investigating committee that the money was loaned to him by E. B. McLean, Washington publisher, but Doheny finally came forward and admitted he had given the former cabinet members the $100,000. It was not until the trial in which he and Fall were acquitted of conspiracy to defraud the government that Doheny produced a mutilated note, apparently signed by Fall, which was offered to corroborate the "loan" story.

The jury in the Doheny bribery case was not allowed to know, as was the jury which convicted Fall of accepting a bribe, that at the very moment Fall was negotiating with Doheny on the Elk Hills lease and asking for $100,000 he was also bargaining with Harry F. Sinclair, who, seeking a similar lease on the navy's Teapot Dome reserve in Wyoming, passed a total of nearly $300,000 in Liberty bonds to Fall.

Neither of the juries was told that both the Elk Hills and the Teapot Dome leases were invalidated by the United States Supreme court in decisions which held the transactions between Fall and the two oil men were "shot through with fraud and corruption."

ADAMS COUNTY TO BACK WILSON BY UNIT RULE

Quincy, Ill., March 22.—[Special.]—Adams county's 109 delegates to the fourth supreme judicial district convention at Monmouth, April 10, will vote for George H. Wilson as a unit, according to the instructions by the Adams county committee, which Wilson carried this afternoon by a two to one vote.

Roy D. Johnson, Adams county's other candidate, thought he had enough votes before the convention to prevent instructions for Wilson. Wilson was the Republican standard bearer several years ago and was defeated by Floyd Thompson.

FALL CELEBRATES DOHENY ACQUITTAL; VINDICATED, HE SAYS

El Paso, Tex., March 22.—[U. P.]—Albert B. Fall, former secretary of the interior, who was convicted of accepting a $100,000 bribe which Edward L. Doheny today was acquited of giving, rejoiced tonight with his friends when he heard the verdict freeing his friend.

Fall construed the verdict as a vindication of himself.

A celebration was staged in the dining hall of the Fall home where friends gathered about the former cabinet officer, who lifted his coffee cup and recited the following toast by Lord Byron:

"Here's a sigh for those who love me
And a smile for those who hate;
And whate'r the skies above me,
Here's a heart for any fate."

The situation in the Fall household was summed up by Fall's granddaughter, Emma Adair Chase, 13, who gravely asked her mother:

"But mother, if Mr. Doheny is not guilty of giving a bribe, how can grandfather be guilty of accepting one?"

"That's a question the whole country is asking today," the mother replied.

"I rejoice with Mr. Doheny and his family," Fall said, "that his action and mine has again been vindicated by the result of his trial.

"I'm inclined to think the people of the United States are to be congratulated upon the result. At least, it is an indication that eventually truth and innocence will triumph."

DENTIST'S DEATH ACCIDENTAL.

2 PLANES RACE TO SAVE LIFE OF D. H. THOMPSON

Miami Beach, Fla., March 22. — [U. P.] — A double airplane race against the threatened death of D. P. Thompson of Chicago, prominent official of the Inland Steel company, stricken here, was in progress tonight, Dr. Howard Hartman, Rochester, Minn., attending physician, said.

One of the planes left Rochester in the afternoon bearing Dr. Santiford of the Mayo hospital, with which Dr. Hartman is affiliated, and the other left New Orleans with Dr. Ansel M. Caine, both with medical equipment designed to aid in the administration of oxygen.

Thompson, ill at the Roney Plaza hotel here, was said by Dr. Hartman to be somewhat improved late tonight, but nevertheless in a "critical" condition. His illness was understood to be a type of pneumonia.

Mr. Thompson's home in Chicago is at 1247 North State parkway. It was reported last night that his former wife, now Mrs. Millie Beaumont, wife of Maj. Victor Beaumont of London, was at Mr. Thompson's bedside with her husband. The Thompsons were divorced in 1923 and she and Maj. Beaumont were married in 1927.

ASKS RICH WIVES TO BUY STOCK IN HIS FUTURE

And Milkman Thereby Runs Afoul of Law.

William J. Nolan, 1447 East 53d street, who says he is a student, was called to the office of Chief Investigator Pat Roche of the state's attorney's staff yesterday and warned to stop sending letters to the wives of Chicago's millionaires asking for money to send himself through medical school. Nolan, who asserts he formerly was a milkman, was released when he promised to abandon his scheme and to report to the prosecutor next week. The prosecutor's course then will depend on whether any complaints are made against the ex-milkman in the meantime.

Nolan, in a form letter, which was sent to every woman on a list headed "1,000 millionaire women investors," suggested that the recipient might find him a better investment than stocks or bonds. He asked for $1,200 each year for six years.

"Ambitious and Healthy."

"I am ambitious, healthy, and energetic," one paragraph of his letter reads. "Inclosed is recent photo strip. I would propose to sign notes with interest, and to take out insurance on my life payable to you. I could also get two indorsers of the notes.

"As a result of business training and social experience, I am unusually well equipped to render any special service of a confidential or unusual nature in the business or social realm and would be available to you for any such services during the six year period."

Most Letters Returned.

Nolan said that most of his letters were returned by the secretaries of the wealthy women to whom they were sent. He said, however, that the husband of one woman called on him recently and demanded an explanation of what was meant by his offer of "any special services of a confidential nature." He declared that the husband, whose name he said he did not remember, talked of "taking him for a ride." He managed to pacify the man by showing that he had sent the same letter to virtually every woman on the gold coast, he said.

Nolan told Roche that he obtained the list of wealthy woman from a brokerage office.

JEWELER WITH $10,000 IN GEMS ESCAPES THUGS

"Do something—my partner, Joseph Goldstone, has been kidnaped and robbed," shouted W. M. Jacobson over the telephone to Hyde Park police last night. Jacobson is a member of the firm of Blauer-Goldstone & Co., wholesale jewelers at 5 North Wabash avenue.

"We just got back from a motor trip to Indianapolis," he went on. "Goldstone dropped me off at my home at 8007 Yates avenue. When I looked around from the vestibule I saw two gunmen jump into the car and force the chauffeur to drive on. Goldstone was carrying $10,000 in uncut stones and it's not insured."

A half hour later the police heard from Goldstone. Two men with guns had jumped to the running board of his car, the jeweler said, but the chauffeur, Milton Smith, had routed the pair. Goldstone had safely reached his home, 3930 Pine Grove avenue.

OWNER OF CAFE SHOT IN QUARREL WITH TRAFFIC COP

John V. Sedher, 1246 South Wabash avenue, part owner of the White Owl restaurant, 29 East Roosevelt road, was shot in the thigh early this morning in an altercation with a policeman over a girl named Edna Bell. Sedher named Harold Leigh, 5808 South Union avenue, a traffic policeman at Wabash avenue and Roosevelt road, as the man who shot him. He said both he and Leigh were acquainted with the girl and that Leigh became enraged when he could not reach her on the telephone. That started a quarrel, and Sedher was shot. Leigh was arrested at his home and locked up.

PERMITS WIFE'S TRIAL MARRIAGE WITH ANOTHER

Then Takes Her Back; Rival Kills Self.

Detroit, Mich., March 22.—[Special.]—A young woman who left her husband and her baby to seek a trial marriage with the husband of her best friend, and then found that trial marriage wanting, will not reap as she sowed.

Today Thomas A. Newton Jr., son of the wealthy Detroit meat packer, is dead for love of the girl, who, after three weeks with him in Florida, decided she loved her husband and her baby more than she did him.

The deserted husband, Benjamin March, curator of Asiatic art at the Detroit Art institute, today told of the trial marriage to which he had agreed; of his suffering while his wife was away, and of his joy at her return to him and their 18 month old baby.

"Meant No Harm."

"She is back with us, and I'm happy; we'll begin all over again. They meant no harm, Newton and my wife. They were honest and decent and they believed they loved each other.

"I had promised I would not interfere and I did not. I walked the floor nights. But I had agreed that if after a month of this experiment she still wanted to come back I would be waiting. So I waited. Then came the first telegram, after three weeks, she said she would come back."

The telegram said:

"Safe on the way home. Tom quiet and happy in unchanged plans. Sweet love to you, baby, and granny."

The husband does not believe his wife knew at the time the telegram was sent Newton had shot himself.

Telegram Tells of Death.

Shortly after the telegram came, telling the husband his wife wanted to come back to him, friends telephoned him Newton had killed himself.

Newton had left his wife at their home in Birmingham. The Newtons have no children. The woman whom he loved is 31 years old, college bred, and an author.

The woman's husband is her age, a college graduate, and pursues his profession in Detroit. They have a small child. They have been married about four years.

Love Dream Experiments Cause Furor at College

Dallas, Tex., March 22.—[U. P.]—Dream tests such as those which threatened to create a furor at Texas university this week were characterized as "worse than useless," by the Rev. A. K. Floyd, Dallas pastor and former moderator of the Presbyterian general assembly, here today.

Meanwhile President S. Y. Benedict had made no response to a legislator who suggested suppression of a university bulletin entitled "the experimental production of dreams during hypnosis," by Dr. David Ballin Klein, assistant professor of psychology.

Belief that steps would be taken toward suppressing the booklet waned with Dr. Benedict's failure to act.

Called Abnormal Curiosity.

Regarding the experiments, described in detail by the bulletin, the Rev. Floyd said, "It looks as though a bunch of psychologists have an abnormal curiosity to know what an ordinary dream is about, and their curiosity as to whether or not it relates to sex problems is poorly veiled.

"Nothing worth while is indicated in the experiments so far, and if there is any promise of anything valuable it has escaped notice."

Most of the dream results were secured from eight students and one professor. Two of them were young women. They were hypnotized by visual fixation and verbal suggestion, then told to go to sleep. A stenographer recorded their reactions.

Of the 171 hypnotic dreams recorded, a member of the opposite sex appeared in 34. Including every such appearance, "no matter how innocent," Prof. Klein interpreted to mean a small percentage of dreams had sexual associations.

Some Queer Reactions.

One subject dreamed a cow licked his hand when he was stroked with absorbent cotton. Ill smelling herbs brought him the dream of a dead horse. Noise of a motor made one pick up a horseshoe and throw it at a horse in dreamland, whereupon the phantom equine was so amused it turned around and emitted a boisterous horse laugh.

Perfumery and other stimuli were used "to stir the erotic subconsciousness during the tests."

DIES OF INJURY IN FALL.

Martin H. Terrell, 44 years old, 617 West Madison street, a postoffice employé, died yesterday in the Henrotin hospital of a skull fracture, incurred when he fell down the stairs at 813 North La Salle street, where he had gone to call for a misdirected letter.

WOMAN, FORMER MAYOR, LABELS ILLINOIS 'SAVAGE'

Illinois long ago got rid of its savage aborigines, but it nevertheless remains "uncivilized" to Mrs. Bertha K. Landes, Seattle's former, first and only woman mayor. She and her colleagues among the Washington League of Women Voters, she said yesterday, will continue to regard it in that light so long as Illinois denies women the right to serve on juries.

"It seems too queer for words to us," Mrs. Landes said yesterday at the Fortnightly club, in a chat with members of the Cook County League of Women Voters, her hostesses for the day.

"It has been my experience that men generally pay too much attention to the business side of government, and slight the public welfare and public morals side of the problems, while women consider the business side last and the public welfare first."

As she climbed aboard a westbound train last night, Mrs. Landes was entering the home stretch of a lecture tour that took her from the Pacific coast to the Atlantic seaboard.

LANE SEMINARY MAY UNITE WITH CHICAGO SCHOOL

Cincinnati, Ohio., March 22.—(AP)—Trustees of Lane seminary, one of the oldest Presbyterian theological institutions in this part of the country, today filed a petition in court, asking authority to discontinue the school and merge with the Chicago Presbyterian Theological seminary.

The court is asked to determine whether the trust under which the property is held will permit the Lane Seminary foundation to handle proceeds of a sale or lease of the holdings under terms of the grant of land made tion, they say, is partly due to the others.

Attorneys for the trustees maintain that conditions have so changed that it is not advisable to continue the seminary as an entity. This condition, they say, it partly due to the number of theological schools established since 1829.

DRYS WILL LOSE STATE BY STATE, IT IS PREDICTED

Campaign Is Outlined by J. W. Wadsworth.

BY JAMES O'DONNELL BENNETT.

Geneseo, N. Y., March 22.—[Special.]—When the National Republican club voted a few evenings ago in a vote of more than four to three for the repeal of the eighteenth amendment New York newspapers credited to former United States Senator James W. Wadsworth the successful issue of the long fight to make that powerful organization quit pussyfooting on prohibition.

"G. O. P. Repeal Victory Starts Point for Former Senator—Called 'Key Man,'" ran the headlines, and the editorial comment recorded another deep and skillful maneuver by the man who at the age of twenty-eight, and for five years thereafter, was speaker of that truculent body, the New York assembly.

So I went over to Rochester and thence south into Livingston county, and while he stood ankle deep in a row yard asked him this morning about the maneuvers by which he and Nicholas Murray Butler are alleged to have made the club take a stand at last on a national issue.

He Speaks Plainly.

With a candor as lordly as the wide Genesee valley, where his family have been farming for a hundred and forty years, he replied:

"There was no maneuvering. We had no idea what our vote was going to be. In fact, we were prepared to be licked, and not to be dismayed if we were licked.

"And there is no 'inside story' of the meeting or of the vote so far as I am able to discover. The best proof of that is that the sixteen men who signed the call for the meeting could not tell me what their chances of bringing the club to a vote were. The real news of the event is that after heated arguments the members made up their own minds and then decisively put the club on record.

"Two years ago such a vote would have been unthinkable. Today it is highly symptomatic, for the National Republican club is largely composed of men who have to fight and win the battles. It has always been a vital center of political discussion and it helps shape politics. Its decision to speak out on prohibition meets an insistent demand for honest speech on that question.

Talks on Prohibition.

"I have had personal experience along those lines. Six or seven years ago when I would be invited to speak before organizations they often asked me not to talk about prohibition. Today that is the very subject upon which those organizations want me to talk."

James W. Wadsworth is not taking advantage of the turn of the tide by releasing newly formed views on prohibition. He was against it at a time when, as he puts it, "it wasn't respectable to be that way." From the start people knew where he stood, for, as United States senator from New York, he opposed the resolution by which Congress submitted the eighteenth amendment to the states.

That opposition cost him the senatorship. He would not equivocate and he would not palter with the Volsteadians in 1926 when he was running for a third term as senator. Consequently the Anti-Saloon league put a bone dry Republican, Franklin W. Cristman, in the field against him, split the Republican vote and brought about the election of a Democratic wet, Robert F. Wagner. They knew—none better—what the result would be and they were wholly reconciled to it, saying, "It is better to have the wet Wagner in the United States Senate than the wet Wadsworth because Wagner, being of the minority there, will be able to do less harm."

Sticks by His Guns.

Mr. Wadsworth took his punishment manfully and did not recede from his position that the eighteenth amendment has no place in the constitution.

"I feared this decree when it was proposed," he says, "and I fear it now. I feared it because of its inelasticity, which makes it a very negation of democracy. I felt that were it to result in failure—and it has resulted in failure—the majority recognizing its failure would be confronted with a long, weary and bitter struggle to repeal or even to modify it in the face of the opposition of one-fourth plus one of the States. Such an opposition is what I call the very negation of democracy."

Mr. Wadsworth talked that way when the senatorship was at stake, and he talks that way now. In 1926 Arthur Henning said of him, "He is one of the few candidates in the country whom nobody accuses of pussyfooting on prohibition, and there would be no difficulty in reelecting him if he would keep his mouth shut on the question."

But that is not the Wadsworth way. It never has been.

Family Long Prominent.

For two centuries and a half the Wadsworths have played fortright parts in the drama of American liberty.

The curtain lifts in 1687 on their first appearance in the illustrious story. It is evening in Hartford, Conn. Sir Edmund Andros, a royal governor with a special genius for acts of insensate tyranny, is demanding from the provincial assembly the people's charter, "cherished patent," Bancroft calls it, "which had been purchased by sacrifices and martyrdoms, and was endeared by halcyon days." That charter lies on the table in front of Andros.

An anxious throng of farmers is listening to the proceedings, which are stormy. The evening shadows deepen. Suddenly a scurry. Chairs are tipped over. Puff! Puff! Puff! Who did that? Somebody has blown out all the candles. The chamber is in darkness. Hurriedly, Andros fuming the while, the candles are relit.

But where is the charter?

Charter in Safe Place.

It has vanished. Nobody knows anything. But it is noticed that the onlooking farmers are closing up a gap in their group. Through that gap—so men whisper later—one Joseph Wadsworth, a farmer, had glided, the precious charter under his coat. Hurrying through the dark lanes he comes to a mighty oak, "older," says Bancroft, "than the colony."

There he hid it, and the story of Charter Oak, standing within the memory of men still living, became the inheritance of every American school boy. It also became the grandest inheritance of the tall, broad shouldered James W. Wadsworth, aged fifty-two, whom you see standing this wintry day in the cowyard and talking on the tyrannies, equivocations, and stultifications of bogus prohibition.

You don't expect pussyfooting of a man bred from such stock.

And you don't get it.

For example, when I asked James W. Wadsworth the routine question about "next steps" in the fight against Volsteadism, he replied:

"To inform the public mind and to shake the cant and hypocrisy out of politicians. Empty phrases about law enforcement will not suffice. Platforms and candidates will have to say what they think of the law itself. The country knows the old rigmarole—'We stand for the enforcement of all laws, including the prohibition law'—and two hours later half the drafters of the platform are back in the hotel shaking up a cocktail."

I laughed.

"It isn't funny," he said gravely. "It's debauching and disgusting, and the country can't live politically in such an atmosphere."

Mr. Wadsworth is for absolute repeal of the eighteenth amendment.

"Otherwise," he continued, "three things will happen.

Subject for Zealots.

"1. The amendment will always remain a vantage ground for propagandists and zealots.

"2. As a result, congress will be a bear garden week in and week out.

"3. The states will be reluctant and fearful to settle down to definite policies of liquor control, lest the eighteenth amendment should clap another enforcement act on them."

As chairman of the New York state division of the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment and as member of the executive committee of seven of the national association, the former senator is the strongest single influence in the formulation of its program of specific political action.

Progress and program of the association he sketched thus:

"When we organized it was very difficult to get people who shared our views to come out publicly for those views. It wasn't 'respectable.' Hence our first effort was to enlist men whose motives couldn't be questioned. For then we could demonstrate that we were in earnest, that we weren't 'agents of the liquor interests,' and that what we were doing was respectable.

Leaders Responsible Men.

"Now that work is done. We have two hundred and fifty directors of the utmost prominence in all lines. On our board today are executives and responsible heads in transportation and in industries employing more than three million men.

"In laying our plans we made up our minds that when the time came for a showdown we ought to be able to put before the people of the states trustworthy information on systems of liquor control in other countries. Hence for three years we have been sending investigators into all the following countries at our own expense:

"Great Britain, France, Germany, Belgium, Sweden, Norway, Denmark, Finland, and all the provinces of Canada.

"We have just one ideal in mind with respect to the liquor problem—temperance supported by honest public sentiment. And we are convinced by the experience of this country that total abstinence by legal compulsion—and that is what the eighteenth amendment means—is impossible.

"Now, then, to sum up progress:

"We have established the respectability of our motives.

"We have completed our research work.

"Public sentiment, growing by leaps and bounds, is beginning to meet us.

"And we are on the threshold of sustained, persistent political activity."

On this phase of direct political action Mr. Wadsworth was emphatic.

"From now on," he said, "this thing is going to be settled by ballots.

"There is no doubt in my mind that the public will no longer tolerate evasion on the part of candidates for important elective offices. They are sick to death of the pussyfooter. They will compel candidates to state publicly just where they stand. The other side are content with the dissembler. We are going to smoke him out.

"But I doubt that the question will be settled by or in a presidential election, for there are then too many other issues involved to give this issue a fair chance. It will, however, be influential in a presidential election. It will not control but it will affect the result, and that I think, will surely be its operation in 1932."

To the states Mr. Wadsworth looks for permanent amelioration of present conditions.

"This question," he said, "is going to move far toward settlement by action in the several states—back among the people—and not at Washington. Washington eventually will act, but it will act because of pressure from home. To the states our association has got to go, and that is where we are going now. We are not taking the responsibility of urging any legislation at Washington at present.

Maryland Without Dry Law.

"Consider these facts:

"Maryland never passed a prohibition enforcement law and the legislature still refuses to enact one.

"New York repealed its state enforcement law in 1922 by act of legislature. Wisconsin, Nevada and Montana repealed theirs by popular vote. That makes five states without prohibition enforcement laws.

"Now we propose to encourage movements for further repeals. Massachusetts is on the way toward repeal. At the general election of next autumn it will hold a referendum on repeal, voting on a separate ballot. In view of the result in the recent Massachusetts by-election the result of this referendum is not doubtful.

"We have also found a fertile field in Rhode Island which will vote in the autumn on what will really be in the nature of a petition to congress for repeal.

Tests Are Welcomed.

"We welcome these tests. We urge referenda. The other people don't want 'em, and we know why.

"This policy of work among the states we shall pursue, thus disintegrating the whole picture.

"We propose to take one stone and then another from the prohibition fortress until it shall finally crumble.

"We have a strong branch in Pennsylvania; the same in Ohio.

"Pennsylvania, Ohio, Illinois, New Jersey, Connecticut, Missouri, and California are repeal possibilities of the near future. The Association Against the Prohibition Amendment did not instigate the referendum in South Dakota two years ago because we thought it a little premature. Even so, in a very heavy vote, it was lost by only eight thousand."

As we rode over the seven thousand acres which are farmed under Mr. Wadsworth's personal direction—no tenants—he talked of prohibition as it works on his countryside.

Speakeasies Abound.

"Livingston county, purely agricultural and with a population of only forty thousand is," he said, "spotted with speakeasies. I venture to say that there are just as many speakeasies in these rural districts, per thousand of population, as there are in the big cities. The bone dry rural district is an exploded myth. Originally many of our people were for prohibition. Their change in feeling dates from about two years ago and is due to the spread of the speakeasy, the corruption of officials, and a waking up to the hypocrisy of it all. Much hard liquor comes in from Canada and considerable native wine is made. Prohibitionists will say that the cause of these conditions is that we have no state enforcement law. But the Court of Appeals has held that our old nuisance law applies to speakeasies, and it is used against them when they become disorderly."

Of current activities of prohibitionists in the New York legislature he said:

"They can't pass their bill—a state enforcement act running on all fours with the Volstead act. Their strength is distinctly less than it was two years ago."

G. O. P. Faces Trouble.

Farmer Wadsworth believes that unless Republican leaders take an honest stand and vigorous measures for the correction of the evils of bogus prohibition the Republican party will cease to be the Republican party.

"It will," he said, "become an out and out prohibition party—and then we're gone. And when I say that I speak as a Republican. We are perilously close to the edge of the precipice in all the northern states. We have, just recall, lost almost every Republican governor of New Jersey since prohibition.

"You see, the people are getting wise to our evasions and duckings and dodgings. They know we are faking. And the people always find some vehicle of expression. If they can't find one ready made they'll make one. They will find or make one for the expression of their views on the scandal and waste of prohibition. It's a fundamental issue. It won't down. It's here now. And it's going to be settled by votes."

ASSAILS DRY LAW

Blunt Speech by Farmer Wadsworth

[For twelve years United States senator from New York. New farming seven thousand acres in historic Genesee valley. Opposed resolution by which congress submitted eighteenth amendment to the states.]

The bone dry rural district is an exploded myth.

The people are sick of the prohibition pussyfooter. More and more they will compel candidates to state publicly just where they stand. The other side are content with the dissembler. We are going to smoke him out.

Bogus prohibition is as fantastic as it is degrading; we are hypocritical in public and private about a doubtful virtue.

Two groups are genuinely interested in the national prohibition law: those good persons who honestly believe that total abstinence should be forced on the people, and—the bootlegger who grows rich and pays no taxes.

We anti-Volsteadians have just one ideal in mind—honest temperance supported by honest public sentiment.

Before the eighteenth amendment conditions making for temperance in the United States were getting better all the time, but the present conditions throw us back into chaos.

The experience of this country proves that total abstinence by legal compulsion—and that is what the eighteenth amendment means—is impossible.

JAMES W. WADSWORTH.

CAPONE GANG'S LORD TREASURER INDICTED BY U. S.

Charge Failure to Report $742,887 Income.

Frank Nitto, alias Nitti, reputed chancellor of Al Capone's liquor and vice syndicate exchequer, was indicted yesterday by the federal grand jury in United States Attorney George E. Q. Johnson's campaign against income tax dodgers.

The true bill charges Nitto had a net income of $742,887.81 for the years 1925, 1926, and 1927, on which he failed to file schedules with the collector of internal revenue. According to the indictment, Nitto owes the government $158,823.21 in taxes and penalties which make the total $277,940.61.

Bond Fixed at $50,000.

The indictment, voted on March 14 and suppressed while federal agents sought Nitto, was returned yesterday before Federal Judge Wilkerson, who fixed bond at $50,000 on request of Assistant United States Attorney Dwight H. Green, and issued a bench warrant for Nitto. City police were asked by District Attorney Johnson to help deputy marshals find Nitto.

The Nitto indictment followed one of the most complex investigations ever undertaken by the intelligence unit of the internal revenue department, according to A. P. Madden, the local chief. Months were required in checking bank accounts before the operatives found an index to the profits of alcohol and vice which the silent, elusive Nitto handled for the Capone interests. The so-called "business manager" of the syndicate used banks merely as collection agencies, fearing to place large sums on deposit.

Only One Bank Has Records.

According to the investigators, Nitto received checks from regional distributors of alcohol and took them to an outlying bank for collection. He would return in a few days and receive the cash, paying the bank the necessary fee. There were no means of ascertaining the subsequent disposition of the funds.

The investigators believe that the funds Nitto collected through a number of banks over the three year period ran into millions, but only one bank could be found with records of his transactions. Although alcohol was found to be the principal source of income, there was evidence of big profits from gambling resorts and brothels. The "distributors" for the gang are said to have operated throughout the city and in most of the suburbs.

Indicted on Five Counts.

Nitto was indicted on five counts, the first three charging willful attempts to evade the payment of income taxes and to defraud the United States, and the other two charging willful failure to file income tax returns. The penalty for the first charge is not more than five years' imprisonment and a fine of $10,000, and for the second a maximum of one year in prison and a fine of $10,000.

Nitto's income for the years mentioned, and the tax due, so far as the investigators could learn, was:

Year—	Income.	Tax.
1925	$426,261.99	$97,699.28
1926	169,674.13	33,522.79
1927	146,951.69	27,571.67

The penalty for willful attempts to defraud the government is 50 per cent of the tax due, and for failure to file returns it is an additional 25 per cent.

Two detective bureau squads went to 2837 South Michigan avenue in search of Nitto, and although they failed to find him there, they seized liquor valued at $10,000 and arrested nine men who were in the place. The men gave their names as Timiset Boscino, 1528 Scoville avenue, Berwyn; Valerio Sansone of New York; Louis Punetti and Morell Barbaras, 1509 North Wells street; James O'Brien, 2900 Indiana avenue; George Gamba, 1900 Calumet avenue; Eugene Nevare of Detroit; Rene Milano, 2924 Michigan avenue, and Harry Elbe, who was held as keeper of the place.

District Attorney Johnson said he believed the indictment of Nitto, known as the financial brains of the Capone organization, had come closer to striking the heart of organized gangdom than any previous achievement.

The district attorney's battle on tax evading public officials, contractors, and gangsters previously had resulted in the indicting of Gene Oliver, county assessor; State Representative Lawrence C. O'Brien; Frankie Lake and Terry Druggan; Ralph Capone, brother of Al, and Fred W. Rhodes and George L. Chamberlain, electrical contractors.

Frank Nitto, Capone lieutenant, indicted on income tax fraud charges, whom the police were seeking yesterday when they made the Michigan avenue raid.

ARRESTED IN Y. M. C. A. HOTEL.
Philip Kessner, of 647 Melrose street, arrested in his room in the Y. M. C. A. hotel, 826 South Wabash avenue, was arraigned yesterday and held in bond of $500 on a charge of possessing liquor. Dry agents said they found several pints of spirits in his room.

PAIR HOLD UP DELIVERY MAN.
Two young bandits in a small automobile crowded the driver of a Fair store delivery truck to the curb at Prairie avenue and 91st street yesterday morning and robbed him of $30. The driver was Edward Bockweldt, 1664 West 57th street.

ROBBER BEATS DEAF WOMAN IN HUNT FOR GEMS

Mrs. Frederick van Enger, 53 years old and partly deaf, was severely beaten in her home yesterday morning by a robber who mistook her inability to hear his commands for a refusal to obey. He struck her over the head repeatedly with a revolver when the woman stared at him in bewildered fashion after he had ordered her to tell him where her jewels were.

Mrs. Van Enger opened the door of her home at 5662 Ridge avenue in response to a knock and the robber stepped in. He whipped out a revolver and spoke a command. Mrs. Van Enger didn't understand. The robber struck her several times and she screamed and ran.

The bandit fled as neighbors rushed to the home upon hearing the woman's cries. She described her assailant as young and well dressed.

PHARMACY BOARD PROBES LOAN OF STATE LICENSES

An investigation of an alleged pharmacists' ring, the members of which are reported to have loaned their licenses to laymen to enable them to own drug stores and to fill medical prescriptions, was started yesterday by Clyde I. Backus, assistant director of the state department of registration and education. The state pharmacy board, which meets next month, will continue the investigation with the view of revoking the licenses which have been loaned to others.

Under a new state statute all drug store proprietors must be registered pharmacists. Several store owners are said to have borrowed licenses to comply with that law, according to Mr. Backus. In some cases the amateur pharmacists have filled prescriptions, which, if taken internally as directed, would have been fatal, he said.

MARCONI BUILDS RADIO PHONE FOR SMALLER SHIPS

Reaches All Over World with Low Wave.

BY DAVID DARRAH.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

ROME, March 22.—Experiments carried on during the last two days aboard the yacht Electra, anchored in the harbor of Genoa, in short wave radio transmission have brought discoveries destined to revolutionize the whole system for utilization of electric current for industrial purposes, Senator Guglielmo Marconi, the wireless wizard, announced today.

Among the new scientific vistas opened up are the possibility of a passenger aboard a ship in midocean to talk by radio-phone to his own home in any part of the world with minimum delay. The other possibility is the starting or stopping of street cars, trains, light plants and power plants by means of short wave radio beams at any desired distance.

18,000 Mile Conversation.

Two days ago Marconi, from his yacht, demonstrated the first possibility. Using a newly devised instrument supplied with only a small generator and a 15 foot antenna, the inventor held a two-way conversation with Manager Fisk of the Amalgamated Wireless company in Sydney, Australia, 18,000 miles from Genoa. The conversations were as clear as if in the same room.

Later from his yacht Marconi rang up several members of the Sydney stock exchange on separate phones. He startled the mayor of Sydney, to whom he talked, by telling him that Wednesday, from his yacht in Genoa, he would light up the whole electric lighting system in the Sydney municipal building. Today and tomorrow he will telephone Buenos Aires, San Francisco and New York, ringing up individual numbers from his ship.

In illuminating Sydney's electric lights from Geona harbor Marconi will flash a beam that will turn a switch and automatically turn on all the lights.

On Phone Anywhere.

Marconi's assistants say these discoveries are not so much new inventions as they are perfections of already discovered possibilities of short wave transmission. The phoning has been done before under similar conditions, but land stations were used on one end with powerful generating systems and large antennae, whereas his apparatus can be fitted to small ships such as his 108 ton yacht.

The marvel of the new appliance, it was pointed out, is not so much that the opposite sides of the world are brought within range of small instruments, but that it enables any telephone in the world to be within easy reach of any ship at sea, affording possibilities of complex combinations and hookups.

The preliminary experiments aboard the yacht have been accomplished amid greatest secrecy, access to the ship being denied every one.

Following the successful experiments Sig. Marconi's assistant, Marquis Luigi Solari, supplied the additional explanatory details. Marconi sought to perform the experiment under the most difficult conditions, in order that the work would not be upset later by unforeseen obstacles. His main idea was to build an apparatus for long distance radio phoning, which might be adapted to a small space yacht.

New U. S. Solicitor

THOMAS D. THACHER.
[Associated Press Photo.]

Washington, D. C., March 22.—[Special.]—Judge Thomas D. Thacher of New York was confirmed today by the senate as solicitor general to succeed Charles E. Hughes Jr., who resigned at the time of his father's appointment as chief justice of the Supreme court.

No opposition was expressed to the confirmation.

Senator William E. Borah [Rep., Idaho] had read a letter he had received from Judge Thacher with relation to an objection raised on account of one of his decisions as a federal judge in an immigration case in which he refused to deport an alien.

Judge Thacher also referred in the letter to his former service as counsel for the Antorg Trading corporation, which was organized to carry on trade with Russia which was reported to have brought to this country a large amount of Russian gold. Judge Thacher said the gold transaction took place after he had been on the bench for three years and was in no way connected with the corporation.

When Judge Thacher's name originally was before the judiciary committee charges were made that he was interested in power companies. He has since disposed of his holdings in these companies.

$1,000,000 BLAZE AT HOBOKEN PIER PERILS 5 VESSELS

Hoboken, N. J., March 22.—(AP)—Two piers, eight freight cars, and a great quantity of merchandise were destroyed by a fire that raged for two hours tonight on the Lamport & Holt piers along the Hudson river. Two steamers and three barges, threatened by the flames, were towed to safety. Police estimated the damage at $1,000,000.

Three alarms summoned all available Hoboken fire apparatus, but the fire, fanned by a high wind, assumed such dimensions that Jersey City and Weehawken fire apparatus had to be called.

In addition, aid was requested of the New York maritime police, who sent a fireboat. This, and Lackawanna and New York Central railroad fireboats and tugs, assisted in bringing the flames under control.

The fire, after breaking out in the bulkhead, crept up to the pier, spread to the float bridge and to the box cars, which stood, end to end, empty of freight, which had been brought across from New York on floats for delivery in New Jersey.

TAXI DRIVER KILLS BANDIT, WOUNDS PAL

Frank Di Vicino, 7842 South Carpenter street, a Yellow Cab driver, shot and killed a Negro bandit and slightly wounded his companion yesterday morning when the two attempted to rob him in front of 3720 Langley avenue.

Di Vicino had noticed the two Negroes approaching his parked cab and had drawn his revolver, he told the police. When they ordered him to hold up his hands he began shooting. Both bandits fell. Di Vicino took the wounded man to a hospital, where he identified himself as Joe Jackson, 18 years old, 516 East 46th place. The dead robber was Pario Wingt, 27 years old, 4411 South State street.

JAPAN DEMANDS BIGGER NAVY IN 3-POWER TREATY

Plans to Renew Talks with U. S. and Britain.

ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, March 22.—Renewal of negotiations between the American and Japanese delegations is now expected as a result of the determination of the Tokio government to endeavor to obtain further concessions from Great Britain and America. In that event it will take at least two weeks to determine whether a three power navy limitation treaty is a possibility, let alone a five power pact, which now appears to be on the rocks.

Information from Tokio indicates Japan will ask its delegation to seek a reopening of the conversations in the hope of obtaining a greater allocation of big cruiser tonnage. Japan originally demanded 70 per cent of the eight-inch cruiser tonnage of America and 70 per cent of all auxiliary tonnage and a parity in submarines.

Concede Big Cruiser Tonnage.

The Reed-Matsudaira agreement, accepted by the British, American, and Japanese delegations, accorded Japan a parity in submarines, 70 per cent of all auxiliary tonnage, and 70 per cent of British big cruiser tonnage, but only 60 per cent of the American big cruiser tonnage, by virtue of the fact that America is to have three more eight inch cruisers than Great Britain. The American delegation agreed, however, not to lay down the last three big cruisers until 1933, so only 15 would be completed during the life of the treaty. That would give Japan 72 per cent of our big cruiser tonnage until the expiration of the treaty.

This agreement was transmitted to Tokio by the Japanese delegation with a recommendation for its acceptance. Admiral Takarabe was the only member of the Japanese delegation who opposed it at first. He was quoted as saying he would be compelled to commit hari-kari if he accepted the Reed-Matsudaira settlement. Later he was won over by Reijiro Wakatsuki, chairman of the Japanese delegation. The hari-kari story has gone all over London, however, and has been growing.

Japanese Hold Out.

"If I were to yield Italy's demand for a parity with France," said Dino Grandi, Italian foreign minister, to Francois Pietri, French delegate, "I would have to go home and commit hari-kari like Admiral Takarabe."

The Japanese now take the stand that they will not join a three power treaty unless they are given more tonnage in big cruisers and submarines. Both the American and British delegations are opposed to yielding further. Their view is that Japan has been given virtually all it demanded, at least for the life of the prospective treaty. Under the pending agreement, Japan was accorded 70 per cent of the American strength in auxiliary classes, compared to the 60 per cent it had accepted at the Washington conference in consideration of America's abandonment of the development of naval bases in the western Pacific and the Aleutian islands.

According to an explanation given for the concessions to the Japanese demands, America was in a weak bargaining position because it had failed to build cruisers. It is stated the United States could not force Japan to cut down its cruiser tonnage as long as we sought the right to increase ours. The American delegation does not subscribe to the theory that America is in a strong bargaining position, because America, alone of the naval powers, can afford to continue building battleships. No use was made of this situation in the negotiations with the Japanese.

New Orders from Tokio.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

TOKIO, Japan, March 22.—Fresh instructions to the Japanese delegation to the London naval conference, which were drafted today by the navy ministry represent an attempt at compromise in the die-hard view of the navy general staff and that of the foreign office. The instructions were delivered to the foreign office for consideration and will be submitted to the cabinet for approval Tuesday or Friday, then are to be forwarded to London.

In their present form, the instructions are an attempt to obtain an understanding with America not to build more than 15 eight inch gun cruisers until 1936, or permit Japan to build 16,000 tons in the same category after 1923. It points out that Japan is satisfied with 78,000 tons of submarines regardless of the ratio.

The foreign office holds that the success of the conference is of utmost importance, and even suggests that Japan make slight concessions in its demands if necessary.

FOE OF PROHIBITION OPPOSES SHEPPARD IN TEXAS PRIMARY

Houston, Tex., March 22.—(AP)—Advocating repeal or modification of the prohibition amendment, former Congressman R. L. Henry of Houston late today announced his candidacy for the Democratic nomination to the United States senate. He will oppose Senator Morris Sheppard, author of the eighteenth amendment. Henry served in congress 20 years.

"In my judgment," Henry said, "the national prohibition amendment should be repealed or amended. The time has come for action by the American people. The dismal farce of prohibition as it now exists should be terminated."

FRENCH TO RETURN

BY JAY ALLEN.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS, March 22.—Minister of Marine Dumesnil will return to London Monday, with Foreign Minister Briand following him in the middle of the week, it was officially announced here tonight, but Premier Tardieu will not go back until he is assured of a "firm proposition that can be taken under serious consideration."

France's attitude has suddenly changed. Le Temps, official Quai d'Orsay organ, tonight says that, of course, the foreign minister and the minister of the navy are going back to London, so nobody can say that France was absent when "pourparlers were resumed."

"The French delegation will go the limit to sucure success for the conference and it is not we who would make the gesture toward a break, which some reproach her as having done already," it comments.

MacDonald Gets Scolding.

Prime Minister MacDonald comes in for a lot of hard words and Le Temps hints at bad faith somewhere between London and Rome. After promising the French he would use his influence with Premier Mussolini the British prime minister "either changed his mind or his efforts were not the sort that could have met with success, the paper says. Italian press claims that Mr. MacDonald is all for Italy's pretentions for parity are carefully noted here. Of course this is probably propaganda, suggests Le Temps.

"But," it says, "from the moment Mr. MacDonald decided he did not want to intervene or did not succeed with Italy, it would not be reasonable to expect precise results from the conversations, which were very cordial between Jacques-Louis Dumesnil, Francois Pietri, and Dino Grandi yesterday."

ITALO-FRANCO ROW

BY HENRY WALES.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, March 22.—Vital, deep-rooted political issues of momentous importance to Europe generally and France particularly are responsible for the deadlock over parity with Italy, which deadlocks the naval conference and threatens the complete failure of a five power treaty.

Not merely prestige alone and the distaste of being rated at a class below France among world powers prompts the Fascist government to prefer to smash the conference rather than give way. The underlying reason for Premier Mussolini's determination to insist on fullest equality with France is a territorial question.

Rome intends some day to make a formal demand for her share of the booty under the treaty of Versailles—a share of the German colonies, which Great Britain and France divided, with the exception of a few islands they gave to Japan and the little island of Yap, which they gave to the United States.

With emigration to America throttled down, Italy seeks a place in the sun for expansion and room for her increasing population and Fascist eyes are riveted on France's African holdings. Italy has already raised the question at the league of nations several times, making reservations for safeguarding its rights for the eventual formal demands at the meetings of the mandates commission. The league covenant provides for disarmament and requires the powers to justify the armaments they maintain by citing geographical necessities and requirements for national defense.

Blease Asks Report on U. S. Costs at Navy Parley

Washington, D. C., March 22.—(AP)—Asserting outside the senate chamber that he expected to show that "a lot of money is being spent and nothing accomplished," Senator Blease [Dem., S. C.] today introduced a resolution calling upon the state department for a report on the expenses of the American delegation to the London naval conference.

OLD DOC QUACK'S PEEP HOLE WORKS BUT LEGS WEAKEN

So His Foot Race with Law Ends in Cell.

Old Doc A. R. Frampton is known to the Chicago Dental society as one of Chicago's leading quack dentists. This story concerns Old Doc Frampton's peep hole, which yesterday served him well—and Old Doc Frampton's legs, which served him ill.

Old Doc Frampton always has a peep hole in his offices—a little disk over a hole through which he can look into his reception room and see who's calling. In case it is the police Old Doc Frampton slips down the back stairs.

A Thrilling Footrace.

Old Doc Frampton has such a peep hole in his offices at 1000 Belmont avenue, where he operates as the Anderson Dentists. Detective Sergeant Edward Baynes called with a warrant charging him with an attempted attack on Miss Violet White, 17 years old. When Sergt. Baynes heard the old doc slipping down the back stairs he followed and that is where Old Doc Frampton's legs fell down on him, so to speak.

As Old Doc Frampton emerged from the back stairs he heard the sergeant following and he started to run. Veteran of many a race with the police, Frampton smiled as he started to click his heels spiritedly down Belmont avenue.

One block, two blocks, three blocks, the chase went on with the sergeant shouting "Stop!" A crowd, drawing its own conclusions, joined in the hue and cry with shouts of "Stop, thief!" Finally the sergeant laid a hand on the puffing quack's shoulder and the race was over.

Girl Tells of Attack.

Old Doc Frampton was locked up last night in the Town Hall police station. Miss White, who lives at 3630 North Sacramento avenue, told the story upon which she had obtained the warrant from Judge Alfred O. Erickson.

"This man Frampton employed me as his assistant," Miss White said. "I went to work on Friday morning and he began to act queer almost immediately. In the afternoon he tricked me into sitting down in his dental chair. I screamed and fought him until another dentist came in and stopped him."

Sergt. Baynes said he would inquire whether Old Doc Frampton has a dentist's license. Officials of the Chicago Dental society said such inquiry is unnecessary. They said Frampton is not licensed to practice and that he has frequently been in trouble with the law on that account.

Entertains Women Friends at Home; Wife Gets Divorce

Mrs. Dorothy Lenore Brown, 840 Montrose avenue, yesterday won a divorce from her husband, Otto W. Brown, before Superior Judge Sabath. She charged that her husband brought his women companions home to entertain in her presence and left her when she refused to support his entertainment of other women. The Browns were married on June 30, 1926, and separated the following Nov. 27. She was represented by Attorney Irving Eisenman.

MUSSOLINI HAILS SECOND DECADE OF FASCIST RULE

Warns Black Shirts of "Young Italy's Foes."

BY DAVID DARRAH.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

ROME, March 22.—Fascism tomorrow throughout Italy celebrates the eleventh anniversary of the founding of the first "Squadristi," or armed military groups, to resist the rising wave of communistic violence. The first of these combat squads was formed in Premier Mussolini's newspaper office in Milan on March 23, 1919.

All members of the Fascist party have been ordered to turn out tomorrow in black shirts and fezes and listen to special orators who have been assigned to make speeches in every town in Italy. In Rome itself Premier Mussolini has issued orders for a big assembly to be held in Augusteum hall, where the vice secretary of the party will speak. Flags will be flown on all public buildings and all city bells will be rung from 6 o'clock tomorrow evening for half an hour.

Will Induct New Members.

In connection with the anniversary the Fascist youths who are members of the "advance guard" organizations and who have attained the age of 18 will be given Fascist cards and rifles and formally inducted into the party.

On the occasion of the anniversary Premier Mussolini issued a message to his cohorts in the party bulletin sheet. Il Duce reminds the black shirts how the little group in Milan eleven years ago has grown into a mighty black shirted horde which supplied the backbone of the new government he set up.

Calls for Further Effort.

The "black shirts," says the message, "during the eleven years of Fascism have conquered thousands of difficulties of all kinds but many more difficulties remain before us. Therefore we must impose an even more stern discipline on ourselves. Today young legionnaires stand beside old veterans. We look with calm assurance toward any developments the future offers."

Then sounding a menacing warning Il Duce declares: "The reactionary forces coalescing now against young Italy will not disturb her. Against the unanimous will of 42,000,000 people regimented under Fascism all insidious aggression and threats of attack from whatever source are doomed to failure."

The premier's message will be read by the black shirt secretaries tomorrow all over Italy, and at the same time a final tribute will be paid to the memory of Michaeli Bianchi, one of the "quadrumoirs" who led the march on Rome, who died on Feb. 3, this year.

HERTZ FAMILY OFF TODAY ON AIRPLANE TOUR OF CARIBBEAN

Miami, Fla., March 22.—[Special.]—Leaving on what is believed to be the first intercontinental air cruise taken by a family in their own plane Mr. and Mrs. John D. Hertz and their daughter, Helen, will set out early tomorrow for a swing around the Caribbean circle made famous by Lindbergh. Mr. and Mrs. Nelson Talbott of Dayton, O., will be guests of the Hertzes.

The Hertz amphibian, Three Johns, is equipped with a radio that will permit them to be in touch with the stations of the Pan American Airways at all times.

"We're just taking the women and children along and going out for a good time," Mr. Hertz said. "Just like an old time family basket picnic in the country. Any time we get tired of the trip we can come home. If we like it we don't have to come home."

The first stop will be in Havana, one night out. Tuesday will find them in Port au Prince, Haiti. After a short stay they will leave for San Juan, Porto Rico, and Jamaica. Later they fly southward to Trinidad, Curacao, and Paramaribo, in South America.

SMOKY FURNACE BRINGS FIREMEN.

A fire alarm was turned in yesterday when smoke was smelled in the Clarke building at 189 North Clark street. Firemen found that smoke from a furnace at 185 North Clark street had filled the building.

MUSSOLINI SETS UP DICTATORSHIP OVER INDUSTRIES

Fascist Board to Guide Capital and Labor.

BY DAVID DARRAH.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

ROME, March 22.—Whether Fascism's new national council of corporations, which vests Premier Mussolini with drastic economic and arbitral powers in addition to his political powers, will solve the problem of reconciling the interests of capital and labor and unifying production, is a subject of paramount concern in Italian industrial and business circles at the present time.

The national corporative council is a state organ. It might be compared, in American terms, to a sort of fusion of the American chamber of commerce and the American Federation of Labor into a body to which the powers of making economic regulations and giving advice in such matters are accorded by the state under the dictatorial surveillance of the President.

The legislation establishing this council was signed by the king this week, and the 140 members are to be selected by the end of this month. The body will be ready to function early in May.

"Individual Must Serve State."

This council represents Fascism's most revolutionary piece of legislation according to Minister of Corporations Bottani, who describes it as follows:

"In the new system the individual is not the instrument of the state, as it has been charged. But the individual must serve the state just as the state serves him. The council will have powers which the chamber of deputies never possessed nor ever thought of arrogating to itself."

The council is to be organized into seven sections, corresponding to the seven corporations under the headings of: Professions and liberal arts, industry, agriculture, commerce, land transport, sea and air transport, and banking. These sections are to have a total membership of 116. A special method of selection of these members has been provided, which will assure that they are all Fascists. These sections may be convened by Premier Mussolini, who is president of the council, singly or in several groups together.

Two Special Committees.

In addition to the seven sections made up purely of employers and employés, there have been constituted two special committes; a central corporative commission and an assembly-general. The central corporative commission is a permanent organ for directing the council's activity, and is composed of the council's chief members in whose designation Mussolini will have much to say. This committee will substitute for the general assembly when the latter is not in session, and besides, it will coördinate activities and give opinions.

Besides the above mentioned membership, all cabinet ministers, the Fascist party secretary, high permanent governmental heads, the presidents of the several Fascist institutions and associations, and ten special experts on corporativism, are members of the council, swelling the total to about 150, with Mussolini enjoying the powers of extending or restricting the number.

Has Two Chief Functions.

The council's functions are twofold. It is competent first, to hand down opinons on all economic and social matters, and second, it may make rules and regulations, acceptance of which is compulsory. Its activities will fall roughly under the following heads:

Conciliating labor disputes; regulating conditions of labor; encouraging better productive methods; establishing regional employment offices; apprenticeship; generally coördinating production.

While no safeguard against interference with private initiative is offered, this guaranty is said to be provided in the original Fascist labor charter.

Twins Must Wear Labels, So Cops Can Tell 'Em Apart

Kansas City, Kas., March 22.—[U. P.]—Harry and Joseph Russell, 16 year old twins, must wear silk ribbons of different color in their coat lapels, Judge Lee Judy ordered today. Harry had been forbidden to drive the family automobile following arrest for speeding. The penalty did not apply to Joseph, but patrolmen could not tell which of the boys was driving.

TRANSIT PARLEY DRAFTS MERGER SECURITIES PLAN

Bankers Make Progress, Wetmore Says.

BY OSCAR HEWITT.

Frank O. Wetmore of the bankers' committee appointed to devise a financial plan to reorganize and consolidate the surface and elevated lines gave it as his opinion yesterday that "substantial progress is being made."

He expressed this view after a three hour conference in his office at the First National bank, attended by the bankers, investment experts, and officials of both roads. He subsequently indicated that a large amount of work is necessary before a complete reorganization scheme is formulated, and that still more time will be consumed before an assent to it can be obtained from the 27 different varieties of security holders.

Statistics Due Tomorrow.

Not all of the data have been compiled. One set of statistics is to be turned out tomorrow by George W. Pearson of the Continental Illinois bank, Frank M. Gordon of the First National bank, C. F. Clarke of Halsey, Stuart & Co., and Charles E. Thompson of the elevated roads, all of whom attended the conference yesterday. In addition there were present Harry L. Stuart of the investment house bearing his name, President Eugene M. Stevens of the Continental Illinois bank, Leonard A. Busby and Guy Richardson of the surface lines, and Britton I. Budd of the elevated roads.

The statements of Mr. Wetmore, who was spokesman for the group yesterday, threw more light upon the status of the bankers' task than has been given the public since the bankers issued their original statement of March 6. They then referred to a proposed plan and said that an accord had been reached by them on all points concerned, except with reference to first mortgage bonds of the surface lines. Later before the council transit committee they spoke of a "set of principles" on which an agreement by the bankers had been reached to form the basis of a financial plan.

Agree on Securities.

It was learned yesterday that they have more than a set of principles. They haven't, however, a complete plan on which they are willing to appeal to the security holders of the present lines, although they have agreed upon the major features of a tentative reorganization plan. They have agreed upon the number and kinds of securities to be issued by the new company and their relative standing in the financial structure.

The bankers yesterday discussed the tentative plan from the standpoint of fair treatment of various securities in the organization of the new company.

This summary of the status of the financial plan is also the view of Albert W. Harris as expressed to THE TRIBUNE correspondent yesterday at Pasadena, Cal. He said:

"The situation is this, so far as I am concerned: There has been no definite plan submitted to me for approval or disapproval, as yet. The men who were out here (Frank M. Gordon and George W. Pearson) merely asked me what I thought of this or that point. The subject was taken up as items. Nothing was called to my attention as being a plan to cover the whole situation. However, I did understand they were working one out."

Plan Still Indefinite.

Asked whether he considered the financial plan in such shape that it warranted his return to Chicago, Mr. Harris said:

"Some of them sent me a wire two days ago saying they were working out some ideas and that they would telegraph me when they thought it time for me to return to Chicago. They have not wired me. I don't want to go back until something definite has been worked out; but I am ready and willing to go as soon as the proposition is made definite.

"When they tell me they have something on which I can work, I shall be back in Chicago."

Attorney Henry S. Robbins wrote a letter yesterday to Aldermen McDonough and Bowler of the local transportation committee cautioning them to compel the bankers to provide for series No. 1 of participating certificates of the west and north side surface lines. Robbins is attorney for the protective committee, headed by Orville E. Babcock handling these certificates. Mr. Robbins said that the city compelled the companies in 1907 to make provision for these interests.

OUTLOOK BRIGHT IN ST. LAWRENCE SEAWAY FIGHT

Henry J. Allen Says Victory Looms.

Detroit, Mich., March 22.—[Special.]—Senator Henry J. Allen of Kansas, president of the Great Lakes-St. Lawrence Tidewater association, declared in a statement read to the council of the association here today that supporters of the St. Lawrence seaway have all but accomplished the task to which they set themselves ten years ago. Because the senator was unable to attend, A. O. Moreaux of Minnesota presided.

Delegates to the conference, including several governors and many other state officials, met to elect officers and discuss what they believe to be the last phases of the fight to open the lake ports to ocean trade.

"In the United States a congress in sympathy with our project and a President is committed to it," Senator Allen's statement declared. "We now aren't only the official action of the Canadian government to set the building of the project on its way.

"This annual meeting occurs at the most hopeful moment the association has known. Developments in Canada during the last two weeks indicate that it is entirely reasonable to expect the early appointment of commissioners on the part of the dominion government to work with United States commissioners on the necessary agreements that must precede the actual work on the St. Lawrence seaway."

Col. William Nelson Pelouze, who heads the Illinois delegation, declared Chicago leaders and Gov. Emmerson of Illinois are very enthusiastic about the proposed seaway.

"We are preparing for terminals now to be ready when Chicago is a seaport," he said. "Plans for some of these are under way. The Illinois river waterway will be in operation in two years, it is expected. This and the St. Lawrence seaway will allow shipping to Europe from points on the Mississippi river."

DEMANDS VOTE IN OAK PARK ON MAGISTRATE JOB

A petition for a writ of mandamus to force the village officials of Oak Park to hold an election for police magistrate on April 1 was filed yesterday in the Circuit court by J. Edward Jones, candidate for the position. A hearing is scheduled for March 27. Attorney Robert E. Cantwell Jr., representing the village, said he would oppose the move.

The petition asks that the names of Jones and that of James M. Feron, former police magistrate, both be placed on the ballot. Feron was arraigned yesterday on charges of embezzlement of $15,480 in fines, but the case was continued to April 1 with the indication that another continuance would be granted then because that date is primary day.

Attorney Cantwell upheld the legality of the action of the village board in abolishing the office of police magistrate after charges of embezzlement had been made against Feron.

BYRD SHIP OFF FROM DUNEDIN FOR NEW YORK

DUNEDIN, N. Z., March 23.—(AP)—[Sunday.]—Homeward bound with members of Rear Admiral Richard E. Byrd's antarctic expedition, the bark City of New York sailed today for the American metropolis whose name it proudly bears. The steamer Eleanor Bolling will follow in a week with others of the expedition and Byrd himself will leave a few days later to rejoin his ships and comrades at Pepeete, Island of Tahiti, for the voyage through the Panama canal to New York. Byrd will tarry only long enough to finish the business of the expedition. Two months must elapse before the explorers reach New York.

Bernt Balchen and Harold June, who accompanied Byrd on the south polar flight, were on board the City of New York today. So were many others of the band of 42 men who for 14 months braved the hardship of cold and storm at Little America, their camp at the great barrier of ice massed about the polar realm.

FOR THE CHILDREN

MOTHERS know that milk is one of the best foods for children. Not every mother understands that one of the reasons for its supremacy as food is that it's Nature's perfect emulsion.

SCOTT'S EMULSION

is emulsified cod-liver oil with its wealth of vitamins and most people digest it as easily as they do milk.

When your children need cod-liver oil—give them the form prepared for easy digestion—Scott's Emulsion.

RADICAL IDEAS OF WIFE CRUEL, DIVORCE RULING

High Iowa Court Upholds Husband's Plea.

A divorce decree granted a husband on the charge that public utterances made by his wife in support of radical views impaired his health was upheld yesterday by the Supreme court of Iowa. The decision ended an eight year court battle between Dr. William P. Bossenberger, a veterinarian of Williams, Ia., and Mrs. Florence O. Bossenberger, Chicago medical social service worker, 2431 Smalley court.

The Bossenbergers were married in Chicago, June 30, 1914, while he was completing his studies here and she was engaged in nursing. She is a member of an old Boston family, a member of the D. A. R., and active in the American Red Cross. After their marriage they moved to Williams, a town of 600.

Enters Iowa Politics.

According to the divorce pleading, Mrs. Bossenberger soon alienated the sympathy of the conservative Iowa community by a zealous campaign for the emancipation of women and by the expression of views considered as socialistic. She took a strong part in the work of the W. C. T. U., and entered into politics. During the war she widened the breach with her fellow townspeople principally of German stock, by accusing several members of leading families of draft dodging.

The Bossenbergers separated Sept. 26, 1920, by agreement and she returned to Chicago. On Oct. 22, 1922, Bossenberger filed a divorce complaint in Hamilton county, Ia., on a charge of desertion. This action was dropped and a second one begun Nov. 16, 1923, on the same charge. This also was dropped after she made several appearances to contest the suit.

Separate Second Time.

They were reunited when Bossenberger came to Chicago and persuaded her to return with him on Aug. 20, 1925. They separated a second time Feb. 1, 1927, and he sued for divorce the following March, alleging desertion and the fact that his wife's outspoken belief in socialism amounted to inhuman treatment, such as to "endanger his life," in the language of the Iowa statute.

He won a decree in Hamilton county. Pending her appeal to the Supreme court, through Attorney Lloyd A. Faxon of Chicago, Bossenberger remarried, the former wife charges.

"His people and the town thought I was too advanced," Mrs. Bossenberger said yesterday. "When they turned against me, my husband sided with them. He accused me of being a rebel in my thoughts and thought reading was nonsense. The whole trouble can be traced to corn-fed morality."

SWANSON JOINS FIGHT; ANSWERS MRS. McCORMICK

She Rips Deneen Anew in Senatorial Battle.

night he expected an endeavor would be made to obtain votes by 'playing on passions and racial animosities growing out of antagonisms developed in a thousand years in Europe.'

"The senator has a mental picture of poor old Father Dearborn, enraged and frenzied, pouring out his wrath against a cowering Europe and threatening to drive her out into the storm. But the rescuer is near. The senator is rushing into Chicago. He will arrive in the nick of time, hoarse, and breathless, and will exclaim, 'Let that lady go; here are the papers.' Then he will thrust the Root formula into Old Man Dearborn's hand and turn to lay a soothing ice cold hand on the brow of Europe."

Stresses Crowe Support.

State's Attorney Swanson in opening his statement, which was sent out by Deneen headquarters, dwelt upon the indorsement of Mrs. McCormick by his predecessor in office, Robert E. Crowe.

"From the thrusts of Mrs. McCormick at the state's attorney," it read, "an erroneous inference is being drawn that perhaps I am her opponent for senatorial nomination. The competent, faithful public servants who comprise my staff demand as of right the publication of the truth, regardless of Mrs. McCormick's opinion of me, the probable motive for her effort to make me an issue being readily seen in her indorsement by my predecessor.

"Because of Senator Deneen's outstanding eight year record as state's attorney I was with good reason receptive to advice from him. He counseled me to be impartial and vigorous in prosecution of crime. Aside from that he has never intimated what indictments should or should not be procured or what should be done with reference to any case.

Refers to the Records.

"In the performance of my task I am making for the redemption of Chicago and putting 'crime on the go to the penitentiary' at the fastest rate reflected by the records for at least 20 years.

"Persons charged with crime are obtaining speedier trials than ever. Cases are being disposed of within a shorter time subsequent to the return of indictments than in any other recent period of the court's history. And I challenge Mrs. McCormick or her most recent indorser—my predecessor as state's attorney—to refute this assertion from the record.

"The records of the clerk of the Criminal court show that when I became state's attorney there were 1,936 indictments pending, a heritage from the former incumbent of this office. At the end of my first year there were only 1,247 pending indictments. At the end of February, 1930, only 1,066 indictments were pending—in a word, my staff, instead of piling up indictments before the courts, have reduced the 2,000 indictments originally found by them on the trial calendars to an approximate 1,000."

Prosecutor Tells Policies.

"My policly has been not to be satisfied with exemplary results in prosecuting ordinary crimes, but to employ all the energies, lawful powers and efforts of the office to strike at organized crime at the source.

"In pursuance of that end I have achieved unusual results in curbing gambling syndicates—and, in one instance, that of the slot machine ring, actually have destroyed it entirely.

"For ten years no one in Chicago had been convicted of bombing. Of the beginning my office has made the Employer's Association of Chicago said in its official publication, Employers' News, for March:

"'Despite great obstacles the state's attorney's office since the election of John A. Swanson has steadfastly continued its prosecution of bombmakers and throwers. There have been seven convictions to date; four of them in the first two months of 1930. Anthony Di Giovanni, Anthony Gioni, and Walter Kiley were convicted last summer; Harlan Brown and Nathan Vehon in January, 1930, and Steve Fricke and Mike Caselli in February.'

"Who Threw Brickbats?"

The "who-threw-the brickbats" issue in the 50th ward caused much glowering yesterday between Nettelhorst and Mellin partisans. Supporters of Louis Nettelhorst, the Brundage entry for ward committeeman and probate clerk, challenged the followers of Ald. Curtis F. Mellin, rival for committeeman, to name the men who threw bricks through the windows of a Mellin meeting Friday night. Some of the Mellin men told the police they recognized the brick throwers as Nettelhorst followers.

"It's the squawk of a defeated candidate," said Mr. Nettelhorst. "At the time the Mellin meeting was on our crowd was holding a meeting around the corner, at which the speakers were Edward J. Brundage, Thomas Wallace, and Congressman Carl Chindblom. We indorsed Mrs. McCormick a week ago and the Mellin camp is now climbing the band wagon. They falsely say they saw some of our fellows throw the bricks, and we demand they give the names."

A BIG-TIME COUNTRY.

The growth of urban communities in this country is the serial story told in successive census publications. What the new census will add to the record is uncertain only in the sense that the figures are not known. No one supposes that the tendency toward the concentration of population has ceased.

In 1920 there were sixty-eight cities in the United States with a population of 100,000 or more. The population of these sixty-eight cities totaled more than 27,000,000. Even in 1920, if the number of people living in the suburbs of these larger cities had been added to the total of residents of the cities proper, rather more than a third, if somewhat less than half, of the nation's population would have been shown as living in direct contact with what may be called metropolitan civilization. No doubt the new census will show more than 68 cities of 100,000 inhabitants, as well as an increase in the populations of the 68 cities in the 1920 list. Likewise it is known that the suburbs of the larger cities, the manufacturing and residential satellite towns, have enjoyed a phenomenal growth in this last decade. We shall not be at all surprised to learn, when the new figures are published, that half the nation lives in contact with metropolitan life as it is lived in the larger cities of the land.

The use of the word "metropolitan" in this sense may be somewhat inaccurate, including, as we do, cities such as Akron, O.; Scranton, Pa., and Fall River, Mass., in the list of metropolises. We use the word because it emphasizes the distinction between these larger cities on the one hand and the smaller towns and the country on the other. We have known for a long time that the trend in population is away from the country, but we have paid less attention to the trend as between big cities and small ones, yet that is a trend of at least equal importance.

Broadly speaking, there is not much difference in political and social outlook as between farmer and villager. There is a difference in these particulars between city man and small-town man, and that difference persists despite the radio, the automobile, and the hard roads. In so far as these differences are breaking down, the small town resident is adopting the metropolitan outlook. While there is much to be said against the life of the large cities the balance is all in favor of it as against the older provincialism and narrowness. We regard it as a most fortunate circumstance for the welfare of the country that half of its population enjoys superior schools, superior libraries and art museums, to mention only the most obvious advantages of metropolitan life. There has been a long struggle in this country between the narrowness of the 17th century and the broad tolerance of later eras. The growth of the larger cities promises victory for the new day.

THE FIGHT ON FANATICISM IN INDIANA.

Indiana Republicanism has still some housecleaning to do. The domination of the Anti-Saloon league and of its ally, the Ku Klux Klan, has been greatly weakened, but its remnants are not negligible. They should be destroyed at the coming primary so thoroughly that the party can enter the election campaign with a clear conscience and a restored pride in the party.

This is a job for the self-respecting Republican voters, not for politicians skilful in carrying water on both shoulders. There is stalwart leadership which defied the fanaticism which, in league with corruption, shamed Indiana and Indiana Republicanism. The storm center in this campaign is the candidacy of Mr. Justice Willoughby, running for reflection to the Supreme court. Men of proved devotion to free government, to constitutional rights, to American traditions of toleration, like former Attorney General Arthur L. Gilliom, are leaders worthy to be followed, and the issue presented by Justice Willoughby's candidacy is as clear and important as American politics has developed at any time. That issue is simply whether the government of Indiana is a government of laws, whether the justice shall be based upon the law and the evidence or be dictated by any political force which passion, impulse, bigotry, or political corruption has momentarily raised to power.

The régime in Indiana of the klan and the Anti-Saloon league brought not merely the credit of the Republican party but the credit of Indiana lower than it ever had been before in the history of the state. A commonwealth rightly proud of its history and of the character of its people found its least intelligent voters organized in an alliance of fanaticism and unscrupulous politics which seized office, inflicted tyrannous laws upon the state, and attempted to ride roughshod over the constitutional rights of its citizens. Misgovernment, waste of public money, and a régime of insolent bigotry have roused the public conscience. The disillusionment of the best citizenship has arrived. The duty of Republicans to shake off what remains of the influences which have shamed the party and misgoverned the state is paramount. If they will not do so, we believe the citizenship of Indiana, putting principle above party when party has repudiated principle, will end Republican rule in the state. True Republicanism is not the servant of the Anti-Saloon league and the Ku Klux Klan. It is men like Justice Willoughby who represent Republicanism, and if the Republicanism of Indiana does not realize this it is time to dig its grave.

RECENT AMERICAN DIPLOMACY.

American diplomacy since the war has been marked almost without exception by a passion for conciliation and concession and by a distrust of publicity, two characteristics strangely out of keeping with American national morale and mentality. At home and in their private affairs the American people are not fearful or apologetic, yet their representatives in the conduct of our foreign relations can neither withstand some strange lure toward international experimentation nor enter it with any apparent respect for the justice of their cause. Our delegation at London has had its hat in its hand ever since it left home, and all we hear from them concerns what concessions they have made or refused to make. From the historic fiasco of Wilson's bargaining at Paris, through the Washington conference to the present negotiations, the diplomacy of the United States can seldom be justified save upon the pacifist assumption that of all nations the American can least trust itself to be strong and that the first step toward world peace is to diminish that strength.

We cannot accuse Woodrow Wilson of such a doctrine, for his policy was founded upon an almost insolent belief in America's fitness to admonish and discipline and elevate the world. In that confidence he proposed to overrule his own party prophet and founder, Jefferson, and enter into the political complex of Europe with the determination to sublimate its nature and bring about a new era under the moral hegemony of America, backed if needed by an "incomparable" navy. A Republican President was elected in an overwhelming reaction from Wilson's transcendentalism, but neither he nor his deputies or their successors have related their policies or conduct in foreign affairs to that demonstration of the nation's instinct and will. They have been willing to sacrifice the strength which Wilson would have conserved and exerted without freeing themselves from the experimentation which his faith encouraged. They have been weak where he was strong without being strong where he was weak.

Mr. Coolidge, Secretary Kellogg, and our representatives at the Geneva conference in 1927 interrupted the descent of our policy, but the stay was temporary. At Washington we had adopted the unique tactics of surrendering our advantage at the opening of negotiations expecting to reach through our altruism the objects we might have obtained by exchange. This was the only instance in history of the straight application of the favorite fallacy of pacifism, that altruistic example is contagious if not compelling. It made Mr. Balfour an earl and should have assured tablets in Westminster abbey for our delegates, but its results were accepted by our people chiefly because they were not examined and their practical implications understood. But our experiment in altruism was realistically appreciated by the other powers, which accelerated their naval building while we enjoyed our moral self-approval and stopped building.

With this experience as a background, the management of our interests at the present conference is strikingly significant. It is most significant, it seems to us, in its fear of publicity. Is that fear justified by the fact that American opinion, save that of the class felicitously called by a French journalist "the élite," is profoundly opposed to further concessions and expects of American representatives a resolute and self-respecting protection of American interests in sea power? Is it justified by the fact that our diplomacy at London is influenced by the sense of moral and social inferiority which marks our self-appointed élite rather than by the judgment of the main body of American opinion?

Whatever the explanation, we think no consequences which can emerge from the naval conference—inasmuch as its agreements, if any, are subject to the revision or refusal of the senate—are as important as the release of American policy in foreign affairs from the influence of the self-appointed élite, the pacifist or internationalist doctrinaire, the international banker, and the social snob, organized and voluble influences that have interposed between the nation and its foreign affairs and presented the extraordinary paradox of a representative government that does not represent the tradition, the conviction, or the vital interest of the nation which sustains it.

Editorial of the Day

IN INDIANA.

[Fort Wayne, Ind., Journal-Gazette.]

It is our settled belief that if at this time a general referendum were held on prohibition in Indiana the drys would carry the state decisively. Yet in no practical sense is Indiana dry. Without reference to parties or to politics, those who study evidences and not sentiments must be persuaded that Indiana, despite the vaunting professions of the drys and a prohibition code generally reputed to be the most rigorous established by any commonwealth in the Union, is not a dry state, save in narrow respect to the boast and the popular resolve that what is established shall remain, notwithstanding its failure and the welter of hypocrisies upon which it rests.

There is no day in which does not come from some part of the state—in most days from more or less numerous parts—circumstantial narratives of formidable violations of the dry laws. The point to be noted is that the onset of authority against these conditions proceeds from the federal and not the state government. Indiana's Draconian liquor code is more or less a dead letter. It is invoked only to deal with "local situations" of a petty sort and with mild offenses by bootleggers who travel alone and have little relation to the real traffic in contraband.

If the people of Indiana who want prohibition do not know their own conditions then they are neither readers of newspapers nor partakers of the common intelligence. It seems to be a devotion to the shadow of an ideal rather than a striving for the substance of a thing they worship and will not part with. We doubt that it would be possible to abrogate any detail of the Wright law, yet most details of that code are futilities so far as they may be regarded as having made Indiana a "dry state."

LOAVES AND FISHES

After these things Jesus went away to the other side of the sea of Galilee, which is the sea of Tiberias. And a great multitude followed him, because they beheld the signs which he did on them that were sick. And Jesus went up into the mountain, and there he sat with his disciples. Now the passover, the feast of the Jews, was at hand. Jesus therefore lifting up his eyes, and seeing that a great multitude cometh unto him, saith unto Philip, "Whence are we to buy bread, that these may eat?" And this he said to prove him; for he himself knew what he would do. Philip answered him, "Two hundred shillings' worth of bread is not sufficient for them, that every one may take a little." One of his disciples, Andrew, Simon Peter's brother, saith unto him, "There is a lad here, who hath five barley loaves and two fishes; but what are these among so many?" Jesus said, "Make the people sit down." Now there was much grass in the place. So the men sat down, in number about five thousand.

Jesus therefore took the loaves, and, having given thanks, he distributed to them that were set down; likewise also of the fishes as much as they would. And when they were filled he saith unto his disciples, "Gather up the broken pieces which remain over, that nothing be lost." So they gathered them up and filled twelve baskets with broken pieces from the five barley loaves, which remained over unto them that had eaten. When therefore the people saw the sign which he did, they said, "This is of a truth the prophet that cometh into the world." Jesus therefore perceiving that they were about to come and take him by force, to make him king, withdrew again into the mountain himself alone.

And when the evening came his disciples went down unto the sea; and they entered into a boat, and were going over the sea unto Capernaum. And it was now dark, and Jesus had not yet come to them. And the sea was rising by reason of a great wind that blew. When therefore they had rowed about five and twenty or thirty furlongs, they behold Jesus walking on the sea, and drawing nigh unto the boat; and they were afraid. But he saith unto them, "It is I; be not afraid." They were willing therefore to receive him into the boat; and straightway the boat was at the land whither they were going.

On the morrow the multitude that stood on the other side of the sea saw that there was no other boat there, save one, and that Jesus entered not with his disciples into the boat, but that his disciples went away alone (howbeit there came boats from Tiberias nigh unto the place where they ate the bread after the Lord had given thanks); when the multitude therefore saw that Jesus was not there, neither his disciples, they themselves got into the boats, and came to Capernaum, seeking Jesus.

And when they found him on the other side of the sea, they said unto him, "Rabbi, when camest thou hither?" Jesus answered them and said, "Verily, verily, I say unto you, Ye seek me, not because ye saw signs, but because ye ate of the loaves, and were filled. Work not for the food which perisheth, but for the food which abideth unto eternal life, which the Son of man shall give unto you; for him the Father, even God, hath sealed." They said therefore unto him, "What must we do, that we may work the works of God?" Jesus answered and said unto them, "This is the work of God, that ye believe on him whom he hath sent."

They said therefore unto him, "What then doest thou for a sign, that we may see, and believe thee? What workest thou? Our fathers ate the manna in the wilderness; as it is written, He gave them bread out of heaven to eat." Jesus therefore said unto them, "Verily, verily, I say unto you, It was not Moses that gave you the bread out of heaven; but my Father giveth you the true bread out of heaven. For the bread of God is that which cometh down out of heaven, and giveth life unto the world." They said therefore unto him, "Lord, evermore give us this bread." Jesus said unto them, "I am the bread of life; he that cometh to me shall not hunger, and he that believeth on me shall never thirst. But I said unto you, that ye have seen me, and yet believe not. All that which the Father giveth me shall come unto me; and him that cometh to me I will in no wise cast out. For I am come down from heaven, not to do mine own will, but the will of him that sent me. And this is the will of him that sent me, that of all that which he hath given me I should lose nothing, but should raise it up at the last day. For this is the will of my Father, that every one that beholdeth the Son, and believeth on him, should have eternal life; and I will raise him up at the last day."

The Jews therefore murmured concerning him, because he said, "I am the bread which came down out of heaven." And they said, "Is not this Jesus, the son of Joseph, whose father and mother we know? How doth he now say, 'I am came down out of heaven?'" Jesus answered and said unto them, "Murmur not among yourselves. No man can come to me, except the Father that sent me draw him; and I will raise him up in the last day. It is written in the prophets, 'And they shall be taught of God.' Every one that hath heard from the Father, and hath learned, cometh unto me. Not that any man hath seen the Father, save he that is from God, he hath seen the Father. Verily, verily, I say unto you, He that believeth hath eternal life. I am the bread of life. Your fathers ate the manna in the wilderness, and they died. This is the bread which cometh down out of heaven, that a man may eat thereof, and not die. I am the living bread which came down out of heaven; if any man eat of this bread, he shall live forever; yea and the bread which I will give is my flesh, for the life of the world."

MY PRAYER.

Great God, I asked thee for no meaner pelf
Than that I may not disappoint myself;
That in my action I may soar as high
As I can now discern with this clear eye.
And next in value, which Thy kindness lends,
That I may greatly disappoint my friends,
Howe'er they think or hope that it may be,
They may not dream how Thou'st distinguished me.

That my weak hand may equal my firm faith,
And my life practice more than my tongue saith;
That my low conduct may not show,
Nor my relenting lines,
That I Thy purpose did not know,
Or overrated Thy designs.

WATER AND TYPHOID.

In some places the regular water supply is supplemented by a reserve supply for use in the case of fire or other emergency. In some instances the regular supply is used for drinking, but the fire nozzles and washing hose are fed from other sources. Along the seaboard this manufacturing supply may consist of sea water, but inland it is apt to be polluted water which does not reveal its danger by taste, smell, or appearance.

Where there is a secondary water supply it is generally carried in separate pipes, but here and there are pipes which permit the two supplies. These pipes are called cross connections. These cross connections are so apt to get out of order and to permit polluted water to leak into the drinking supply that health departments have always held them to be unsafe and have tried various methods of eliminating the danger caused by them.

The latest report on the subject was one made one year ago by a committee of ten distinguished sanitary engineers. They represented the New England Water Works association. They got together accounts of forty-five epidemics of typhoid fever experienced by cities in the United States and Canada in the last twenty-five years. The number of cases of typhoid ran into the thousands and of water borne typhoid there were many more. They added seven epidemics due to auxiliary intakes and bypasses. The report gave the reports of legal proceedings which established responsibility and awarded damages in nine cases. It also gave an analysis of the procedures to control cross connections adopted by law or rule in thirty-one states.

The committee recommended to health departments the following methods:

Adoption of laws and rules prohibiting cross connections in new installations and requiring the elimination of existing cross connections as soon as possible.

A survey of all municipalities and all industrial plants to discover where there are cross connections and to have in the department the record of all such.

And, lastly, periodic inspection of all cross connection installations to see that valves are not sticking, pipes rusting, packing wearing out, and leaks occurring.

The association recommends further that no cross connection be permitted with a water supply that is bacteriologically unsafe. They say that the state health department shall specify the type of check valve to be used in the cross connection.

At the present time a method of treating polluted secondary supplies by chlorine to make a double water supply is under trial. The committee is watching these installations closely, but at the time of their report could not agree on indorsing the method.

INFLAMMATION OF NAVEL.

C. A. writes: 1. What causes inflammation of the navel?
2. Can it be cured?
3. Is the condition serious?

REPLY.

1. Lack of cleanliness; infection.
2. Yes.
3. No.

SKIN IS POISONED.

Mrs. R. E. writes: Once a month and sometimes twice my hands, especially my right one, break out with tiny water blisters, accompanied with much itching. What can cause it? I thought it might be from dish water. Can it be prevented?

REPLY.

Your trouble is due to exposure of your skin to something which poisons it. That something may be dish water, dish grease, or soap. It can be prevented by keeping your hands out of whatever causes it or by wearing rubber gloves.

WARTS CAN BE BURNED OFF.

K. L. F. writes: I have a wart on my forefinger which has been there for several months. It is rather large and gets sore sometimes. I would like to know what would remove it.

REPLY.

As a rule a wart can be burned off with a hot needle or with caustic acid or alkali. Physicians burn them off with an electric spark or needle.

CARS PARKED IN ALLEY.

Chicago, March 9.—[Friend of the People.]—Can anything be done about the automobiles parked in the alley behind my garage? We have complained about this to the Fillmore police, but nothing was done. My tenant, annoyed by the parked cars obstructing the entry, took his car to another garage and mine has been vacant. Since my taxes have gone up 50 per cent, the little we get from the garage rent helps.

Patrolman Maurice Stack, day duty, reports on his visits to the above he found no autos parked in rear of above number or in alley.

Patrolman John Jacobs, middle watch, reports that he visited the above on March 8, 1930, at 6:15 p. m. and 10:15 p. m., and found no cars parked in alley.

Post men have been instructed to continue to pay strict attention to the above complaint and to issue summonses to all owners of cars found parked in above alley.

BANKRUPTCY AND GARNISHMENT.

Is there a limit to the time a case can be continued without being called into court? 4. How much does it cost to file bankruptcy? O. W.

1. Presumably the garnishment was within the preference period and, hence, the wages tied up should be turned over to the trustee to be distributed to the creditors. 2. See 1. 3. There is no one limit applicable to all cases. 4. Depends largely on the attorney whom you employ.

1. If there has been no court order, then about all that we could say is that he can quit when the facts are such as to render it improbable that a court would, in the exercise of proper discretion, force him to make payments.

2. If there were a court order, his obligation would depend on the wording of the order. TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

NEW YORK.—The Tribune's Washington correspondent says: "A senator, just from the front, says it is Gen. Grant's opinion that Richmond will be evacuated within ten days." The World's correspondent at Washington says: "Fresh rumors are received that the rebels are about to evacuate Richmond. It is thought the great battle will take place within a few days."

WHEELING.—Gen. Kelly arrived at Cumberland from Richmond. He reports a great panic in the rebel capital last Sunday. The city was filled with rumors of the approach of Sheridan and the greatest alarm prevailed. Flour is worth $1,200 a barrel in Richmond. Gen. Kelly sent out to buy some apples while in prison and got ten for $20.

CAIRO.—A New Orleans dispatch of March 17 says that Gen. Canby is now near Mobile and that the grand attack on the city is certain to be made within a few days.

NEW YORK.—The Tribune's Beaufort, N. C., special of the 19th says: "Sherman's advance is at Goldsboro. As they left Fayetteville the advance encountered the rebel rear guard and drove it until they came up with the main column. There was no other fighting."

CHICAGO. — George Steele, ever since 1837 identified with Chicago's interests, died at his home on Michigan avenue, near Madison street, at the age of 68. In company with Hiram Norton in 1837 he erected cement mills at Lockport, became a contractor on the Illinois and Michigan canal and built the Sag feeder. He came to Chicago in 1841. For two years he was president of the Board of Trade.

BLOEMFONTEIN.—President Kruger issued a proclamation annexing the Orange Free State to the Transvaal, but President Steyn of the Free State at once issued a counter proclamation declaring the Free State intact.

LONDON.—News of the relief of Mafeking, so anxiously awaited in London for the last ten days, fails to materialize, although there have been rumors all night that the besieged town is free. Fighting was reported near the town on March 20 and at that time it was safe. The report from Kroonstadt, Orange Free State, via Pretoria, that the Boers under command of Gen. Olivier had defeated the British troops under Gen. Gatacre near Bethi Bethulie, is not believed here.

NEW YORK.—Close on the heels of the collapse of Harper Bros. comes the downfall of the house of D. Appleton & Co., second only to Harper's in seniority as a publishing house. J. Hampton Dougherty was appointed receiver for the Appleton company, the liabilities of which are set at $1,000,000.

NEW YORK.—The grand jury indicted Olga Nethersole, Hamilton Revelle, Theodore Moss, and Marcus R. Mayer for presenting "Sapho" in a "lewd, indecent, obscene, filthy, scandalous, and disgusting manner."

VIENNA.—Crown Princess Stephanie was wedded to Count Elemer Lonyay in Miremare, near Trieste, in the castle built for Archduke Ferdinand and afterwards occupied by Emperor Maximilian of Mexico.

CHICAGO.—Mrs. E. C. Spinney, 4007 Drexel boulevard, announces the marriage of her daughter, Miss Lou Channing Spinney, to Guy Rolin Knickerbocker on March 21.

CHICAGO.—A. Borealis, prominent in solar circles, was a visitor in our terrestial midst last night, his mischievous mission consisting in cascading us with a few trillion electrons, which not only impaired telegraph and telephone service all over the country but caused Chicago to become afflicted with gooseneck from gazing at the stars.

AIX LA CHAPELLE.—Government artillery has been brought into action at some points in the Ruhr coal basin, near the zone occupied by the allies, according to advices received here. Bochum, which was in the hands of the communists, has been recaptured by the reichswehr. Government troops have been forced to evacuate Breslau. Fighting continued in Leipsic.

OLYMPIA, Wash. — The suffrage amendment to the federal constitution was ratified by the Washington legislature, the 35th state to ratify. One more is needed to make the amendment effective, and Delaware is in doubt, according to dispatches.

WASHINGTON.—The selection of Henry Morgenthau to be ambassador to Mexico is expected to be announced soon from the White House.

CHICAGO.—John Fletcher, a "dark horse" candidate put into the field at almost the eleventh hour, was elected president of the Union League club, defeating the Rev. John Timothy Stone, pastor of the Fourth Presbyterian church, the candidate on the "regular" ticket, by 13 votes. Mr. Fletcher is vice president of the Fort Dearborn National bank.

A GOOD LOSER.

Batavia, Ill., March 13.—Although one of the 3,749 contestants who failed to secure any of the prizes offered in the 500 word history contest, I want to thank THE TRIBUNE for inaugurating the contest and at the same time congratulate the winners. It goes without saying that I sympathize with the losers, for I know how it is myself. But apart from all personal considerations, the contest was well worth while, in setting nearly 4,000 individuals to scrutinizing the important facts in our history. It may be that among this large number some one may repeat the experience of E. A. Freeman, who, as a student, was unsuccessful in a contest on the subject of the Norman Conquest. His failure to win the prize determined him to master the subject, and he became in consequence the recognized authority on that period of history.

I consider the recent contest one of the best ever offered. Keeping the man in the street in mind, I felt, in eliminating here and there, as Dickens did when he killed off little Nell in the pages of "Old Curiosity Shop." Of one thing all of us must be convinced, that 500 words are not sufficient to do the subject justice. Limitation of words is harder than limitation of armaments. About all that could be done was to outline the forces at work in our history, and this the two papers have done. I found it rather easy to win one of the prizes in the President contest, but this was a more difficult proposition.

THE TRIBUNE put up the money and laid down the conditions and is satisfied with the award. But the reactions from the public do not coincide with that of the judges, and the criticisms are shrewd, pertinent, and valuable. Some enterprising publisher ought to offer a prize for the shortest, most graphic, interesting history of the United States, yet comprehensive enough to put in the hands of immigrants and busy people. After all, the dates of outstanding events in our history will be about all that passers-by will read on that mountain side out west. The contestants are quite agreed that it is easier to make history than it is to write it. Caesar was the only man who could do both, but while he was trying to prove that the pen was mightier than the sword Brutus pinked him. Let us all be thankful that history does not give us hysteria.

JOHN NORRIS HALL.

POINTING WITH PRIDE.

Chicago, March 7.—Although I am only a humble citizen, it is clear to me that much of the recent criticism of the Hoover administration is not entirely fair. The Democratic senators and some of the great newspapers, in making their criticisms of the record of the first year of the administration, did not hesitate to state fully the shortcomings and the failures of the Republicans, but they were strangely reticent regarding some of the notable accomplishments of the party. For instance, in all the criticisms I read there was no mention whatever of the fact that many sections of the country are enjoying splendid spring-like weather, with the flowers blooming beautifully and the little birdies singing happily in the trees. It seems only fair to me that the great Republican party should receive credit for such blessings bestowed upon our land along with the criticisms of the faults of the party.

JUSTICE.

Chicago, March 14.—In your vigorous crusade against the "life for a pint" law in Michigan I see you must have overlooked that a woman was given life for shoplifting in New York and a Negro a life sentence for stealing six hens in Kentucky. These two cases must be an equally great sorrow to your high standard of "personal liberty" and justice.

Please tell me how you can use such self-control as not to mention these last two cases when you have a column editorial in this morning's TRIBUNE about the Michigan woman. M. R.

CAN THAT BE THE EXPLANATION?

Chicago, March 13.—Mr. Stagg's football teams used to make history, but that was before prohibition.

JIMMIE FARRELL.

ENGLISH AND AMERICAN NEWSPAPERS.

Indianapolis, Ind., March 8.—S. K. Ratcliffe, the English journalist, writes in THE TRIBUNE about Mr. Kinsley's article on the London press and makes some comparisons between the English and the American newspapers. He amplifies, rather explains, the differences to which Mr. Kinsley referred, though he points to some things the latter said which, he says, are not precisely true. The English press has always been a partisan press, perhaps in a better sense than was the American press when it was partisan in the extreme. Mr. Kinsley said that the English press is more cultured, which has been a patent fact to those well informed on the subject, and no doubt accounts for the distinction between them in partisanship, which the American press has all but abandoned in the last twenty years.

The English press is more cultured in handling news. It does not report important news with "fine writing," such as our press associations were sending from the sickroom of the dying former chief justice. Day after day we read that he was "waging valiant battle for life," was "determinedly fighting for life," and, worst of all, the one May 4 having "a weary man" trying "to relive" in memory his inauguration as President, of which that day was an anniversary. As a matter of fact, the former chief justice was unconscious, practically comatose, and could not "determine" at all. The English press would regard that sort of thing as indecent, as no doubt did many readers of American newspapers.

Mr. Ratcliffe says that "ads on the front page" is based on economic reasons. No doubt it would be economical in this country. It is one of the illustrations of many differences in the habit of mind of the peoples of the countries and they can well be unequivocally upheld when this is understood. Even "right thinking" folk could understand. Mr. Ratcliffe says American newspapers give much space to churches and English newspapers ignore them entirely "in sale and news alike." Can it be that the desire for publicity in this country is more accountable for the space given to churches than is the wish to promote religion? Have the preacher men or their church "leaders" been press agenting, as do public men in Washington? The latter have been at it in recent months more than ever before. One senator gave to the correspondents not only advance copies of his speech but also a grandiloquent introduction. And only a handful of senators heard him. It has been said that the average attendance of senators when speeches are made is under ten and yet millions of readers of newspapers no doubt have a vague impression that these "debates" are listened to as were the debates in Webster's day. Parliamentary reporting in England is almost perfunctory stuff, but the people read it. Indeed, it is said the English people of all classes are better informed in accuracy, at least, as to issues discussed than are the American people. F.

IN THE THIRTY-SEVENTH WARD.

Chicago, March 14.—Democratic judges and clerks of election in the Thirty-seventh ward who refused to indorse Tim Crowe for ward committeeman have lost their positions on the election board, although some of them had served the taxpayers of Chicago honestly for as long as fourteen years. It would seem that Judge Jarecki does play politics after all, and that kind of politics which he has led the public to believe he was always so strongly against. Politics makes strange bedfellows, as the saying goes, but the hook-up between Judge Jarecki and Tim Crowe certainly does not speak well for clean elections, and it surprises me, especially as the judge comes up for reflection this year.

BUILDINGS IN THE PARKS.

Chicago, March 12.—Had it been generally known that the south park commissioners were giving to any organization ground in Jackson park on which to erect a building, whether it was to be used to house the sick, insane or what not, it would have met with disapproval of taxpayers to the number of more than 6,467 instead of the 47 who signed the petition of objection.

THE TRIBUNE deserves praise for its recent editorial on the subject.

IT IS SPRING

[London Passing Show.]

Mistress (returned from shopping, during process of spring cleaning) "Has the master had his tea yet?"

Char: "Don't think so. 'E's in that room there. We won't be able to get at 'im for a long time yet."

Treacherous spring weather will be no problem at all . . .

if a dependable Timken Oil Burner guards the heating of your home

Mothers of young babies know the value of uniform, reliable heat in the nursery during the changeable spring season. Where the dependable Timken is in charge, healthful warmth at baby's bath time, and at all other times, is assured. The Timken never forgets.

Of course, it is during the frigid days of midwinter with temperature at zero, that one fully appreciates the peaceful comfort of the reliable Timken Oil Burner.

But in this finicky, changeable spring weather, when it's either too hot or too cold, the perfect control of the reliable Timken is a blessing, as thousands of home owners know.

AUTOMATIC
No work. No worry. No attention. Real heat as you want it.

It gives you just the amount of warmth you need—when you want it and as you want it. Dangerously cool rooms or equally dangerous over-warm rooms are avoided. You get healthful comfort irrespective of fluctuating outdoor temperature.

This positive dependabilty of the Timken is due to three features. One is amazing simplicity of design. The second is precise workmanship. The third is careful installation by Timken-trained experts only.

Timken heating efficiency is produced with only one moving part. There are no mechanical complexities. There is literally nothing to get out of order—to require adjustment or attention. The result is an utterly new conception of oil burner reliability for home use.

QUIET
as a billowy, drifting cloud. There is nothing to cause noise.

This same beautiful simplicity, together with the rotary principle of oil burning, makes the Timken "quiet as a drifting cloud." You cannot hear it because there is nothing to hear—nothing to make noise. Even if you have a hot air furnace, with every pipe a loud speaker, you will rarely ever know the Timken Oil Burner is in the house.

CLEAN
Build a usable room for recreation where the coal bin now is.

CAREFREE
Heat always on tap when you need it. No doubt or responsibility.

But you will get heat—luxurious, cozy heat—in the morning, in the evening, on mild days, on frigid days, in every nook and corner—without giving it a thought. You will get warmth automatically and unfailingly, just as you get light and water. There will be no work, no worry, whether you are at home or away. Just a priceless peace of mind that will last all winter, for many winters to come.

MODERN
in design, in service, and in its modern rotary type of operation.

Say good-by to ashes. Order a Timken now. Easy to finance

Sold, installed, and serviced by Timken-trained men only

If your fuel supply is low—why buy more at this late date? A small payment down will place a Timken and all it stands for during temperamental spring weather, in your home.

You can begin to enjoy its automatic reliability, its modern comfort, the peace of mind it brings, now—when uniform heat is so essential to home health.

Our Timken-trained crews make installations in any weather without inconvenience to the family. Even on coldest days, the house does not become uncomfortably cool.

Just a small payment down will handle this proposition. Then you can pay the balance, if you wish, in conveniently small amounts. Two years' time if desired.

Remember, that in selecting an oil burner "who makes it makes a difference." Also who installs it and who services it.

The great, nationally known Timken-Detroit Organization is behind the Timken Oil Burner. Timken-trained men install it with expert care. And, in those rare instances where service is needed, Timken-trained specialists are at your command.

BALFOUR CARRIED TO SCOTCH GRAVE ON FARM CART

Britain's Great Pay Final Tribute at Westminster.

BY JOHN STEELE.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, March 22.—While Great Britain's most illustrious statesmen gathered at Westminster abbey this afternoon to pay their last tribute to the late Lord Balfour, the great political leader's body was lowered to its final resting place far from London in Whittingehame, Scotland, besides the wall of the ancient castle, where he played as a boy and which he had always loved.

It would have been impossible to find a greater contrast than in the Westminster service and the modest Scottish ceremony. The duke of York, representing King George, led the distinguished assemblage here, which was also composed of hundreds of Lord Balfour's political friends and enemies. Prime Minister MacDonald, David Lloyd George, and Stanley Baldwin, the leaders of Great Britain's three political parties, were present.

Navy Delegates Attend.

Representatives of all delegations to the naval parley, as well as foreign ambassadors, Indian maharajahs, and leaders of science and professions mingled in the vast nave of the abbey, while the great organ boomed out the slow movement of Beethoven's seventh symphony, which Lord Balfour requested instead of a funeral march.

At the same moment a small crowd of old family servants, villagers, and country folk gathered at Whittingehame to attend the modest burial service of their beloved laird.

Early this morning a rough farm cart had been brought in from the fields to serve as a hearse, and laborers decorated it with laurel leaves and ivy. Eight of the oldest family servants—more than one of whom has been in the family for half a century—acted as pallbearers and accompanied the plain fumed oak casket through country lanes from the village church to the plot where the fresh grave was lying open beside the castle, not far from the bowling green which he had presented to the village.

Services Nation-Wide.

Despite the sincere grief manifest on all sides, nature helped to carry out Lord Balfour's desire that the funeral not be mournful, for the bright sun was shining over patches of crocuses and other spring flowers which had appeared in the last few days.

Services were held in the most of the country's cathedrals, while Scotch border cities lowered the national flags to half mast.

Funeral of Col. Guffey Is Held; Mellon Attends

Pittsburgh, Pa., March 22.—(AP)—Andrew W. Mellon, secretary of the treasury, was among those who attended the funeral here today of Col. James M. Guffey, former wealthy oil man and at one time a national Democratic leader. The services, held in the Guffey home, were simple. They were conducted by the Rev. Dr. Hugh Thompson Kerr of the Shadyside Presbyterian church. Mellon and Guffey were once business friends and neighbors.

Mrs. Nina A. Mihills of Highland Park Is Dead

Mrs. Mina A. Mihills, widow of the late Merrick A. Mihills, and for 42 years a resident of Highland Park, died at the Highland Park hospital yesterday. Funeral services will be held tomorrow morning at 10:30 o'clock at the home of her daughter, Mrs. George W. Rossetter, 868 Lincoln avenue, Highland Park. Mrs. Mihills was the first co-educational graduate of Wooster college.

MOUNT VERNON, Ill.—(AP)—Norman H. Moss, 74, former Illinois legislator and prominent in Masonic and church circles of southern Illinois. His wife died Jan. 30 of this year.

MORRIS, Ill.—(AP)—Barnabus C. Hitchcock, 83 year old civil war veteran. Hitchcock, a plumber, was at his shop here daily, until Tuesday, walking twelve blocks to and from his home every day. He served through the civil war in company G., 13th Indiana infantry.

PITTSBURGH, Pa.—(AP)—Dr. Aime Leteve, 65, French consul and a former pupil of Louis Pasteur, noted French scientist, died after a long illness. Dr. Leteve arrived in New York in 1889 with Paul Gibier and started the Pasteur institute of New York. Ten years later he came to Pittsburgh. He did much research on hydrophobia here and in 1907 discovered the cause. The germ is named for Dr. Leteve.

RUPTURE

Don't submit to avoidable operations or the use of antiquated trusses, as they all set where the lump is and not where the opening is. The opening is seldom larger than a dime (no matter the size of the rupture), and all cases can be retained with the end of a lead pencil.

The Spermatic Shield-Complex in combination with the Retainer-Simplex (Patent No. 747247 and other patents pending)—a scientific achievement in a highly specialized art. It will not only retain any case of rupture perfectly, but contracts the opening in 10 days on the average case. Infinitely superior to any instrument method or operation and producing results in no other way obtainable. All cases are secure a lifetime as against further trouble or expense. Large or difficult cases or incisional rupture (following operations) specially solicited. This instrument received the only award in England and in Spain, producing results without surgery, injections, medical treatments or prescriptions, with distinguished personal patrons of all nations."

FROM THE VATICAN STATE

Born only last year, but boasting a spiritual history of 2,000 years, the new Vatican state has a record without parallel. Situated within the City of Rome, it has a citizenship of fewer than 500 persons. It has its own flag, coinage, stamps, telegraph office, and railway station; without any industries, it enjoys a vast income. Its "standing army" is made up of 69 gendarmes and 75 Swiss guards, picturesque in their multi-colored 16th century uniforms.

This domain, materially so small, includes merely 108 acres of land comprising and adjacent to the Vatican. It came into being when Cardinal Gasparri, representing Pope Pius XI., and Premier Mussolini, representing King Victor Emmanuel, signed the Lateran treaty, ending the 59 year old "Roman question" and restoring the temporal power of the pope.

The signing also marked the pope's release from voluntary Vatican imprisonment. It was followed by the first exit of any pontiff since the destruction of the papal state in 1870.

Letter received by James J. Mahoney, 1925 South Central Park avenue, Chicago.

SQUEEZE YOUR OWN JUICE, IS COURT WARNING

Los Angeles, Cal., March 22.—[Special.]—The appellate department of the State Superior court rendered a far reaching decision here today.

It denied, in effect, that a householder who presses his own grapes or apples, adds water and uses the result for a table drink for his own family is not liable under the law in case fermentation sets in, but a householder who buys concentrated grape jelly or grape juice, adds water and serves the result, if fermented, even on his own dinner table, is guilty of violating both California and federal anti-liquor laws.

EUROPA RACES TOWARD A NEW OCEAN RECORD

ABOARD S. S. EUROPA, March 22.—[U. P.]—The Europa, racing across the Atlantic on her maiden voyage to New York, cut swiftly into strong headwinds and a heavy swell today, with every apparent prospect, if her luck holds, of setting a new trans-Atlantic speed record.

At noon today, the second day out of Cherbourg and the first full day of the voyage, the Europa had averaged 28.1 knots. The Europa's sister ship, the Bremen, averaged only 27.5 knots on the first full day of her record breaking trip last July.

MICHIGAN DEFIES U. S. RADIO BODY ON NEW STATION

State Will Build One to Aid Police.

Lansing, Mich., March 22.—[Special.]—Defiance was hurled at the federal radio commission today by the state of Michigan when Gov. Fred W. Green announced that the state will go ahead with construction of a 5,000 watt short wave broadcasting station for police purposes no matter what the attitude of the federal body toward the project may be.

Gov. Green declared that the state would welcome a test of the commission's power in the event the federal body resorted to injunction proceedings.

Radio commission engineers some time ago investigated the state's plan and are understood to have presented an adverse report to the commission, recommending that the state's request for allocation of a wave length in the short wave band be denied. Conferences were held between the state and federal authorities, the matter being taken up directly with the commission at Washington by Wilber M. Brucker, attorney general.

Hearing Set for May.

A hearing was finally granted the state but the plea of the Michigan officials that the matter be speeded up was ignored and the hearing set for May 15. Gov. Green, in an official statement today, gave notice that no such delay will be countenanced by the state but that construction of the station will begin at once.

A threatened controversy with the Radio Corporation of America over supplying tubes for operation of the proposed state station has been straightened out, the governor said, and tubes will be provided despite the fact that the state government is going into the open market to get the lowest price for construction of a station and will probably not give the contract to the Radio corporation. Bids are to be opened March 24.

Radio's Worth Proven.

"It has been proved conclusively that radio is a very important factor in the matter of apprehending criminals," said the governor. "Inasmuch as we still find that when there is quick apprehension and speedy justice given to the crooks there is a resultant decrease in crime, it behooves those in authority to provide all of the proved methods of catching the crook.

"Inasmuch as the state has not surrendered its police power to the national government, and inasmuch as the radio broadcasting station is clearly within our police power rights, the state of Michigan will not delay in this matter but will proceed at once with the installation of a radio broadcasting station that will cover all parts of the state of Michigan."

POLICE LABEL THIS DRAMA "BOOZE CASE"

Lieutenant Learns About Landlords.

Here is a story casually listed by the police as a "booze case." It explains why Mrs. Dorothy Ferguson, 19 years old, and her son, 6 months old, were sheltered last night in the women's quarters at Hyde Park station, sharing a cell with a shop lifter and two colored girls, arrested in a vice raid.

Mrs. Ferguson lives at 4557 Oakenwald avenue, a four story brick tenement. Though the structure boasts few creature comforts there are few vacancies, for the rent is small.

A week ago at midnight the Fergusons first appeared at Hyde Park station. The wife, an orphan from the Ozark mountains, and her husband, John, formerly a hired hand on a Mississippi plantation, came complaining that their landlord had locked them out because the rent was six days overdue.

Lieutenant Visits Landlord.

The night was cold and the child was crying and coughing in his mother's arms. Lieut. Charles Grattan volunteered to plead the couple's case with the landlord. They went to the tenement and Grattan routed the landlord, Nick Stemen, out of bed.

Stemen would hear nothing of the lieutenant's argument. Not only was the rent in arrears, but Ferguson was a troublesome tenant who frequently became intoxicated and annoyed his neighbors, the landlord said. When Grattan's argument over the child's welfare failed he resorted to threats of jailing Stemen unless he readmitted his tenants, for the night at least.

Stemen grumblingly agreed. Hyde Park police heard nothing further of the Fergusons until there came an alarm last evening that a man was beating his wife in the tenement. Police found Mrs. Ferguson huddled over a makeshift crib, nursing a bruised face and the husband had disappeared.

Take Mother to Station.

The rooms, according to the police, were damp and cold. They took the mother and infant to the station. There prisoners and the station force raised a milk fund. A prisoner was sent to a nearby drug store for milk and the baby was fed—for the first time since morning, the mother said.

Ferguson, stumbling back to his apartment, was arrested when neighbors complained that he was hammering the locked door with a chair. After he had sobered a bit in a cell, the lieutenant asked him where he had procured the liquor.

"From the landlord," Ferguson said, "I spent my last $2 drinking his moonshine in the afternoon."

FIND NITRO FILM IN STUDIO BLAST ON MICHIGAN AVE.

Explosion Pours Gas Into Nearby Clubs.

At least 300 pounds of nitro cellulose film, a highly inflammable material used in making photographic reprints, was stored in the rooms of the Russell studio, 30 South Michigan avenue, the scene early yesterday of a terrific explosion which shattered windows of adjacent buildings and routed scores of guests of nearby clubs from their beds. This statement was made yesterday by Chief Patrick J. Egan of the fire prevention bureau following an investigation.

Nitro cellulose film, Chief Egan said, is similar to the highly explosive substance contained in the X-ray films which exploded in a Cleveland hospital several months ago, resulting in the deaths of more than 100 persons. As in the Cleveland case, he declared, the film stored in the Russell studios was not confined in a fireproof vault, but stored on open shelves.

"After that Cleveland disaster we made a survey in Chicago to determine places where this dangerous film was kept in stock, and among other places we found quantities of the film on the premises of the Russell studio," said Chief Egan.

Thomas J. McKearnan, head of the Russell studios, was said to be hurrying back from a vacation at Miami Beach, Fla., because of the blast. In his absence, a subordinate admitted that some nitro cellulose film was kept on hand by the concern.

Additional film is stored in vaults in the studio, this employé said.

An inquiry into the explosion was under way yesterday under the direction of Fire Attorney Scott M. Hogan and Fire Marshal Michael Corrigan. Coöperating with officials in the investigation was George McNally, a special agent for the National Board of Underwriters. The blast caused a property damage estimated at $50,000.

George R. Carr, vice president and general manager of the Dearborn Chemical company, among those roused from their beds at the adjacent University club, was the first to detect the odor of the nitro cellulose film as the fumes poured into his apartment from a shattered window.

SEEKS HEFLIN'S SEAT BY FLAYING PUBLIC UTILITIES

Thompson Says Bankhead Is Corporations' Tool.

Mobile, Ala., March 22.—[Special.]—The contest in Alabama for the senatorial seat occupied by J. Thomas Heflin promises to occupy major attention this year, although more than 800 state and county offices are to be filled. Senator Heflin has been barred from becoming a candidate in the Democratic primary because he bolted the ticket in the last presidential election, but has indicated that he will run independently in November.

In the party primary of Aug. 14, Frederick I. Thompson, publisher of the Mobile Register and four other daily newspapers in Alabama, will be opposed by John H. Bankhead, son of a former Alabama senator. The electric power issue will play an important part in the campaign as well as the issue of utility lawyers occupying important public office.

Mr. Bankhead is counsel for several railroad systems and for numerous coal and iron corporations of the state and has been in the employ of the Alabama Power company in legal capacities, while Thompson has been a leader in the state in demanding equitable electric rates based upon the state's abundance of hydro-electric power and in oposing the election of utility company lawyers to executive or legislative office. Thompson terms such service "dual allegiance."

This is the first time in fifteen years that there have been but two candidates with a clearcut issue.

Alabama's senatorial race this year has national significance and interest through the fact that it will be the first direct contest in any state on the issues raised through the disclosures before the federal trade commission acting under the orders of a senate resolution, and the subsequent disclosures made by the senate lobby investigating committee.

U. S. MAY REVIVE "PURPLE HEART" FOR WAR VALOR

Washington, D. C., March 22.—[Special.]—"The Purple Heart," one of the oldest decorations for gallantry and bravery on the battlefield, may be revived by the war department, it was disclosed by Gen. Charles P. Summerall, army chief of staff today. This decoration, known officially as "The Order of Military Merit," was established by Gen. George Washington in the late days of the revolutionary war as a reward for heroism. The emblem was a purple heart worn on the left breast.

"There is need for a decoration which could be given with more freedom than the D. S. C., on the principle the French award the Croix de Guerre, Gen. Summerall informed the house military committee at a hearing made public today.

The department intends, if the plans go through, to present the "Order of Military Merit" to soldiers who have received the silver star citation.

"Gen. Washington, as commander-in-chief of the army, early recognized the psychology of recognition of fidelity, courage, and devotion to duty. He published an order instituting a decoration called "The Order of Military Merit," declared Gen. Summerall. "He defined the service by which it could be earned, consisting mainly of fidelity and conspicuous devotion to duty either in the face of danger or in the execution of any important trust. He prescribed it should be a purple heart attached to the left breast of the wearer. Our records indicate three such decorations actually were awarded by him."

Woman Dies of Injuries in Mysterious Explosion

Middletown, Ind., March 22.—[Special.]—Miss Ida Mundell, injured in an explosion the night of March 13 when the home of Mrs. Blanche Brattain was wrecked, died today. The explosion at first was laid to gas in a heating stove, but an investigation was started due to a report casting suspicion on John Pugsley, wealthy farmer. Several days after the explosion Pugsley committed suicide and notes which he left said he had "gone crazy" over Mrs. Brattain.

These things, more than all else, have today placed the straight-eight type of automobile on the crest of popularity. It is on the basis of this experience that Marmon has earned undisputed straight-eight leadership—and now submits the most highly developed line of straight-eights in the world today.

GRAHAM

After Three Years of Preparation Now Gives an Impressive Object Lesson in Greater Value-Giving

THERE could be no better time than this to give practical proof that by strict adherence to quality standards in massed manufacturing, motor cars can rise above the commonplace in quality and still be held down in price.

Motor cars have become such an imperative necessity in our national life that the moment is fortunately ripe for the impressive demonstration of greater investment-value which the Graham brothers are now able to give.

The way has been well paved for this exhibition of greater value-giving by nearly three years spent in perfecting their plant processes—engineering, chassis construction and body building combined—and by the manufacturing volume awarded the Grahams by more than 160,000 owners.

Those valuable years were preceded by an experience of more than twenty years in which they have tried earnestly to hold fast in practice to the conviction that quality is the best policy in quantity production as in everything else.

This conviction was verified by the amazing success that attended their entry into the automotive industry when they built up in five years' time, under their own name, one of the largest truck businesses in the world.

It was confirmed when their first year as independent motor car manufacturers was rewarded by the largest first year's sales ever given any manufacturer in the industry—and by a second year's volume still greater.

In those progressive years, inspired by the encouragement of as fine a following of owners as any manufacturer ever had the good fortune to gather together, the Grahams have learned much of incalculable value.

They owe all that they have to their public and they pass on now, at a moment when they believe it will be most appreciated, the fruits of their experience, in a line of cars so obviously superior in value that they advertise themselves—at prices so strikingly attractive that they represent impressive object lessons in greater value-giving.

SHOOTS HIMSELF AS HARVARD PALS DRINK AND DANCE

Police Call It Accident; Release Revelers.

Cambridge, Mass., March 22.—[Special.]—While his friends danced with three girls in an adjoining room early today, Aage Kloumann, 26 year old Harvard graduate, shot himself through the side during a party in his apartment in Ridgley hall, a student apartment building, on the exclusive gold coast.

Tomorrow he will undergo an operation at the Phillips Brooks house of the Massachusetts General hospital in Boston for removal of a bullet imbedded in his back.

Believe It Accidental.

Police scout a suicide attempt theory, but nevertheless assert that this angle of the shooting will be investigated thoroughly. Tonight they believe that the shooting was accidental, although Kloumann told Lieut. Joseph Shannon, "I am fed up on myself—and I am solely to blame."

According to police, Kloumann, Philip Hichborn, his roommate, and another student had attended the annual Hasty Pudding club show at Cambridge last night with three girls. At 3 a. m., today, they returned to their apartment for a few drinks and some dancing. In the midst of the party Kloumann went into one of the bedrooms, got a .22 caliber revolver and began to fire it.

Other Celebrants Released.

Some one in the group quieted him and left him, whereupon another shot and groans were heard. Kloumann's companions rushed into the bedroom to find him writhing on the bed. He had fired a bullet into his abdomen which came within an inch of breaking out through his back.

The police were called and the injured youth was taken to a hospital. His condition is said to be comfortable.

The other students and the girls were released after questioning by the police.

Chain Gang Sentence to a Councilman for Bribery

Atlanta, Ga., March 22.—(AP)—Councilman Harry C. York was convicted today on all five counts of an indictment for bribery in the administration of municipal affairs. He was immediately sentenced to three 12 month sentences on the chain gang and fined $3,000 on three of the counts. For the two additional counts he was sentenced to serve two 12 months' sentences on the chain gang or pay fines totaling $1,500.

JEWELER'S BRIDE

MRS. GEORGE H. MILLER.

George H. Miller, 80 years old, 3529 Cottage Grove avenue, a retired jeweler, and his bride, the former Miss Inez Belmont, 26 years old, 3210 Lake Park avenue, a student nurse, returned to Chicago yesterday from South Bend, where they were married by a justice of the peace on Friday.

Mrs. Miller will continue her studies as a nurse, graduating in June, her husband said. They eloped to South Bend in the hope of keeping the marriage until she was graduated, he explained.

"It wasn't any whirlwind courtship," said Miller. "I've known the young lady two years. I am sure we will be very happy."

Miller plans to buy a country home in Michigan, he said. He has been in the investigating department of the Chicago Board of Trade for many years. His first wife died two years ago.

2 Waukegan Women Held as Forgery Ring Suspects

Marie Perkins, 24 years old, and Nancy Mathes, 27, of 1710 Brookside avenue, Waukegan, who are believed by Waukegan police to be members of a nation-wide ring of shoplifters and check forgers, were arrested early yesterday in Clinton, Ia., and returned to Waukegan. They were charged with forgery. The young women had two railroad tickets to Los Angeles and several hundred dollars and a revolver in their possession when arrested. They deny the charges made by Waukegan merchants.

BIG EMBEZZLER IS PAROLED, BUT CAN'T GET OUT

"Cy" Thomson, Who Took $1,000,000, Needs Job.

St. Paul, Minn., March 22.—(AP)—Although he was granted a parole today, Ransom J. ["Cy"] Thomson, who has served eight and a half years in prison for embezzling more than $1,000,000, remained in his cell tonight, awaiting a job before he can be released.

Warden Sullivan explained tonight that rules provide against release of the paroled prisoner until he has obtained promise of employment. Scores of friends of Thomson are said to be planning to obtain a position for him.

Hailed as a financial genius, a civic leader, and a whirlwind of business action—the sobriquet "Cy" was given him as short for "Cyclone"—Thomson carved a bright niche of fame for himself before his systematic and amazing embezzlements from the Hormel company were discovered.

One method which he used, auditors said, was to cash a check on a Boston bank and then cover the withdrawal with another check on a Minnesota bank. Consequently checks were in the mails almost continuously between Minnesota and the east. Finally a slight discrepancy in his accounts brought a routine checkup and the blow fell.

Art Institute to Show Portrait by Raphael

Chicagoans will have an opportunity tomorrow or Tuesday to view one of the world's most valuable paintings, Raphael's "Portrait of the Parmesan," a painting of the secretary to Pope Julius VII., for which a recent offer of $500,000 by Baron Rothschild was refused, will be placed on exhibition at the Art Institute, according to an announcement yesterday by W. J. Sherwood, assistant director of the institute. The portrait is now in the institute being cleaned for the exhibition. It was sold by a New York dealer to a Chicago connoisseur who insisted that his identity be kept secret, Mr. Sherwood said. There are only three Raphael portraits in America. Chicago now has one and the others are owned in Boston and New York.

"Me pay 50¢ for a tooth paste? Let me laugh"

"I paid that for years—thought I had to in order to have nice teeth. "But I don't pay that much now. I've had a small but worth-while lesson in economy. "It occurred to me one day that all tooth pastes are pretty much alike. If that was so what was the use of paying fancy prices? That led me to Listerine Tooth Paste at 25¢. Been using it right along now, and figure I save myself about $4 a year. What's more, my teeth look cleaner and whiter than ever and my mouth feels simply great!"

That's the way a lot of men and women talk. Actually, more than a million people have rejected costly dentifrices for this modern one which sells for 25¢, the large tube. And while the price has been a consideration, the deciding factor in their selection was the outstanding quality of this tooth paste and the remarkable results achieved by it.

If you aren't already using Listerine Tooth Paste, do so at the first opportunity. Note how swiftly but how gently it erases discolorations and tartar. And how lustrous it leaves the teeth. Contained in it are new polishing and cleansing agents. They are harder than tartar and so remove it. But they are softer than enamel and consequently do not hurt it.

We are willing to wager that once you try Listerine Tooth Paste you will not return to soapy, gritty, or prettily colored dentifrices which accomplish no more. Lambert Pharmacal Company, St. Louis, Mo., U. S. A.

Buy slippers with what it saves you

Listerine Tooth Paste at 25¢ saves you about $3 per year per person compared to dentifrices in the high-price field. Spend that $3 as you please. Slippers are merely a suggestion.

3 CUSTOMS MEN SENT TO PRISON FOR SHAKEDOWN

Duluth Ex-Collector Given Two Years.

Duluth, Minn., March 22.—(AP)—Sentences were meted out here today to three federal customs employés convicted of conspiracy against the government.

Oscar E. Dahly, customs collector here for six years, received the heaviest sentence, two years and a fine of $3,000. Thomas F. Hoban, former border patrolman, was given two years, and Ernest W. Beaton, an employé of the customs department, was sentenced to a year and a day.

In addition Hoban is under a two year sentence imposed on his plea of guilty to a charge of extortion in connection with the case. Judge W. A. Cant ruled, however, that the sentences should run concurrently.

Edward A. Smith, Duluth druggist, principal witness for the government, was fined $1,000 on his plea of guilty to a sale of narcotics.

The three men and Edward A. Peters, Duluth druggist, were accused of an attempt to obtain $11,000 from Smith after his arrest on the narcotic charge. Peters was acquitted.

Girl Accidentally Shot in Room at Guyon Hotel

Charlotte Field, 17 years old, 5200 Quincy street, was shot in the left arm early this morning while in a room of the Hotel Guyon at Crawford avenue and Washington boulevard. The Fillmore police took Lester Kubitsky, 5009 Maypole avenue, into custody for questioning. Kubitsky said that Eddie Joyce, 4656 Maypole avenue, and a youth known to him only as Ray were examining a pistol in the room when it was discharged and the bullet struck the Field girl, passing through her arm and grazing her side. Police started a search for Joyce and Ray.

AUTOS' DEATH TOLL 1 EVERY 17 MINUTES IN U. S. DURING '29

New York, March 22.—[U. P.]—Motor accidents took an average of one life every 17 minutes in 1929, said a statement today by Owen B. Augspurger, president of the New York Automobile club.

A total of 31,500 persons were killed in such accidents last year, according to the statement, based on figures compiled by the American Automobile association safety department. The death rate represents a 12 per cent increase over the previous year.

The statement said the figures were particularly alarming because the increased fatality was much higher than should have been caused by increased motor vehicle operations.

2 COLLEGE HEADS WILL HELP CARE FOR McCORMICK

Santa Barbara, Cal., March 22.—[U. P.]—Dr. William Ophuls, head of the Stanford university medical college, and Dr. Langley Porter, head of the medical school of the University of California, today were appointed guardians of the person of Stanley McCormick, heir to $50,000,000 of the McCormick harvester fortune.

The appointments were announced by Judge William D. Dehy in the Superior court. The physicians will serve on the board of guardians with Mrs. Katherine McCormick, the multi-millionaire's wife; Harold F. McCormick, his brother, and Mrs. Anita McCormick Blaine, a sister, principals in a long court hearing.

Mrs. Katherine McCormick disagreed with the manner of treatment McCormick was undergoing under the supervision of Dr. E. J. Kempf, employed at a large salary by Stanley's brother and sister.

Judge Dehy did not give either side a victory in his decision at the end of the hearing, saying both sides evidently had the patient's welfare at heart. He suggested, however, two prominent men be added to the board and a new system of treatment be agreed upon.

Reports from all of the 48 states and the District of Columbia showed a total of 26,501,433 motor vehicles registered in 1929 and a total collection of $347,843,543 in license fees, registration fees, permit fees, and fines.

The ten states having the highest registration figures were: New York, 2,263,259; California, 1,974,341; Ohio, 1,766,614; Pennsylvania, 1,733,283; Illinois, 1,615,088; Michigan, 1,295,102; Texas, 1,348,107; Indiana 866,175, New Jersey, 832,332, and Massachusetts, 817,704. Iowa had a registration of 784,450 machines and Wisconsin, 793,502.

The totals in fees collected by the five states in the Chicago region were: Illinois, $17,087,209; Indiana, $6,253,424; Iowa, $11,919,350; Michigan, $23,212,316, and Wisconsin, $11,780,703.

Model Accuses Showman of Attempt to Attack Her

A warrant charging attempted rape was sworn out yesterday against Edwin Runkel, business manager of the "Strictly Disonorable" company now playing at the Adelphi theater, by Miss Gertrude Olson, 22 years old, 1032 North Dearborn street, a commercial artists' model. The warrant was sworn to before Judge Herbert G. Immenhausen and alleges that Runkel tried to attack the model Tuesday night after a party in the bungalow on the roof of the Hotel Sherman.

U. S. MISSIONARIES BESEIGED IN CHINA REPORTED SAFE

SHANGHAI, March 22.—(AP)—Eleven American Catholic missionaries reported besieged at Kanchow, Kiangsi province, by Chinese communist disorders were declared here today by Bishop Sheehan to be in no imminent peril.

Bishop Sheehan, a native of Streator, Ill., who is in charge of Catholic missionary activities in northern Kiangsi, said the missionaries at Kanchow had been carrying on their work in the midst of continual depredations by communist and bandit hordes. He did not mention any plans for withdrawal of the missionaries, as suggested by the state department in Washington, which has requested that the Chinese government send troops to protect the missionaries.

A bandit army fought a battle yesterday with Nationalist government troops along the border of Kiangsu and Shantung provinces. Chinese sources stated that in fighting near Haichow, Kiangsu, between 1,000 bandits and 2,000 soldiers, 100 bandits and 50 soldiers were killed and hundreds of others were wounded. For the time being other bandit armies 1,000 miles up the Yangtze appear to have been quieted by the patrol of American, British, and Japanese gunboats.

CRIME SCHOOL SUSPECT TAKES BABIES TO CELL

With her three months' old baby in her arms, and her other two small children clinging to her dress, Mrs. Nellie Smith, 25 years old, charged with burglary in connection with the operation of an alleged "crime school" for boys in her home at 2643 Superior street, was taken to the county jail yesterday to await grand jury action. Mrs. Smith was unable to furnish the $2,500 bonds and explained she was compelled to take the children along to jail because her husband, Edward, is just beginning a six months' Bridewell sentence for operating a still in his home. Five boys found in the Smith home are held on burglary charges.

ACCUSED OF ROBBING 7 CAFES.

Elmo Tillinghast, 30 years old, 720 North Clark street, was captured yesterday and charged with robbing seven restaurants last Monday evening.

CANDIDATES TO BE GUESTS AT DINNER IN "NO MAN'S LAND"

Even "no man's land" on the north shore is to be invaded by the politicians tomorrow night. The Wilmette League of Women Voters and the Wilmette voters advisory committee have arranged a dinner for the Miralago ballroom on Sheridan road between Wilmette and Kenilworth and a number of Republican candidates have accepted invitations to be present. Among those listed are Senator Deneen, Congressman Carl R. Chindblom and two of his opponents, Col. A. V. Smith and Maurice T. Weinshenk, and State Senator Arthur A. Huebsch, and State Representative Anna Wilmarth Ickes.

TABLET CARRIES VERDICT IN CASE 4,000 YEARS AGO

New York, March 22.—(AP)—A clay tablet believed to be the oldest legal document in existence was described tonight by its finder, Dr. Henry F. Lutz, professor of Assyriology at the University of California, at a meeting of alumni of the University of California.

Prof. Lutz, who came back from Mesopotamia on March 5, said he believed the tablet, on which was recorded the verdict in a legal case about 2,200 years before Christ, would have great bearing on the history of jurisprudence.

"The accused was a feudatory and in some way had shown insubordination to this lord's son and later beat him up," he said the tablet showed. "The case came up before a civil court, but it was found the court had no jurisdiction over a feudal subject. He was sent under guard to Babylon, where he was judged by a feudatory tribunal and found guilty. He got off by payment of a heavy fine."

WOMAN KILLED BY AUTO; TOLL MOUNTS TO 197

Mrs. Peter Rosenfeld, 63 years old, 3216 Ainslie street, was fatally injured yesterday at California avenue and Hirsch boulevard when she was knocked down by an automobile driven by Sol Shapiro, 120 North Hamlin avenue. She died on the way to the Lutheran Memorial hospital. West North avenue police took Shapiro into custody.

The death of Mrs. Rosenfeld and one other in Cook county yesterday raised the 1930 motor toll to 197. The victim:

John Sciarbarsa, 48 years old, 2632 South Wells street. Died in the county hospital of injuries received when struck by a hit and run driver at Kinzie and Halsted streets on Tuesday.

Seven persons were hurt in three auto accidents in Evanston last night, but only one was injured seriously. Mrs. Margaret Puselk, 810 Reba place, Evanston, suffered a possible fracture of the skull when the auto in which she was riding with her husband, Max, was struck by one driven by Robert Pack, 19 years old, 7614 North Ashland avenue. Pack, who was driving a borrowed car, was held by the police.

RUM RUNNERS DRIVEN AWAY BY ADVERTISING

Southold, L. I., March 22.—[U. P.]—Advertising pays, even when it is addressed to bootleggers, attests Constable Fred E. Booth.

People laughed at him, the constable declares, when he ran a series of advertisements in eastern Long Island newspapers warning rum runners to stop landing liquor at Founder's landing, a secluded port on Peconic bay.

The warning, apparently sufficed. The constable said today he had not encountered a rum runner since.

CHEVROLET

BODY by FISHER

FISHER . . . the World's Largest Builder of BODIES, brings added value to the CHEVROLET SIX

The Fisher Body Corporation is the world's largest builder of automobile bodies and has occupied this position of leadership since the early days of the industry. Its products enjoy a reputation for quality that is taken for granted wherever motor cars run. Its operations are carried out on a tremendous scale, making possible many economies that assure better bodies at lower cost.

Fisher logs its own lumber from Fisher-owned forests and finishes it in Fisher-owned mills. Fisher makes its own plate glass in one of the world's largest plate glass factories, and is, by far, the largest manufacturer of motor car body hardware and fittings.

Fisher ranks among the largest fabricators of sheet steel and uses steel faced dies which are built entirely by Fisher craftsmen. All together, Fisher activities require more than 349 acres of covered floor space—and the total number of employees engaged exclusively in the design and manufacture of Fisher Bodies ranges as high as 65,000.

Yet Fisher leadership is based on more than control of basic materials and the elimination of middlemen's profits. It was Fisher pioneering that brought the closed car to its present perfection. It was Fisher vision that originated the idea of volume production on fine motor car bodies. And it was Fisher progressiveness that introduced the many new processes which make Fisher Bodies, beyond question, the best built motor car bodies in America or Europe today.

As a leading division of General Motors, Fisher is closely allied with Chevrolet; and it is only natural that Fisher, as the world's largest builder of bodies, can bring to the new Chevrolet Six an added measure of value unequalled in the industry.

Therefore, it is important that you pay particular attention to the body in comparing the value of the Chevrolet Six with that of any other automobile—because the quality of the body is a factor of great importance in determining both the degree of satisfaction to be obtained from a car and its ultimate resale value.

Chevrolet-Fisher Bodies are long, low and properly proportioned. They are of composite hardwood and steel—the type of construction employed exclusively on the world's highest priced cars on account of its superior strength, safety, durability and freedom from unpleasant noises.

The roof of every Chevrolet-Fisher Body is a separate assembly, resting as securely upon the body pillars as does the roof of a house upon its framework. The roof itself is formed of bows and slats and is scientifically constructed to eliminate drumming or rumble.

Furthermore, there are provided such modern features as the non-glare VV windshield which provides added safety for night driving; adjustable driver's seat; substantial hardware and fittings of pleasing pattern and finish; and long-wearing velour and mohair upholstery over cushions whose permanent comfort is assured by closely nested springs. Finishes are of genuine Duco in a choice of pleasing colors. And throughout there is evidence of an attention to detail not ordinarily expected in a low-priced car.

In addition to the fundamental advantages of Bodies by Fisher, the new Chevrolet Six offers many superiorities in performance. The six-cylinder valve-in-head engine has been increased in capacity to 50 horsepower. Four Lovejoy hydraulic shock absorbers are standard equipment.

The four-wheel brakes are fully enclosed and protected from the effects of dirt and water. The rear axle, transmission and drive shaft have been improved to provide greater strength and dependability.

Yet this better car sells at greatly reduced prices. And comparison with any low-priced automobile will reveal a difference in value far greater than the difference in price!

LUXEMBURGERS WORRIED ABOUT THE NEXT WAR

France and Belgium Both Eye Her Steel.

(This is the second of a series on Luxemburg, a little grand duchy between France and Germany.)

BY ANN SOMERS HOUSE.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LUXEMBURG, March 22.—With 250 men and two guns to defend her, little Luxemburg is getting ready these day to give up her "disarmed neutrality" and go to war with all other European countries whenever the league of nations will order them to. Two years ago the grand duchy of Luxemburg asked to join the league. Like other nations, she had to promise she would obey article 16 of the covenant. It meant that in case of aggression on any fellow member in the league Luxemburg, too, would line up her "military forces" and her two cannons.

From now on there will be no more horseback riding for soldiers' children on the two venerable guns. Luxemburg's warriors and their families have been leading a happy life in a big building on the site of the old fortifications of the capital. The children played about the garrison and the wives hung their wash on a clothes line from one gun to the other. But now the soldiers will have to start practicing hard for the next war, oiling their guns and shooting them off at regular annual maneuvers.

Was Disarmed Neutral.

"Who will the next war be with?" the Luxemburgers ask these days. Since 1867, when the grand duchy was declared a "disarmed neutral" and squeezed as an independent state between Germany and France, the country has fought no more. Its fortresses were razed and the army reduced to 250 men. Luxemburg wasn't any worse off for that. She became the world's fifth biggest steel producer and leader in the European steel trade, though she has a population of only 280,000.

In the troubles between France and Germany, Luxemburg always has proved the key to the enemy's country. All through the 19th century Prussia controlled Luxemburg because the latter was enrolled in the Prussian customs union "Zollverein." Germany even ran Luxemburg's railroads. The astute Bismarck defended her skillfully against the love making of Napoleon III.

Disapproved of Occupation.

During the world war Germany sat firmly entrenched in Luxemburg. Grand Duchess Marie Adelaide, Luxemburg's uncautious young ruler, kept on friendly terms with the kaiser, though he had treated her neutrality like Belgium's as a "mere scrap of paper." She was of German descent and couldn't forget it. But while her people speak mostly a German dialect, they thoroughly disapproved of the German occupation. "Mir welle jo keng Preise gin" (We don't want to become Prussians") they sang, and scared Marie Adelaide into abdicating as soon as the world war had ended with the defeat of the Germans.

France remains Luxemburg's pet neighbor. Some 30,000 Luxemburgers live in France and a good many served in the allied armies.

When Luxemburg held a plebiscite in 1919 to decide with which ally she preferred to have an "economic union" to replace the German "Zollverein," 60,000 Luxemburgers voted in favor of France and the other 20,000 for Belgium.

Since that day a dog and cat fight over Luxemburg has been waging between the two "sister nations," France and Belgium. Little Belgium feels Luxemburg is hers as a zone of economic influence. France wants Luxemburg to be her great strategic out post against Germany. Both banker for Luxemburg's steel trust as a big customer for coal and iron. Belgian capital runs one Luxemburg line since the armistice, and French capital runs the other.

100,000 GERMAN SOLDIERS STILL MARKED MISSING

43,257 Last Heard Of as Prisoners of War.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BERLIN, March 22.—Eleven years after the war 100,000 German soldiers are still missing.

Most of them are believed to lie in mass graves in foreign soil, dumped there by the enemy and no record kept of their identity. But a healthy percentage, 10,000 perhaps, are believed to be alive and to have remained "some where in Siberia," disinclined upon liberation to go back home to a shrewish wife or to face financial or other difficulties.

Of these 10,000, many undoubtedly live in bigamous bliss, married to a Russian girl who may or may not have been informed about the frau back home in Germany.

43,251 Were Prisoners.

Of the hundred thousand missing, 43,251 were last heard of as prisoners of the French. What happened to them beyond that is not known. By far the greater part probably died in French army hospitals or on their way there, in the opinion of the German Reich Association of Former War Prisoners, which has just issued a report on the situation. They were likely buried in mass graves and no adequate effort made to keep any record of their identity.

A greater number, 51,213, were last heard of as prisoners of the Russians. Most of these are assumed to have died in the epidemics that swept the badly managed Siberian prison camps from time to time. The number of dead probably made it difficult for the not too efficient Russian hospital and burial services to keep tabs on indentification.

Many Lost in U Boats.

Other German missing are scattered about the world, buried in the soil of the far flung battlefields where they fought and fell. The former German colonies in China, Africa, the Balkans, Italy, Turkey, and the seven seas—the latter holding the hundreds of Germans who went to sea in U-boats and who never came back—all these figure in the list.

Are you robbing food of its wholesome value?

Frying makes food less nutritive and harder to digest

The In-a-Drawer Broiler was originated by Cribben & Sexton Company. All patent rights reserved.

Healthful BROILED foods prepared easiest in new In-a-Drawer Broiler

Pulls in and out like a drawer—one hand—one motion. Broiler rolls out its full length. No burned hands. No bending or stooping

Too much fried food is unhealthful. This method of cooking injures the nourishing value of the food. When you fry grease into food, you make it very hard to digest. This is why people who eat too much fried food usually have constipation, sallow complexions and moody dispositions.

This is why hospitals always broil—never fry—foods. Broiling retains the nourishing, invigorating values of food—its juicy natural savoriness. Broiled foods are easily digested. They are ideal for both children and adults.

A remarkable patented broiling feature on the new Universal Range now enables you to broil as easily as you formerly fried. The Universal In-a-Drawer pulls in and out on roller bearings like the drawer of a filing cabinet. All danger of burns has been removed. No stooping or bending.

With the Universal In-a-Drawer you can prepare broiled foods exactly as the famous chefs in the leading hotels cook them. Rich, juicy steaks! Savory, nourishing chops. Men love them. Children crave them. All served as easily as you formerly fried.

But this Universal Range offers you far more than this big broiling advantage. In every respect it represents the latest ideas in ranges. Embodied in it are our 58 years of experience in building high grade ranges.

Never before has a cast iron, porcelain enameled Universal In-a-Drawer Broiler Gas Range been offered at such a low price. Volume production has resulted in amazing savings—enabling us to give you added features at lower prices.

Also you can have this beautiful range with an Insulated Oven—another new Universal feature—at a small extra cost. This marvelous new feature saves half the oven gas and keeps the kitchen cool in summer.

Liberal terms

You must see this beautiful new Universal Range to fully realize what a great value it is. The Universal dealer in your community now has it on display. See how easy it is to broil this new way. Operate the In-a-Drawer Broiler yourself. Notice how it moves at a touch. Compare its labor-saving features—its safety—its beauty with those of ranges selling at much higher prices. A small payment down will place it in your home. The balance can be paid in low monthly payments. If you do not know the name of your Universal dealer, write us today for his name.

PRINCIPALS ASK LAWS FOR SOUND SCHOOL FINANCE

Adopt Program for Action by Legislature.

BY OSCAR HEWITT.

The Chicago Principals' club of the public schools has adopted a platform on the financial needs of the school system. The club expects to send its representatives before the special session of the legislature to argue the merit and soundness of this platform.

Among the major needs of the public schools is more money for instruction, according to the principals. They hold "that the sources of revenue other than taxes on real estate, must be found if the schools are to function as an intelligent progressive city demands."

Demand Tax Revision.

The platform, now being distributed widely, also asserts that "the methods of taxation and of financing the school system of Chicago were never in such need of a thorough revision as now." "No school system," the principals say, "can function as it should while, on account of the lack of adequate financial support, the teaching load and the administrative load are increased from time to time by putting more pupils into a room and by reducing the amount of administrative assistance. Chicago now imposes a larger teacher and administrative load than any other city over 100,000 inhabitants in the United States."

Financial Planks Listed.

Among the objectives which the principals have decided require legislative action are the following:

1. Amendment to constitution permitting a revision of the revenue laws.
2. An Illinois distributive school fund comparable to that provided in the state of New York.
3. A larger territorial tax unit for support of schools outside of the larger districts now existing.
4. Legislation for finding the present deficit of corporate bodies in Cook county, putting these bodies on a cash basis.
5. A state law providing an adequate Chicago educational fund, from which payments shall be limited to salaries of those engaged in instruction and supervision of instruction, teachers retirement pensions, and instruction supplies.
6. Legislation to make the Chicago superintendent of schools administrative head of all the departments under the board of education.

Separate Operation Expense.

The limiting of payments from the education fund to instruction and school supplies would eliminate therefrom the cost of operating the school houses. This latter expense is larger per pupil in Chicago than in ten other cities of the country having 100,000 inhabitants.

Four other teachers' organizations are expected to formulate their views on legislation soon. These are the Chicago Federation of Men Teachers, of which James A. Meade is president; the Elementary Teachers' union, headed by Agnes B. Clohesy; the Federation of Women High School Teachers, of which Lucie H. Schacht is president; and the Board of Education Playground Teachers' union, of which Kate Krauel is chief.

BAILIFFS END PAY FIGHT; TO STAY AT WORK

The bailiffs of the Criminal court voted yesterday to give up their plans to strike and to work twelve months for ten months' pay in accordance with the economy budget passed by the county board after they had been told by Sheriff John E. Traeger, their superior, that if they did not want to work under those conditions he would find men who would gladly accept the job.

The rebellious bailiffs, who had previously voted against working two months without pay, changed their votes when the sheriff announced the plan of getting other bailiffs if necessary to keep the criminal courts in operation. Only one man, Herman Rappin, raised his voice in protest after Sheriff Traeger had made his talk.

"I'm a good Democrat and I work hard in my ward," Rappin said to the sheriff. "But I've got a wife and three kids and I just can't get along if I miss any more pay. My credit has just about gone the limit, and if I go two months without pay thing would happen why I'd just have to get out and get another job."

The two months' payless period is to start tomorrow for 28 of the bailiffs.

Jews Protest at Moslem Ritual Music in Jerusalem

JERUSALEM, March 22.—(AP)—Jewish worshipers praying at the Wailing Wall, the scene of the disturbances that led to riots last summer, were again disturbed today by Arabs with the recently introduced musical religious ceremonies of Zikhar. The Jewish population was informed the administration could do nothing until the arrival of the league of nations commission soon to be appointed to settle the claims of Jewish and Moslem worshipers.

Suit Is Sequel to Aurora Dry Slaying

A photograph of Joseph De King, his wife, Lillian, and their son, Gerald, taken before Mrs. De King was shot to death in a prohibition raid on March 25, 1929. De King is suing Kane county, State's Attorney Carbary, and the raiders for $10,000 as a result of his wife's death.
[TRIBUNE Photo.]

DE KING SUES FOR KILLING OF WIFE IN RAID

Asks $10,000 from Kane County, 6 Officers.

Within three days of the first anniversary of the shooting of Mrs. Lillian De King of Aurora, who was killed by dry raiders last March 25, Joseph De King, her husband, filed the praecipe of a suit for $10,000 damages. The defendants named are Kane county, State's Attorney George D. Carbary, the five deputy sheriffs who composed the raiding party, and Eugene Boyd Fairchild, who swore to the false affidavit which led to the raid. The suit was filed in Circuit court at Geneva and will be heard there during May.

Attorneys Michael L. Igoe and Gregory A. Gelderman of Chicago acted for Mr. De King. It was recalled yesterday that Mr. Igoe, as a state representative, was a member of the Illinois legislature investigating committee which last May inquired into the killing.

Charge Is Recalled.

At that time the legislator charged Carbary with attempting to conceal rather than reveal facts relative to the slaying. The bill of particulars setting forth definite charges against each defendant will not be filed until later. Besides Kane county, Carbary and Fairchild, the deputy sheriffs named as defendants are Roy E. Smith, Elgin, who shot Mrs. De King; William Hale Treadwell, Elgin; Clarence D. Sayre, Batavia; Olaf "Ole" Nelson, Geneva; and Charles H. Anderson, Aurora.

Mr. De King is acting as administrator for his wife's estate, which was entered for probate before Judge Harry C. Daniels a few minutes before the damage suit was filed. The estate consists of about $11,000 in personal property, the nature of which was not disclosed. Mrs. De King's principal heirs are listed as her husband and her 14 year old son, Gerald, who was described as a hero after he shot the deputy sheriff who had mortally wounded the lad's mother.

De King Candidate for Sheriff.

Joseph De King is a candidate for the Republican nomination for sheriff of Kane county and is opposed by Gustave C. Malcor of Aurora and Chief of Police Harry Crawford of St. Charles, the so-called "liberal" candidate. State's Attorney Carbary is supporting Malcor, who also enjoys the backing of the Kane County Law Enforcement league and the Kane County Ministerial alliance, an organization of preachers.

Deputy Smith, the actual slayer of the woman, is still employed in the sheriff's office and was recently allowed a $2,000 hospital bill incurred during his recovery from the wound he sustained at the hands of Gerald De King.

DRYS RAID SMALL BREWERY.

Dry agents yesterday raided a small brewery in a garage at 2454 Southport avenue. They found 700 gallons of beer mash and some empty barrels, and arrested Matthew Egres.

MONTREAL JEWS WIN WAR FOR OWN SCHOOL SYSTEM

12,000 Children Will Get Separate Training

BY STANLEY JACKSON.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

MONTREAL, Que., March 22.—Separate public schools for Jewish children are to be built, or bought and operated in the city of Montreal and district. This action, representing one of the most pointed cleavages between children of any city in educational matters, has been decided upon after years of bickering and strife.

Up to the present Jewish children have attended the Protestant public schools. Of a 23,000 enrollment in Montreal Protestant schools, approximately 12,000 are Jewish children. Nevertheless the Jewish people are given no representation on the board of school commissioners, or on the provincial council of public instruction, and all matters are directed from the point of view of Protestant education with, according to the Jewish attitude, inadequate regard for Jewish ideas.

Jewish Plea Rejected.

War has been waged unceasingly by Jewish leaders to obtain representation on the school commission. The case was carried to the privy council, highest judicial authority in the British empire, but their plea was turned down.

Under the present system, which has as its basis the British North America act, Catholics and Protestants are guaranteed full educational rights. The Catholic schools of Montreal have an enrollment of about 100,000 pupils. No Jewish children go to the Catholic schools, preferring the Protestant institutions.

A bill was introduced in the Quebec legislature early this week to give authority for separate schools for Jewish youth. Immediately came a protest from Catholic church authorities, declaring the rights given by the British North America act were thereby endangered. A conference between Premier Taschereau and Provincial Secretary David and the heads of the Quebec Catholic church was held yesterday in Quebec City at the home of Cardinal Rouleau.

Win Own School System.

Following the conference announcement was made that it had been decided to redraft the bill. The Jewish section is not to be part of the provincial council of public instruction, but the Jews will operate outside of that body. A Montreal Jewish school commission will be created and will be master in their own schools, building schools, raising taxes, providing teachers and text books.

The commission will be subject to the control and surveillance of the superintendent of public instruction. Jewish schools must be built and operated only on the island of Montreal and will not be permitted in any other part of the province.

Norwegians Return After Exploring Antarctic Area

CAPE TOWN, Union of South Africa, March 22.—(AP)—The whaling and exploring ship Norvegia, commanded by Capt. Hjalmar Riiser-Larsen, arrived here today from South Georgia, Antarctia. The Norvegia, which made extensive exploration of the regions between Enderby land and Croates land, left Antarctia for Cape Town early in March.

3 BANDITS GET $150,000 GEMS IN STORE RAID

One Gun and Handcuffs Their Only Weapons.

New York, March 22.—[Special.]—Three robbers, described as well dressed, middle aged men, armed with a single pistol and provided with two pairs of police handcuffs, executed a successful raid on the jewelry store of Gross Bros., Jamaica, today, and escaped with loose gems and other jewelry valued at $150,000.

About half an hour after Harry L. Gross, one of the proprietors of the store, had opened his establishment for business, and while A. C. Moss, one of his clerks, was laying out the window display of rings and watches for the day, and Leopold Coene, watchmaker, was tinkering at his bench, near by, a man entered the store and asked to be shown some moderate priced watches.

Gross produced a tray of watches of the kind asked for.

Calls His Accomplices.

Without warning, the man, while looking at the watches, whipped out a revolver, stepped near the door of the store, and ordered the proprietor and clerks to throw up their hands. As the trio complied with his order the robber signaled to two companions who evidently had been lurking in the vicinity.

The two outside men entered the store at once, unarmed and unmasked, but carrying two pairs of handcuffs. One of them snapped a pair of cuffs over the wrists of Gross and Moss, linking them together, while the first robber herded all three into a rear room of the store.

While the first man kept order with his pistol, the other robbers set to work cleaning out the establishment's large safe, from which the more valuable jewels had not yet been removed.

Girl and Man Also Held.

As they began their work, the robbers were interrupted by the appearance of a girl employe of the store, who arrived in company with Max Herling, a man occasionally employed by Gross brothers.

At a command from their leader one of the two men at work on the safe snapped the second pair of handcuffs on Herling's wrists and returned to the task of packing up jewels and other valuables from the store's coffers.

After ransacking the place, they warned everybody concerned against giving an alarm and escaped.

RUSSIAN REDS TAKE RAP AT U. S. POPE AND JOHN D.

Say Vatican Backed by Wall Street.

MOSCOW, March 22.—(AP)—Comsomal Pravda, organ of the Communist Youth league, today published a particularly virulent attack on the United States, the pope, and John D. Rockefeller, under the heading, "The International Combine of Dollar, Cross and Machine Gun."

The paper declared that the Vatican was supported by American capital and that the pope was an agent of Wall street.

Discussing labor troubles and disturbances in the United States in the last twenty years, the paper charges American capitalists with using violence against American workers.

Comsomol Pravda also mentioned new books on Christ published in the United States, declaring that Christ was pictured as the founder of modern business, an excellent advertiser and a good director and organizer.

Under a subhead, "The Americanization of the Vatican," the paper said the pope's court was formerly supported chiefly by subsidies from the Austro-Hungarian empire, but was now maintained largely by American capitalists.

Comsomol Pravda also declared that the pope's "crusade against the soviet union" had failed ignominiously.

The entire Jewish Communist press of Russia has officially opened its anti-Passover campaign by outlining how the drive should be conducted.

The Kharkov Shtern urges that every Jew, whether worker, artisan, employe, or colonist, should stay on his job during Passover, that no Jew should attend synagogue, that not a sign of matzothes, or other Passover food, be seen in a Jewish house, that all Jews submit their praying shawls, phylacteries, candlesticks, and religious books for junk to be sold for the industrialization funds, that all Jews resign from the official Jewish communities, and that they join, instead, the league of the godless.

While the Jewish communists are preparing their anti-Passover campaign, religious Jews throughout the country are collecting tithes to provide the poor with matzothes.

SILAS STRAWN HOME, READY TO REPLY TO COUNCIL'S QUESTIONS

Silas Strawn, chairman of the citizens' rescue committee, received an unsigned letter from Boston yesterday containing $250. "Please use this for the budget to help the tax situation in Chicago," said the letter.

"I wish I knew whom to thank," said Mr. Strawn, who arrived yesterday from Mississippi, where he "made a hole in one" at a winter golf course.

"Will you submit to interrogation by the council finance committee and President Caldwell of the board of education next Tuesday," Mr. Strawn was asked.

"I shall be glad to answer any questions asked," replied Mr. Strawn. "This tale that I prevented the sale of Chicago tax anticipation warrants to New York banks has no foundation.

"I was in New York Feb. 7, 8, 9, and 10 and I did not talk to any banker directly or indirectly. I saw some newspaper men and they asked if I had any objections to New York buying the warrants. I told them I had no objection whatever, and added that if Mr. Caldwell could sell any it would relieve Chicago just that much in raising a fund to buy the warrants."

3 Die, 13 Injured by Acid Fumes in Warsaw Sewer

MODELS TO SHOW GARDEN PLAN FOR FUTURE CHICAGO

Miniature Homes Made for Exhibit.

BY PAUL POTTER.

A comprehensive study of planning and planting problems in the Chicago area is being made by exhibitors who are preparing models for the Chicago Garden and Flower Show to be held in the Hotel Sherman from March 28 to April 5. Yards and gardens for both congested and suburban areas will be suggested in two elaborate miniatures, one representing an ideal suburban residence district and the other a city block.

Houses, streets, and grounds, completely developed on a scale of one-fourth inch to a foot, will be exhibited. Suburban models will be assembled in a residence suburb, according to a plan which has been made by the office of Jacob L. Crane Jr., noted town planning authority. There will be sixty-seven units, each showing in complete detail a suburban house in a lot approximately 75 by 150 feet, with the grounds properly laid out and planted according to the modern manner. Thirty-seven of these models will be contributed by women's and garden clubs and thirty by suburban schools under the direction of County Superintendent E. J. Tobin.

Show Gardens for City.

A model of a city block, consisting of thirty homes and apartment buildings, each on a lot approximately 40x125 feet, is being made by the manual training department of the city schools, under the direction of E. J. Worst. The models will display every example of garden treatment which can be attempted in a congested area, and will serve as an inspiration for residents of such Chicago districts who wish to improve their surroundings in preparation for the World's Fair.

"The design had to be accommodated to sixty rectangular lots, each 75x150 feet," Mr. Crane said. "The primary purpose of the plan is to provide an interesting, beautiful layout, with safe, secluded residence streets and interior parks and playgrounds at no greater cost than by ordinary rectangular platting.

Protection for Houses.

"Every lot opens on to at least one park strip 150 feet wide and has direct access to an interior park and playground. The outside major traffic artery, on which lots front, has a 30 foot planted parkway, which with building setbacks of twenty-five feet adequately protects the houses against the noise, odor, and danger of fast traffic in the roadway."

There are no cross streets through the unit, the block being developed with 90 foot cul-de-sac service drives, each with a central planting strip, ideal for privacy and safety. Cross paths are provided for pedestrians. Along the most important traffic artery the cross streets are spaced 2,200 feet apart, and no garage driveways enter the street directly, leaving this roadway free for fast, safe, traffic flow.

Grade Separation Provided.

"Grade separation is provided at the intersection of the two major streets," continued Mr. Crane. "The wide planted parkways along all streets make beautiful drives and separate the traffic from the community. One corner of the local business center, to serve several units, is arranged for good architectural grouping in set-back relation to residential lots."

A school community house and playground group are provided to serve several units, with footways leading to it, and parking space off the street. A brook kept within the park as a beauty feature avoids expensive storm sewer construction.

Butter Fingered Bandit Drops Gun in Delicatessen

A clumsy robber yesterday failed in an attempted holdup of Lazar Skishkoff, owner of a delicatessen store at 842 West Adams street. The bandit dropped his gun as he entered the store. He then fled.

BEG PARDON

MATANZAS, Cuba, March 22.—(AP)—The Associated Press has been advised that on March 2 it incorrectly stated that Marto Jordan had been convicted and sentenced to death here for murder. Mr Jordan conducted the prosecution of a case against a man and a woman, who received the death sentence, and his name was incorrectly used in the report of the trial.

An item in THE TRIBUNE of March 18 stated that Thomas Cawley was out of work for three weeks when he committed suicide. The Wisconsin Steel works states that Cawley had been steadily employed there up to the time of his death.

Woman Struck by Baby Carriage; Injury Is Fatal

An infection developing from an ankle injury suffered three years ago, when she was struck by a baby carriage, resulted in the death yesterday of Mrs. Anna Walker, 76 years old, at her home, 309 West 26th street.

STORAGE SPACE FOR MAY WHEAT SOUGHT BY U. S.

Legge Opens Negotiations with Millers.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., March 22.—[Special.]—Anticipating a rush of wheat deliveries in May, the federal farm board's grain stabilization corporation is negotiating with the millers for storage space to avert a tie-up at the terminals, it was learned at the farm board offices today.

Chairman Alexander Legge opened negotiations with the millers a week ago, when he conferred with several leaders from Kansas City, Minneapolis, and other cities, and a deal, if possible, is to be completed by the stabilization corporation representatives in Chicago. The plan is for the millers, who are said to control storage space for 70 to 80 million bushels of wheat, to furnish it for government wheat in return for the privilege of buying from the government supply at current prices.

Secret Planning Reported.

Recent reports have indicated that large holders of grain, the so-called speculators, have been secretly planning to embarrass the board in May by rushing millions of bushels to Chicago elevators, which already are full to overflowing and with no room for the 12 to 20 millions of bushels purchased by the stabilization corporation on future contracts.

The corporation officials were said to have had visions of millions of bushels of their wheat on railroad sidings with no place to put it—a situation similar to that in May, 1922, when a big Chicago speculator was in such a predicament. Unaware that the elevators were full, he bought up great quantities of wheat for May delivery. In eleven days, 4,000 cars were standing on the tracks, the Chicago price dropped 30 cents a bushel, and the speculator not only paid the railroads a fortune in demurrage charges but was forced to sell at prices he was offered.

Report Millers Accept.

Some of the millers are reported to have already accepted the board's proposal, which is that the government would pay the insurance on stored wheat while the millers would charge nothing for the storage.

A miller could take wheat from his elevator at any time at the prevailing price and grind it. At the end of the crop season, the government would take the balance of the stored wheat out of the elevators. It is estimated by the board experts that the millers, whose supplies are low, would grind 150,000,000 bushels this season—that is, before July 1—which is more than the stabilization corporation expects to buy.

During the battle between the farm board and the grain trade the millers have been in the position of innocent bystanders, although their sympathies are said to have inclined toward the board, as they are interested largely in a stabilized price. Under the joint storage plan, the board officials believe, the millers' difficulties would be solved as well as their own.

CHARGE SQUAW SPED KILLING BY VENTRILOQUISM

Buffalo, N. Y., March 22.—[Special.]—The final melodramatic touch to an already fantastic case was added here today when District Attorney Guy B. Moore announced he expected to offer testimony that Lila Jimerson, Indian girl on trial for her life, had used ventriloquism to speed a murder.

Lila is charged with inspiring the killing of Mrs. Clothilde Marchand, wife of Henri Marchand, sculptor. Mrs. Marchand was found dead in her home a fortnight ago. She had been beaten on the head with a hammer, choked, and finally chloroformed.

It was Nancy Bowen, aged Seneca woman, who committed the crime.

While the two women were walking along the street they discussed witchcraft. Suddenly Nancy, according to the story she told yesterday, heard a voice. It seemed to be in front of her.

"The voice," Nancy reported, "say: 'Hammer is the surest way to kill her.' Just after I heard that Lila caught up from behind and asked me if I hear voice. I say I do and she ask me what it say.

"I say it say: 'Hammer is surest way to kill her.'

"Then Lila say she thought that what it say, too. Then we went to store and Lila bought 10 cent hammer."

HOOVER PLANS TO REVIEW U. S. FLEET IN MAY

Washington, D. C., March 22.—[Special.]—President Hoover is expected to take advantage of the presence of the entire American fleet in Atlantic waters this spring to arrange for a presidential review of this country's naval forces.

Two dates have been proposed for the ceremony, which would be held off the Virginia capes. One is on May 7, when the fleet would pass in review before Mr. Hoover and later steam to New York for a ten day stay. The second time suggested is May 20, when the fleet is preparing to leave Hampton Roads, the battle fleet headed for the Pacific coast and the scouting fleet for north Atlantic waters.

Foot Troubles Cause Bad Health

They affect the body in many ways. The feet swell, burn, ache, pains under heels, ball of foot sore and feels as if you are walking on marbles; corn, callouses, ingrown and bunions; excessive perspiration, offensive odor, overdeveloped ankles, legs, varicose veins; legs cramp, stiffen; pains in hips, small of back, shoulders and neck, poor circulation with a weak and nervous feeling. Most people think they have rheumatism, neuritis, arthritis, or other trouble when their troubles are caused from their feet.

Do not be discouraged. Regardless of what your condition may be or what you have tried, or whom you have consulted, Dr. Pinkston guarantees to relieve all foot troubles and cure nine-tenths of them regardless of the cause or condition of the ailment.

"And now guess what I paid for them"

TRUST A WOMAN to know value when she sees it. Trust her, too, just as implicitly, to pick styles that will make her admired of all eyes. When she finds both, she's proud of it and doesn't mind saying so.

Many women have bought their first International Shoes on just such a recommendation. And the interesting thing is that once they start wearing them, they usually continue to wear them. They may not know how International can offer such style and quality at such prices, but they are convinced, through experience, that they can't buy greater value.

The "how" is easy to understand. Each of the fifty million pairs of shoes which International makes a year is produced in a specialty shoe factory. Each factory concentrates on just one type of shoe. Even the workers are specialists, trained for years to better the single task that is their contribution to final quality. That means the finest kind of workmanship.

The materials which come to their hands bear an assurance of quality that can hardly be matched in industry. From leather to lining fabric, the International Shoe Company makes these materials within its own plants, under the most rigid requirements. By doing so, it saves millions of dollars a year compared to buying these materials in the open market. Every one of these savings is reflected in the price you pay. That means exceptionally high quality at unusually low cost.

But the only true test of value is in the wearing. If you don't already know International Shoes, go to a dealer who identifies his store with one of the marks of quality shown below. Wherever you are, there is one near you. Judge these shoes for yourself. You will see why every year people buy an average of two pairs of International Shoes for every family in the nation.

The Producing Units of International Shoe Co.

44 Specialty Shoe Factories~ each making just one particular type and grade of shoe, together producing 50,000,000 pairs a year.

14 Tanneries~ each specializing in one particular type of leather, producing 25,000 sides and skins a day.

1 Rubber Heel and Sole Plant~ producing 135,000 pairs of heels and 35,000 pairs of soles a day.

1 Cotton Mill~ producing 7,000,000 yards of lining fabric a year.

59 Auxiliary Plants~ producing welting, dyes, chemicals, shoe boxes, shipping cartons, trunks, gloves, etc., to the value of more than $30,000,000 a year if purchased from outside sources.

INTERNATIONAL SHOES comprise more than 1,000 styles of footwear for men, women, children and infants. They are sold by more than 70,000 leading merchants, distributed throughout every state in the Union. Regardless of the brand you select, the style you prefer or the price you pay, International Shoes represent the greatest shoe value you can buy.

Apartment Hunters—

"What Facts About Apartments Should Want Ads Tell?"

$700.00 IN RENTAL MONEY

Each Week for the Best Answers

APARTMENT hunters! What facts about apartments should want ads tell? In your opinion, what Tribune Apartment-to-Rent Want Ads are the most effective in getting your attention—in making you want actually to see the property advertised?

Landlords and tenants for years have found the Tribune Want Ad section their most convenient meeting place. Owners and agents display their offerings here, where they know people will be hunting. Tenants, accordingly, shop here because of the extensive choice offered.

But why do some of these offerings attract more prospects than others? Why do some ads cause you to make a personal inspection and why do other ads fail to get your particular interest?

For the best entries submitted on this subject in accordance with these rules, the Chicago Tribune will award the following cash prizes:

One month's rent for the best entry from renters who pay less than $75.00 a month under their new leases.

One month's rent for the best entry from renters who pay more than $75.00 per month and less than $125, under their new leases.

One month's rent for the best entry from renters who pay more than $125 under their new leases, and up to a maximum of $500.

Here's All You Need to Do

1. Cut out or copy from the Apartment-to-Rent columns of the daily or Sunday Tribune not more than five Want Ads and mark them "Good."
2. Cut out or copy not more than three other Apartment-to-Rent Want Ads and mark them "Poor."
3. Write down the main points that you usually want to know about an apartment before taking the trouble to inspect it.
4. Note the coupon. Fill this in or write this same information on another piece of paper and attach it to the Want Ads which you have clipped or selected.

This offer is open to all apartment hunters who sign new leases for apartments at new addresses between March 16, 1930, and May 17, 1930, in Chicago and in the suburban territory included within a 40-mile radius of Tribune Tower. Tribune employes and their families are barred.

NOTE: You do not have to lease an apartment that has been advertised in the Chicago Tribune. Nor do you necessarily have to sign a lease this week to be eligible for an award.

This week's prizes will be selected from entries which are received in the Tribune office before 6 p. m. on Saturday, March 29, 1930.

IN ADDITION, there will be a Grand Prize awarded for the best entry submitted during the life of the contest, to be selected from ALL the weekly entries. This Grand Prize will be a sum equal to one full year's rent under the terms of the winner's new lease, up to a maximum of $2,400.00.

Judges will be appointed by the Chicago Tribune and their decisions will be final. In case of ties, duplicate prizes will be given. All awards will be paid in cash to winners, not to landlords or agents.

You need not buy the Chicago Tribune to compete. You may clip the Want Ads from the paper or you may copy them down on a separate sheet of paper. The Tribune may be examined at any of its offices or at public libraries free of charge.

Awards, weekly and grand prize, will be announced in the Chicago Tribune as soon as possible.

Entries should be addressed to "RENTERS' CONTEST NO. 2," the Chicago Tribune, Chicago, Illinois. The Tribune regrets that no entries can be returned, nor can correspondence be entered into on this subject.

Three Prizes Each Week

A cash sum equal to your rent for one month (up to $500.00) will be paid to you by the Tribune if your entry is adjudged the best in YOUR rental group. The groups are as follows:

1. Those who pay $75.00 or less rent per month.
2. Those who pay more than $75.00, but less than $125.00 rent per month.
3. Those who pay $125.00 or more rent per month. In this group the maximum amount paid will be $500.00.

Our Special Frigidaire HYDRATOR DEMONSTRATION will be continued all this week

Desserts and salads served . . . FREE recipe books . . . Stop in tomorrow . . . open evenings until 10 o'clock

Actual photograph of stalk of wilted celery before being placed in the Hydrator. This celery is tough, unpalatable, useless.

The same celery as it came from the Hydrator the following morning. The magic action of the Hydrator has restored the celery to its original state—fresh, crisp, delicious.

SPECIAL OFFER! until March 29th

During this special Hydrator demonstration, we are able to make an unusual special offer. This offer is available to all who purchase Frigidaires before 10 o'clock Saturday night. Ask for full details.

NEVER before has a Frigidaire demonstration attracted such crowds or created such enthusiastic interest. Hundreds of people have visited our showroom. Scores have placed orders for Frigidaire. Scores of others are planning to buy within the next few days. And now, for the benefit of those who couldn't attend last week, we're extending our demonstration until 10 P. M. Saturday, March 29th.

Don't miss it! We're showing exactly how the Hydrator works—how it insures positive results by combining proper circulation, proper cold and proper moisture—how it makes celery tender and brittle—how it adds crispness to lettuce—how it makes even wilted vegetables fresh again.

And, in addition to the Hydrator, we're also demonstrating the famous "Cold Control." We're showing how this simple device freezes ice faster—how it enables you to make scores of delicious new desserts that require extreme cold. Then, too, we've arranged a special display of Frigidaire cabinets in Porcelain-on-steel. And to make our demonstration complete, we're serving unusual salads and desserts made possible by the Hydrator and the "Cold Control." And we're giving our guests two new recipe books—one containing recipes for salads, the other recipes for desserts. Make it a point to attend our special demonstration tomorrow.

DE LA SALLE, JASPER REACH LOYOLA FINAL

ON THE WAY TO INTERSCHOLASTIC TITLES

Some significant moments in the interscholastic tournament which was held yesterday at Northwestern university. At the left, John Nonsowicz of Froebel High school, is soaring over the bar to win the pole vault with a mark of 12 feet 5 1-2 inches. In the center, Gott of Tulsa is pinning McCurdy of Ames and taking the 125 pound wrestling title. At the right, Roger Gibbon of Oak Park is winning the high jump with a leap of 6 feet 3-4 inch.

CHICAGO BOYS BEAT CAROLINA QUINTET, 39-20

Indiana Five Whips Spalding, 20-18.

BY HARLAND ROHM.

Jasper academy, a school of 90 pupils, down in the paw paw country in southern Indiana, will challenge De La Salle for the National Catholic prep school championship at Loyola university tonight. These two came through the four days of the tournament to stand out as the best of the 32 schools from 23 states which started Wednesday night on the trail that leads to a championship.

De La Salle institute is not only champion of the Chicago Catholic league, but last year defeated St. Stanislaus of Bay St. Louis, Miss., in the final game of this same tournament to win the national crown. Four of the veterans of last year's champions are back in the lineup. They moved impressively through their quarter and semi-final games yesterday.

Beat Bishop England.

In the semi-finals the Chicagoans romped away from a scrapping but small team from Bishop England High school of Charleston, S. C., to win 39 to 20. The score was not a real comparison, however, as De La Salle had run up a lead of 23 to 6 in the first two quarters.

Jasper academy was forced to the limit to win its semi-final game. It defeated Spalding institute of Peoria, Ill., 20 to 18 in the first overtime game in the tournament. De La Salle's game was one extreme in one-sidedness in a tournament. The Jasper game was other extreme in being as tight and hard fought as a basketball game can be.

Bishop England's little team won the applause of the crowd—the orange shirted youngsters becoming as popular as the St. Stanislaus lads—but it was more like a college playing a prep school and the cheers they got didn't add any points to their total. They couldn't cope with the tall and rangy Chicagoans who passed two short shots over the little fellows' heads.

Use Substitutes Freely.

Ed Krause, all-tournament forward last year, playing the pivot line in De La Salle's professional style of offense, hung up a new individual scoring record for the tournament in caging 11 baskets, none from as far away as the foul line, and one free throw for 23 points. This older of the two Krause brothers caged eight baskets and a free throw in the first half and was given a rest in the fourth quarter.

With the huge lead at the half, De La Salle began to substitute freely.

The last game brought a series of startling shrieks from whistle to gun.

Jasper got away in front on a couple of medium length shots by Durbin and Baker, and Peters hooked a shot through the hoop. A couple of free throws made the score 5 to 3, with Jasper leading at the quarter. Smith immediately tied it by taking a long pass under the basket and making it count.

Aubin Goes to Work.

Then Pewee Aubin came into the game and celebrated his entrance by stealing the ball and scoring on a long shot from the side. Baker added a basket from under the hoop, and after Smith had caged another sleeper on a long pass, Baker sank his own follow to give Jasper a 11 to 7 lead at the half.

Smith wasted no time at the start of the second half, Manning scoring a short shot and Peters a long one in a minute. From then on the game was neck and neck to the finish. Conqueror put Spalding ahead for the first time with a short shot, but Baker got a free throw and T. Aubin a short basket to put Jasper back in front by a point.

Manning scored from under the basket on a pass and little Oscar tied it with one of two free throws on Smith's foul. Four minutes were left to play and the lads were fumbling the ball badly, but not nearly as much as one might expect from the youngsters. Then Durbin took Snyder's pass, pivoted under the basket and

FROEBEL TAKES N. U. TRACK TITLE; CHISHOLM SWIM WINNER

Five Records Fall in Two Day Prep Competitions.

Froebel High school of Gary, Ind., yesterday won the track division of Northwestern university's annual interscholastic meet with 28¼ points.

The Hoosier squad, coached by Carl Olson, presented the all around strength that won the meet a year ago. The Gary school placed in seven of the ten events, winning three firsts, two seconds, one third, and a tie for third.

Oak Park finished second with 14½ points. Horace Mann of Gary was third with 8 points. Twenty-five teams broke into the scoring column.

Chisholm Swim Winner.

A new champion was crowded in the swimming meet when Chisholm, Minn., collected 27 points and nosed out Maine Township of Des Plaines. Des Plaines scored 26 points. The Chisholm squad placed men in seven of the nine events.

Tulsa, Okla., winner of the wrestling tournament last year, repeated yesterday by piling up 39 points. Fort Dodge, Ia., placed second with 21 points and Tilden followed in third place with 17. The Tulsa grapplers won in five of the nine individual events.

Five meet records and one national interscholastic mark were lowered during the two day meet in which 650 boys representing 75 middle western schools participated.

Swimmers from Minnesota were the largest contributors to the collection of records. The 300 yard medley relay team of Chisholm, Minn., lowered its own mark of 3:16.6, made a year ago, when it covered the distance yesterday in 3:14.6. The other tank mark to go by the boards yesterday was the 100 yard backstroke in which Paavola of Hibbing Minn., was timed in 1:04.2. The old mark of 1:04.6 was held by Fela of Akron, O.

Marks Set in Prelims.

In the preliminary events Friday, two swimming marks were shattered. Kerber of Maine swam the 220 yard free style in 2:19.2, which bettered the national interscholastic mark of 2:21, held by Al Schwartz, formerly of Marshall High school and now captain of the Northwestern swimming team. Viltaman of Chisholm swam the preliminary in the 100 yard breast stroke in 1:09, breaking the old mark of 1:10.6, held by Lemak of Detroit.

The only track record to be upset was the 12 pound shot put, in which Elser of Horace Mann of Gary tossed the iron ball 50 feet 8¼ inches. The former mark of 49 feet 11¾ inches was made by Sample of Webster Grove, Mo., in 1927.

Summaries:

Bill Mehlhorn Wins $15,000 Golf Tourney

Miami Beach, Fla., March 22.—[Special.]—Compounding a 74 and a 71 for the final two rounds William (Wild Bill) Mehlhorn, representing a club at Pensacola, Fla., won the $15,000 Lagorio open tournament here today with a 72 hole total of 285.

Mehlhorn was the leader at the end of the first 36 holes yesterday and he won the rich prize—the biggest open tournament award in the country—by a solitary stroke from Horton Smith of Cragston, N. Y., who achieved first honors in the tournament a year ago. Smith's rounds today were 70 and 73, for an aggregate of 286.

An eagle 3 on the 465 yard seventeenth saved the major portion of the purse to Mehlhorn, for Smith took a par 5 on this hole and each went one over par on the final hole. These two were the only pair in the running for first place going out for the concluding nine holes, and Smith was in front by two strokes up to the last three holes. Then Melhorn came with a rush and ended his task with a 3, 3, 5.

CORNELL BEATS MICHIGAN IN INDOOR TRACK

Ithaca, N. Y., March 22.—(AP)—Cornell's track and field team, joint holders with Penn, of the I. C. A. A. A. indoor crown, trounced Michigan of the Big Ten in a dual meet here tonight, 63 to 32. Lawrence H. Levy of Cornell broke the indoor intercollegiate record in the 16 pound shot put with a heave of 49 feet one inch. The old indoor record of 48 feet 8 inches was set in 1928 by Dave Adelman of Georgetown.

In the Wake of the News

OFFICIATING.

NOT serious as a disturbing factor, but a subject of discussion at the love feast following the Golden Gloves tourney, was the question of officiating at future intercity events. With highest regard for the sincerity and good faith of referees and judges in both cities, the consensus was the home team was likely to receive, on the average, a shade in official verdicts.

For instance, the visitors thought they should have received two decisions they did not get. Whether or not we agreed with them, they still thought so. At New York a year ago we thought we should have received two decisions we did not receive. Whether or not they agreed, we still thought so.

Is there any remedy? Probably not. If so, it will be attempted. Boxing, baseball and football officials, from time immemorial, have found it impossible to please every one. Furthermore, even the hypothesis on which the theory of a shade to the home team is based may be questioned. That theory is that the partisanship of the home fans influences officials subconsciously.

Yet one decision to which the visitors objected was unsatisfactory to a majority of our home crowd from its vocal manifestations. At New York a year ago one decision against Chicago was booed vociferously. These crowds are partisan, 'tis true, but surprisingly fairminded.

At the first intercity bouts here judges were brought from other cities. They were less satisfactory to the Gothamites than our regular judges.

To show how friendly was the discussion, one New Yorker said he would be willing to have Al Copeland of the New York News and Walter Eckersall of THE TRIBUNE, managers of the respective teams, act as judges in conjunction with the referee. Paul Gallico and Don Maxwell, respective sports editors, objected, each insisting his man would lean over backward in favor of the other fellow.

All of which shows that officiating is only a secondary detail to a great sporting event, which thus far has been conducted on all sides with a fine sense of sportsmanship.

JACK ELLIOTT.

Perhaps you remember a little chap with a thatch turning gray who seconded New York boxers in the intercity bouts last Wednesday night. As each boxer came to his corner at the finish he greeted him with a sunny smile and a pat on the shoulder, whether the boy was winner or loser. At the love feast following the bouts we congratulated him on the way he handled his charges. He smiled again that sunny smile in expressing appreciation of the compliment.

JACK ELLIOTT.

That chap was Jack Elliott, liaison man between the New York News and the team, of which he has complete charge and by whose members he is idolized. Later we learned his story.

Elliott once was a professional boxer, a clever man, but never of championship pretensions. When the war came he wanted to enter aviation, for which the requirements were collegiate standing or a degree. Popular with college men whom he had instructed, he was coached and prompted by them so he was accepted as of collegiate brand and had his many hours of solo flights.

After the war he became athletic supervisor of several organizations devoted to activities for boys and young men with whom he associates the entire year. He is boxing instructor at a New York college. He understands boys and young men. For recreation he takes occasional flights with his son, an army flight lieutenant.

PEORIA MANUAL WINS STATE PREP CROWN, 38 TO 25

Routs Bloomington in Last Quarter of Final.

Champaign, Ill., March 22.—[Special.]—Peoria Manual tonight emerged champion of the 762 high school basketball teams of the state which lined up two weeks ago in the big tournament of the State High School Athletic association.

Manual defeated Bloomington in the final game at the University of Illinois, 38 to 25. It was the final event in a sports drama in which at least 7,600 young players had taken part.

Peoria Manual, coached by Telfer Mead, a veteran of the Interscholastic coaching game, had competed in state tournaments before but this was the first time the title ever came its way.

Olney won a 27 to 18 victory over Beardstown to win third place.

Playing without two regulars, Myers and Hager, who were ill, the Beardstown boys fought gamely throughout the game but were unable to overcome the lead the Olney five piled up in the third period.

Score Tied in First Period.

Bloomington tied the score twice during the first quarter, but trailed, 8 to 3, at the close of the period. Clauss made two field goals and Benton and Capt. Harms sank two free throws each to account for Manual's points. Argo made a basket and Buescher a free throw for Bloomington in the first quarter.

In the second period, Peoria increased its lead to 8 points and left the floor with an 18 to 10 advantage. Midway in the second quarter, Schwartz, Manual's stocky running guard, fouled Argo when he was shooting, and the Bloomington player made the field goal and the two free throws, putting his team within 4 points of Peoria. Clauss shot two more field goals in this period, and Argo made his second basket.

Manual gained a point in the third quarter, leading at the end of the period, 25 to 16. Wolgemuth led the Peoria team in this period with two under the basket shots, and Clauss registered from midcourt. Argo, Cooke, and Aussperger scored from the field for Bloomington.

Bloomington Is Routed.

Manual outclassed Bloomington in the last quarter. Bloomington rallied at the start of the period and came within 5 points of the winners, but two baskets by Wolgemuth halted the rally. Wolgemuth scored four baskets in this period.

JACKSON "POISON" TO HOSE; CUYLER RUNS WILD ON BASES

New York Shortstop Gets Home Run, Double, Single.

BY EDWARD BURNS.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

San Antonio, Tex., March 22.—[Special.] — Unfortunately Capt. Travis Jackson of the New York Giants was not taken down with the measles before today's game between the Giants and the White Sox. If Travis had been kept away from the ball park the Sox would have whipped the Giants again. As it was the New Yorkers conquered by a score of 3 to 2.

All Jackson did to ruin the day for our boys was double, and score to tie the count in the second inning; knock out a homer to give his team a 2 to 1 edge in the fourth, and single to drive in Ott with the winning run in the ninth. He had another hit which did no harm. In the field he also was a wild man, accepting eight chances.

Ott Stars Also.

But Jackson was not the whole works at that. Ott not only amazed the Sox with two stabs off the far distant left field fence, but also started double plays on both occasions. Stunned Chicago baserunners couldn't believe their own eyes when they saw the said catches.

With all the Giants starring the Sox should have won in the eighth, and failing then should have accomplished their purpose in the ninth. But the punch was missing.

One gratifying feature was the pitching of Pat Caraway. He allowed only four hits in six innings, and two of these were in the Jackson collection. He looked mighty good all the way. Ted Blankenship finished the game. His best contribution was a homer, which tied the score in the eighth.

J. Smead Jolley didn't get away to such a good start in his first appearance against major league competition. He was a complete frost at bat, and the triple by Ott which led to the winning run in the ninth, went over his head, whereas the same Mr. Ott would have caught the same fly in his hip pocket.

How It Ended.

We'll tell you later about the way our boys were chilled in the eighth, but we may as well set down right here the manner in which the game ended. Kamm walked. Clancy sent a great drive to the long left field, and Kamm, unversed in the National league star circles, underestimated the talent of Ott. He was rounding second when Melvin made the catch and, although the Louisiana kid had miles to throw the ball, doubled Bill before he could get back to first. Berg walked, then Jefferies batted for Blankenship and popped to Jackson.

The same teams will play again tomorrow. Ted Lyons is scheduled to start for the Sox and Freddie Fitzsimmons is the probable choice of McGraw.

The Sox lost no time in producing the first run of the game. Hunnefield hit the first pitch to the score board for a triple and scored on Cissell's single to center. Reynolds fouled to Hogan, Jolley flied to Ott and Reese threw out Watwood.

The Giants tied the score in the second inning and incidentally gave Kamm a chance to take off a few excess pounds. After Ott had popped to Cissell, Jackson doubled off Kamm's bosom and scored when Farrell skidded a single past Kamm. Watwood drew an error where he juggled the ball, permitting Farrell to reach second. Hogan's sacrifice fly to Reynolds put Farrell on third, where he died when Walker struck out.

Ott Makes Leaping Catch.

In the Sox third there was much excitement, but no scoring. Caraway beat out a hit to Reese, held on while Hunnefield flied to Fullis and stopped at second on Cissell's single left. Reynolds drove the ball 400 feet to right field fence, but Ott made a beautiful leaping catch. Caraway had rounded third and Cissell second when Ott speared the ball. Ott threw to first too wide to double Cissell, but Terry threw to Reese at second and Caraway was called out because Caraway

Kiki Steals Second, Then Scores on Infield Hit.

BY IRVING VAUGHAN.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Los Angeles, Cal., March 22.—Drastic methods were employed by the Cubs to attain another exhibition triumph over the Angels today. They uncorked homers and other hits of various dimensions to shave down an early lead gained by their minor league brethren and finally got the winning tally across because Hazen Cuyler showed that it is possible to reach the plate from second base on an infield hit. The final count was 5 to 4, giving the major leaguers their third win in five engagements with the locals.

The Angels refused to be awed by the speed balling of Pat Malone. They accepted him as a long sought friend, and during his five round workout plastered him with four runs and eight hits. Malone apparently is not ready for serious engagements. After he had finished, the pitching task was turned over to Charley Root, and while the latter had his troubles, he managed to finish without letting the enemy molest the scoring pan.

Wilson Leads Hitters.

The attack exploded by the Cubs found Hack Wilson an active performer, but it so happened that his only profitable blow was a homer with the sacks vacant. Prior to that he had peeled off two singles which proved of no value. Hornsby and Stephenson also were impotent, but their oversight was of no consequence. The burden was handled well by Lester Bell, who offered a timely double; Malone, who turned in with a single that drove a mate home, and Zack Taylor, who took a healthy swing and hoisted the ball across the limits of the playing arena.

Only a few minutes of the day's toil had elapsed before discovery was made that Malone's fast ball wasn't quite itself. The Angels nicked him for two runs in the first inning. Moore, last year a Cub, lined a single to center with one out. Sigafoos was tossed out by Hornsby, but George Harper, who is one of the few men boasting a piece of the big league record of three homers in one game, directed one of Malone's offerings over the right field screen for two tallies.

Rally of No Avail.

The Cubs started off in the second round as if they had serious intentions of doing things on their own account, but they were only kidding. Wilson opened the inning with a single. Cuyler also hit one and continued to second when Statz fumbled. Meanwhile, Hack rumbled to third. The attack folded up when Stephenson fouled to the catcher, and Bell popped to the second sacker. Zack Taylor was passed, and the rally blew up when Malone lined to Harper in right.

In the second inning, the Angels again took advantage of Malone, this time for one run. Arnold Statz, who once patrolled the territory now assigned to Hack Wilson, set this affair going by doubling to the bleacher in right center. He scored on a single by Dittmar.

Hornsby and Wilson uncorked singles to no avail in the third, but better results were obtained in the fourth round with a series of safe smashes. Two Cubs crossed the counter during this assault. It began with Delaney giving a pass to Stephenson. Lester Bell's double put Stevie on third. Taylor flied to Statz and Stevie ran home after the catch. Malone let loose a single, which scored Bell. After Beck's demise, Grimm doubled Malone to third, but Hornsby neglected to lend assistance to the two runners.

Hack's Homer Ties Score.

Because of the industry of Mr. Wilson, the Cubs went into a 3 to 3 tie in the first half of the fifth. Hack hoisted a ball over the left field barrier just inside the foul line. In the home portion of the same chapter the Angels jumped back into the lead by scoring on a single by Haney and two bagger by Moore. Then the tie was restored when Zack Taylor clicked a homer into the bleacher spaces while Ballou was pitching in the sixth.

Cuyler's burst of speed that not only awed the 3,000 natives but also

TEXAS ACADEMY BEATS ST. JOHNS FOR CAGE TITLE

Northwestern Cadets Win Consolation.

Madison, Wis., March 22.—[Special.]—A quick breaking, hard driving team from Terrill Prep school, Dallas, Tex., made the national academy basketball championship safe for Dixie tonight by overwhelming St. John's Military academy of Delafield, Wis., in the final game of the three day tournament, 26 to 10. Coach Harry Faulkner's Texans led, 12 to 3, at the first half.

St. Johns made its only threat of the game after Taylor's basket and Erwin's free throw had given Terrill a total of 15 points. McDevitt scored from close in and Gaeslen netted a free throw on Harrison's foul. Wittenberg came through with a follow shot and Williams slipped under the hoop for a field goal on an out of bounds play, making the count 15-10 as the third period ended.

Terrill Steps Out.

Terrill's smooth six footers got to work in earnest in the last quarter, however, and Erwin, Taylor and Capt. Fagan flipped in baskets from the free throw line to make it 21-10. Harrison got a free throw following which Taylor and Fagan again drove under the net for a pair of field goals. St. Johns went scoreless in the concluding period, when the effects of three previous games to their opponents two was reflected in their play.

Fagan with four baskets and Taylor with three baskets and a free throw led the Terrill march, while Fagan and Hall were defensive aces. Williams, an accomplished dribbler, played the floor well and got a pair of goals for the Wisconsin team, which was playing in the finals for the first time in four visits to the meet.

Harvard Loses Consolation.

The Consolation championship went to Northwestern Military and Naval academy at Lake Geneva, Wis., which tallied in the last quarter to beat the Harvard school of Chicago 16-12. Harvard led throughout the game until the last period was half over, when Northwestern tied the count at 12 all. Nelson and McNeil added the winning field goals. Championship score:

MOOSEHEART WINS TRACK

Scoring five first places in eleven events and placing in nine of them, Mooseheart academy of Mooseheart, Ill., captured the national academy track championship with a total of 41 points.

Culver, which also garnered five firsts but did not fare so well in the supplementary places, finished a strong second with 37¼. St. John's Military academy of Delafield, Wis., scored 14, Shattuck school, Faribault, Minn., 11¾, and De Paul academy of Chicago totaled 6. Milwaukee university school, Racine college, and Northwestern of Lake Geneva, Wis., failed to earn a point.

The broad jump record of 22 feet ¼ inch, set by Dick Rockaway when he attended Culver in 1926, was eclipsed by Hendrix of Mooseheart, who leaped 22 feet 3 inches. It was a grand slam in the broad jump, scored late in the meet, that gave Mooseheart a commanding lead and virtually clinched the championship. Bowers of Mooseheart, who won both high and low hurdles, and was third in the 40 yard dash, took individual honors with 11 points. Summaries:

Big 10 Trio Teamed with Loyola's Murphy, Notre Dame's Smith on All-Western Five DEFENSE STAR

ED SMITH.

BY FRED YOUNG.
[Midwest official.]

Two members of Purdue's champion basketball team—Stretch Murphy and Johnny Wooden—were named on the Big Ten honorary quintet for the simple reason they couldn't be kept off. That same reason governs in the selection of an all-western five, for who have more right to recognition than the elongated Murphy and the flashy Wooden?

Along with this pair, Branch McCracken of Indiana is retained from the all-conference team. Murphy, of course, is placed at center, Wooden at guard and McCracken at forward, the same positions they were allotted on the Big Ten honor five.

Two Nonconference Men.

The two from outside the Western conference who merit places are Charles "Feed" Murphy, Loyola university's scoring machine, and Ed Smith of Notre Dame, the backbone of George Keogan's Ramblers. It still is a moot question which Murphy is the greater basketball player. Smith has been all-western choice for two years, and his third season was his best, all things considered.

These players form a combination strong in every department. And there is no lack of height.

As basketball grows each year, more and more good basketball is played throughout the middle western sector.

Butler Pair Earn Praise.

Hildebrand and Hosier of Butler are two athletes who would have ranked high had they been able to play out the year. Hildebrand was disqualified in January for professionalism and Hosier was graduated in midyear. Butler was a great team with these two boys on it.

Don White, one of Purdue's greatest athletes, produced another champion five at Washington university and developed three sterling performers in Meyer, Sauselle and Springer. Meyer is given a place on the third team. Sauselle and Springer rank close to the Bears' captain.

St. Louis university had two fine performers in Strong, forward, and Joyce, guard, while the Grove brothers of Michigan State, Andrews, King and McEligott of Marquette all gave a splendid account of themselves. Cord Lipe's Marquette team, incidentally, improved with each performance.

Two Wesleyan Stars.

Capt. Clyde McQueen of Bradley is a great center, and both Billy Meehan and Rheas of Illinois Wesleyan are outstanding basketball players.

The two Murphys, McCracken, Wooden and Smith would comprise a basketball team that could take care of itself in any company. Notre Dame did not have the material of recent years, and to Smith is due much of the credit for the showing the team made this season.

Placing Smith at guard relegates Gaga Mills, Illinois leader, to the second team where he is paired with the shifty Chmielewiski of Wisconsin. Wes Fesler, Ohio State's clever guard, is paired with Capt. Donovan of Notre Dame, another clever youth, on the third team.

There is little to choose between the teams. Any one of the three could represent any major institution with credit.

Chicago A.B.C. Veteran Turns in 714 Score

Cleveland, O., March 22.—[Special.]—Harry Omsberg, veteran of 20 national pin meets, chalked up the high three game total of the American Bowling congress tourney here today when he battered the maples for a 714 total on games of 220, 278, and 216. The Chicagoan, a member of the Live Stock Press team, shot the high three game score in the doubles.

Omsberg was paired with Joe Gauer, but the latter was unable to give his partner any real help, getting 133, 195, and 214. However, the pair took seventh place in the doubles with a 1,256 mark.

Omsberg had a chance to annex the all-events lead. He shot 618 in the team event, with games of 236, 211, and 171, and had a 1,332 total going into the singles. He opened with 200, but an array of splits and one error in the final game gave him scores of 166 and 146 for a 512 total. His aggregate count of 1,842 just missed a berth among the high ten.

J. Truhler and B. Stewart, Toronto, took eighth place in the doubles; O. Craven, Flint, Mich., fifth in the singles with a 690, and L. Jackson, Syracuse, ninth in all the events with 1,860. Ray Campbell shot three consistent games, 204, 224, and 211, to top the Chicago bowlers in the singles. Scores of Chicagoans:

CLEVELAND GOES HOME ONE UP ON ROCHESTER

Rochester, N. Y., March 22.—(AP)—Cleveland, holders of the world's pro basketball title, gave Rochester an 18 to 13 trimming here tonight, to go back to their home floor with a 2 to 1 advantage in games in the American league playoff series. Topped by the play of Pete Barry, with three field goals, and Carl Husta with 7 points on two field and three foul tries, the Rosies went along to win in a romp, as Rochester's shots would not connect.

The home club was held without a counter for the first thirteen minutes of the second half, and not till Manny Hirsch, sub, was sent into the game did the home boys tally. Hirsch came through with 3 points, all of his team's total, in the second period. Lineup:

fetched across the winning run in the seventh began when he stole second after drawing free passage off Ballou. Stephenson also walked. Bell then scratched a slow roller toward third, and Haney rushed into scoop it up. Before the throw was made, Cuyler had rounded third and was tearing for the plate. He was home before Haney's throw reached Jacobs at first. Bell beat the ball for a single.

Support Aids Root.

Largely because of a pickup by Bell the Angels didn't reach Root for at least one run in the eighth. Cuyler backed up against the fence for a long fly by Harper. Jacobs doubled off the wall in left and went to third on Statz' infield out. Dittmar walked. Hannah was next, and he got Root into a hole. But Charley finally tossed one of his dinky curves, and it rolled leisurely toward third. Bell scooped it up with his glove while running full speed, and shot it to Grimm in time to end the session.

The Angels are on tomorrow's program, and for at least part of the game will be given an opportunity to try their hitting skill against Guy Bush. That was Manager McCarthy's plan this evening, but he has a habit of changing his mind at the last moment.

Woody English still was on the inactive list today as the result of the charley horse that forced him to quit yesterday. It is only a mild attack and he expects to resume work in one to three days.

STOP HOLIDAY MEETS.

Champaign, Ill., March 22.—(AP)—Because of financial losses at big twelve Christmas holiday basketball tournament the past two years, coaches of the preparatory conference voted to discontinue the event at a meeting here today.

JACKSON'S FOUR HITS LEAD GIANTS TO WIN OVER SOX

had failed to touch third on his reverse trip.

The Giants assumed a 2 to 1 lead after two were out in the fourth. Terry flied to Jolley and Ott fanned, but Jackson got hold of one and knocked it over the left field fence. Kamm then threw out Farrell.

A perfectly good double by Kamm went to waste in the last of the fourth. Jolley fanned and Watwood flied to Leach. Kamm doubled off the fence in left, but died when Clancy fanned.

A double play again blighted Sox activities in the fifth. Berg singled to left. Caraway attempted to sacrifice but forced Berg at second. Hunnefield singled off Farrell's glove; Caraway stopping at second. Cissell then hit into the double play.

Blankenship took over the pitching job in the next inning and got in much trouble, though he escaped eventually. Ott singled through the box and stopped at second when Jackson singled to left. The runners moved forward on Farrell's sacrifice bunt. Hogan walked, filling the bases, then Genewich hit into a double play, Kamm to Berg to Clancy.

Blankenship, first up in the last of the eighth, got his homer over the left field fence to tie the score. Hunnefield beat out a hit to Jackson. Cissell beat out a bunt to Farrell. Hunnefield reached third and Cissell second when Farrell picked up the ball and threw it into right field. That put runners on third and second with nobody out. Reynolds grounded to Jackson and the base runners held on. Jolley tapped to Reese and Hunnefield was down between third and home, Reese to Hogan to Farrell, Cissell taking third and Jolley second. Genewich threw out Watwood.

15 HORSES RACE TODAY; $100,000 PRIZE AT STAKE

Victorian Favored to Win Agua Caliente Handicap.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

San Diego, Cal., March 22.—Victorian, Naishapur, Brown Wisdom or Dowagiac. If you like to string with the rest of the world when you play your money on a horse race—or Alexander Pantages, if you like a long shot. That's the way the 15 horse field for tomorrow's $100,000 added one and one-quarter mile Agua Caliente handicap shapes up tonight.

Brown Wisdom shook up the dope Thursday when he made a one horse race out of the Broadway Limited, of 11-16 miles, to win by three lengths, with Naishapur fifth in the field of seven. That race dismissed Naishapur as a favorite for the $100,000 Caliente all age feature and reinstated Victorian as top choice

Record Favors Victorian.

Victorian will go to the post favored on his record. Carrying top weight of 126 pounds, the great little Warm stable five year old was at 2 to 1 in the overnight betting, with Naishapur and Brown Wisdom at 2½. As for Brown Wisdom, the Reichert colt at 11-16 miles is one horse and at 1¼ miles may be entirely another animal. The fraternity here always has thought so, although Thursday's race caused some to change their minds. Brown Wisdom never won a race at a mile and a quarter.

Naishapur's record is studded with victories over a route. Last year he won the Tia Juana Derby. He finished second in the Coffroth, lineal predecessor of the Agua Caliente handicap, and also was second in the Kentucky and American Derbies. In fact he has become noted as "the great second horse." After being kicked at the post in the American Derby and injured for six months as a consequence, Naishapur has been brought around slowly by Trainer John McKee.

Uluniu Rates on Last Race.

Uluniu made his bid for consideration in finishing fourth on Thursday, after being pushed around by Gold Rush at the start of the Broadway Limited. This Hawaiian bred horse will carry only 102 pounds and is to be ridden by Joe Redding. Uluniu won the Mardi Gras at New Orleans and ran away from as good a horse as Dowagiac.

Alexander Pantages has been regarded primarily as a sprinter, although he has won races at a mile and a sixteenth. He is in perfect condition and may surprise. Last year he was second in the stretch and then fell back to sixteenth.

Donnay Distance Runner.

Donnay won the New Orleans handicap not so long ago and has alternated with Uluniu in winning at the Fair Grounds track. He is one of the High Time colts, capable of carrying his speed over a distance.

With eighty original nominations at $100, 24 fees of $100 each for horses "declared in" on March 10, starting fees for 17 horses expected, the Jockey club's purse of $75,000, and purse of $10,000 to winning jockey and trainer, the big race is worth $112,400 to the winning horse. Second place nets $9,000; third, $4,500, and fourth, $1,500—$127,400 in all.

George Tisher of Butte, Mont., was the most sought after man here today. He had drawn Victorian in the Agua Caliente sweepstakes, the total prize for which will be about $50,000. Melvine A. Dwyer of Baltimore had drawn Naishapur. There were three winning tickets in the 'sweep' held by Chicagoans. Ben N. Anderson of 330 South Wells street drew Deep River, D. J. Hackett of 731 West Madison street had the ticket on Flying Past and E. Lanstot of Forest Park held the ticket on Heretiz. Each of the Chicagoans won money by holding a ticket on a horse that was nominated, but none will get a run in the rich race tomorrow.

WHERE HANDICAP STARS WILL RACE FOR $100,000 TODAY

The Agua Caliente race course, where the $100,000 Agua Caliente handicap will be run today. The buildings, left to right, are the two story paddock, the clubhouse, and the grandstand. Victorian, which carries top weight of 126 pounds, has been made 2 to 1 favorite to win the rich stake, with Naishapur, Brown Wisdom, and My Dandy at 2½ to 1. Brown Wisdom drew the fancy of many speculators by running away from a band of handicap eligibles in a test race Thursday.

scored and T. Aubin added one point on three free throws.

The game became a fighting scramble. With two minutes left Harding grabbed Peters' long pass under the basket and scored and with seconds to go was awarded a free throw on a foul in the next tipoff. He made it count, tying the score, and Peters missed a long shot as the gun sounded.

The overtime was hectic. Spalding continued to get the tip but nervous passes and interceptions kept the ball changing hands. Quinlan rimmed the basket with a hook shot and Atkins missed two free throws on Snyder's foul. Then Baker sneaked away from his guard to grab a pass at the foul line and sink the shot.

EASTERN COLLEGE FIGHT TITLE WON BY PENN STATE

Philadelphia, Pa., March 22.—(AP)—Winning individual titles in the 115 pound and light heavyweight divisions, Penn State's hard boxing team carried off the eastern collegiate championship at the Pennsylvania Palestra tonight for the second time in two years and the fourth time in the seven year history of the event.

CULVER POLOISTS WIN 12 TO 6 GAME FROM MAROONS

Culver, Ind., March 22.—[Special.]—Culver Military academy polo team defeated the University of Chicago this afternoon, 12 to 6. Held to a 4 to 4 count for the first two periods, the cadets scored almost at will in the last two periods. Hill, Culver No. 3, scored five goals, while Hinkle, No. 2 for the collegians, accounted for 4.

Hawks Launch Bid for Hockey Title Tonight

The Chicago Blackhawks open their bid for the world's hockey championship at the Stadium tonight when they engage Les Canadiens of Montreal in the first of a two-game series in the Stanley cup playoff. The second game of the series will be played in Montreal Wednesday night, and the total goals in both games decide the series.

The winner will play the victor of the New York Rangers-Ottawa Senators series, decided last night, to determine which meets the Montreal Maroons or Boston Bruins for the championship. These series started Thursday night.

The youthful Hawks, who surprised the hockey world by jumping from a tailender last year to second place this year, will enter this series, as they entered the regular season, the underdogs. They will be crippled by the loss of Marvin Wentworth, who is suffering from jaundice, and Harold March, tiny right wing, whose thigh was laid open by a skate a week ago.

Furthermore, the Hawks haven't beaten the Flying Frenchmen this year, though every one of their four games has gone into overtime. One game ended in a tie, while Les Canadiens won three.

The Flying Frenchmen boast probably the greatest hockey star of the present day in Howie Morenz, the husky and lightning fast center. Twice he beat the Hawks in overtime by literally blasting his way through the defense. Along with him works little Auriel Joliat, the smallest man in hockey, and Sylvio Mantha, one of the best defense men in the business. These are the stars, but Les Canadiens have plenty others to give the Hawks trouble.

Should tonight's game end in a tie, there will be no overtime, but the tie score will hold over to be decided at Montreal. In case the two teams should be tied in total goals at the end of that second game, play will continue in overtime until a goal decides the series.

Boston Sextet Wins 2d Game of Title Series

MONTREAL, Que., March 22.—(AP)—The Boston Bruins won their second Stanley cup series game from the Montreal Maroons here tonight, 4 to 2. The champions of the American and Canadian divisions of the National Hockey league played a scoreless first period, but the Boston sextet scored three times in the second, and once in the final. Both of the Montreal scores were made in the third period.

Clapper, sub wingman, made two of the Bruin goals. Barry and Oliver got the other two. Hooley Smith and Nels Stewart scored for Montreal.

Culver Legion Five Beats Michigan City for Title

La Porte, Ind., March 22.—[Special.]—Culver American Legion won the championship of the northern Indiana amateur basketball conference here tonight by defeating the Michigan City Indians, 25 to 23.

HENNEPIN BEATEN BY ST. PATRICKS IN K. OF C. GAME

De La Salle Quintet Whips De Soto, 41-34.

Hennepin, league champion, fell by the wayside last night as the climax to a quartet of upsets that marked the second round play in the Knights of Columbus basketball league title series at the Stadium.

A crowd of more than 9,000 saw the titleholders fall before the sharpshooting of St. Patricks from the central division, 27 to 9. St. Patricks jumped into an early lead and at half time held a 15 to 5 advantage, with every man on the quintet participating in the scoring. St. Patricks spent the second half protecting its lead with a remarkable exhibition of passing.

De La Salle eliminated De Soto, north division champion, 41 to 33. The contest was an uphill fight most of the way for the central section five, which trailed at the half, 19 to 14, but remarkable long shooting by Hooey, Flood, and Kenney pulled the team ahead in the closing minutes of the game. Then Ike Mahoney almost single handed brought De Soto back into the fight, caging two free throws in the last minute to tie the count at 33 all and send the battle into overtime.

In the extra period, De La Salle opened with a flurry. Flood, Merigold and Bird sinking long shots. Flood added another one for good measure just before the overtime ended. Mahoney, Hoey and Flood accounted for six baskets apiece.

Marquette proved no match for the speedy youngsters from Loyola-Hyde Park, who took a seven point lead at the start, permitted Marquette to tie the score and then pulled away to an easy 35 to 18 victory.

Aquinas staged another one of its typical games to move into the semi-finals at the expense of O'Connor, 24 to 13.

ALBERT R. GATES NAMED DICTATOR BY GOLF PROS

P. G. A. Seeks Voice in All Affairs of Game.

[By Associated Press.]

Baseball has its commissioner. The movie industry has its general director, and now comes the golf dictator.

Albert R. Gates of Chicago, long a leader in official golfing circles yesterday was made administrator of golf by the Professional Golfers's association, an organization of 2,202 leading golf instructors who govern the play on nearly half of the 5,649 golf clubs in the United States. The organization under the administration of Mr. Gates plans to enroll all the 3,158 professional golfers in the country and to seek a voice in all affairs of the game.

Commissioner Gates and his cohorts, far from planning any revolt from the constituted authorities of golf, such as the United States Golf association, will work with those bodies in keeping the game clean and sportsmanlike.

Has Many Qualifications.

The new arbiter has the qualifications gained in heading the Western Golf association four times as president, in 1907 and 1908 and again in 1921 and 1922, as well as in being secretary, in 1906. He has been a prominent lawyer for many years and is now a director in three banks. He was president of Calumet Country club 25 years ago, but is now connected with Skokie Country club on whose links Gene Sarazen won the national open title several years ago.

While head of the W. G. A. Mr. Gates often found himself in opposition in a friendly way with the United States Golf association, but several of the ideas he fought for were later adopted by the national body, and one of them recently by Great Britain. This was authorization of steel shafts for golf clubs. When the metal shafts were first produced the U. S. G. A. and St. Andrews turned thumbs down on them, declaring them mechanical aids.

Investigated Metal Shafts.

But Mr. Gates said he would find out before condemning the innovation. So he and the executive committee of the W. G. A. took Bob MacDonald, Jock Hutchison, Chick Evans, and a few other expert golfers to Edgewater club and had them drive several balls with both hickory and steel shafts. The results convinced President Gates and members of the executive committee that the steel shafts would not produce good shots from poor swings and they were admitted to tournament play. Later the U. S. G. A. accepted the metal shafts and more recently the British removed the ban.

Queerly enough, the metal shafts were opposed at first by the professionals, who have now chosen Gates as their dictator. They felt that part of their professional work would be supplanted by using metal shafts, but it did not turn out that way, as they were able to sell just as many clubs without having to make them by hand. Many professionals and such amateur stars as Bobby Jones still prefer hickory sticks for feel and distance.

Standing of Pros Advanced.

The Professional Golfers association has been progressing for many years, especially of late under the presidency of Alex Pirie of Old Elm club, Chicago. Since the day when Andrew Carnegie had to import a professional from Scotland to get tutelage in the game of his fatherland, clubs have sprung up everywhere and the ranks of the tutors have increased.

Likewise the standing of the professional has advanced since there was an open revolt at Midlothian club during the national open tourney of 1914 against treating the clubmakers like lackeys and barring them from the club house, an old English custom.

Now the professional has the same standing with his clients, pupils in golf and purchasers of golf supplies, as has any other merchandiser of knowledge of goods. His opinion is sought on virtually all subjects by officers of the club, and his social status is equal to that of any member.

DON POSTPONES FURTHER TRIALS UNTIL MONDAY

Daytona Beach, Fla., March 22.—(AP)—With beach condition showing no indications of immediate improvement the proposed attack by Kaye Don, British racing driver, on the world's automobile speed record of 231 miles per hour today was postponed at least until Monday.

Rain kept the driver in his hotel most of today. He declined to discuss further a difference of opinion that had existed between him and Louis Coatalen, designer of the car, over certain alterations ordered by Coatelin. Don declared the difficulties now had been ironed out.

Brodar, Serritella Play for Handball Title Today

Jack Broard, city champion, and Dr. William Serritella will meet this afternoon for the Illinois state singles handball championship at the Lake Shore Athletic club. The former advanced to the final by defeating Ralph Thorsen, 21-10, 17-21, 21-12, while Dr. Serritella won his semi-final match from Louis Nelson, 21-11, 21-3. Before the championship contest Nelson and Thorsen will play for third place at 8 o'clock.

Sixty-five players took part in the tournament which started Monday on the Lake Shore's six courts. The club this week will stage the state doubles championships, which open tomorrow afternoon.

Argentine Poloists Resume Play Against Midwicks

Los Angeles, Cal., March 22.—(U. P.)—The Argentines will ride against the Midwicks again tomorrow in continuation of the friendly feud between the two famous polo quartets. Victorious in ten games played on the Pacific coast during the last few months, the South American horsemen were favorites to defeat the club riders. The Argentines beat the Midwicks in the finals of the Pacific coast championships and the United States players have been anxious for a return match.

Two Bouts Top Boxing Show at White City

James C. Mullen, matchmaker at White City, has arranged an all star card of bouts embracing 40 rounds of boxing for tomorrow night at the south side arena.

The top half of the double windup will bring together King Levinsky, west side Jewish slugger, and Paul Swiderski, a Polish product from Syracuse, in eight rounds. Swiderski will be the highest class fighter Levinsky ever has met. According to some boxing fans, the Jewish boy has been a bit overmatched, but the former fish peddler is anxious to get ahead and believes Swiderski will be the stepping stone to a place at the top of the pugilistic ladder.

In the lower half of the windup Mullen has matched Charlie Retzlaff with Pedro Lopez, South American heavyweight. Retzlaff has gone forward rapidly and is one of the hardest punchers among the heavyweights. In thirteen professional fights, he has scored twelve knockouts.

Five other bouts will make up the program. In one of them Nisse Ramm will get another chance to show his Swedish friends just why he is called the heavyweight champion of Sweden. Art Maley will be in there to extend the Swedish invader.

French Lick, Ind., March 22.—(AP)—Joseph Hall of San Francisco, Pacific coast titleholder, clinched the national amateur three cushion billiard championship here today by defeating Frank I. Fleming of Champaign, Ill., 50 to 37, in 38 innings. It was Hall's sixth consecutive victory.

Sammy Levine Enters A. A. U. Boxing Meet

Sammy Levine, who won the secondary flyweight bout in the Chicago-New York Golden Gloves series, will be a competitor for the Central A. A. U. title in the annual tourney, which will be held at the Illinois Athletic club Thursday and Friday nights. Levine is the second Golden Glove star to enter, as Benny Goldblatt, present C. A. A. U. featherweight champ, will defend his crown.

Entries in the heavyweight class have exceeded previous records, according to Johnny Behr, athletic director at the I. A. C. Twelve of the bigger batters already are entered. John Molnar, Belle Plaine A. C. star, will be a contender, and other recent entrants are Robert Obert, Arne Anderson, Pete Kowal, Joe Fett and Johnny O'Brien.

A new contender is seen in the featherweight ranks with the entry of Billy Gladstone of Chicago. Gladstone holds two decisions over the present champion, Benny Goldblatt.

More than seventy-five contenders have entered the four divisions to be decided at the I. A. C., Behr announces. The divisions are the 122 pound, 126 pound, 160 pound and heavyweight classes. Brig. Gen. John V. Clinning, chairman of the state boxing commission, has been made honorary referee of the tournament.

ITALIAN COUNT, RACING DRIVER, KILLED IN TEST

TRIPOLI, Tripolitania, March 22.—(AP)—Count Gastone Brilliperi, one of the best Italian auto drivers, was killed today while testing his automobile over the route for the Grand Prix of Tripoli. His car got out of control and jumped from the road near Souk El Djouma, five kilometers from Tripoli. It crashed into a wall. The count died immediately.

Count Brilliperi won the Italian Grand Prix in September, 1925. He was badly injured in a race in Sicily in 1922.

Birds Begin Seasonal Race with Weather

BY BOB BECKER.

Spring has arrived in the great lakes district of North America, but down in Patagonia, South America, today there is typical autumn weather with cold, blustery winds and storms. This contrast in weather conditions above and below the equator is exerting an influence on a number of birds which soon will fly through Chicagoland.

Many of our shorebirds which hunters and other outdoorsmen get intimately acquainted with during the fall spend our winter season [the southern summer] in South America. During March the southern autumn is pushing them out of their loafing spots and starting them northward. The greater and lesser yellow legs, the plovers, the sanderling and the sandpipers winter in South America, and the quick changes of seasons keep them busy trying to fly one jump ahead of cold weather.

Not until we realize the difference in seasons between North and South America do we appreciate what a race the changing calendar forces upon these shore birds. Our northern fall drives them across the equator. When they reach the pampas of Patagonia the sandpipers frequently run into cold weather and severe storms which buffet them around and effectively shove them back northward until milder weather arrives. Then the southern summer gives them a period of rest.

In February and March they have to start north to escape the rigors of the southern fall. Right now thousands of these small shorebirds are hustling northward toward the equator.

Ornithologists have uncovered interesting facts about the goings and comings of our shorebirds by visiting South American regions to see where certain species live during our winter. For example it was found that the beautiful golden plover wintering in Uruguay becomes restless late in January, and some actually start for their North American nesting grounds the last week in that month.

CORD

Powered by Lycoming

INVITATIONAL WEEK

We did not choose to emphasize the exclusive advantages of the Cord front-drive car until people outside of our own organization had had opportunity and time to learn of its qualities through actual driving experience.

Never has a new automobile been introduced as conservatively, with such an absence of superlatives and exaggerated claims. This was intentional. Because, this new car is so radically different and so completely superior, had we published even part of the truth the public would not have believed it. Therefore the Cord car has been left practically unassisted to do its own selling. We expected this procedure to require much longer time than it has.

Today, in every state in the Union, Cord cars have been driven by owners for many thousands of miles. The result of this combined owner enthusiasm far exceeds our expectations.

We knew the Cord car had fundamental advantages, we knew how long and well it had been tested and proven, we knew its exclusive capabilities, but we completely underestimated how much its advantages would be welcomed and praised by those who could afford a car in this price class.

It is a source of inestimable satisfaction to us to have our efforts to provide a newer, safer, easier mode of transportation accepted and endorsed so enthusiastically. Without changing our conservative policy, we believe the time has now come to present the Cord car in its true colors. Cord owners will more than verify anything we say.

The Cord offers many exclusive advantages not obtainable in any other car. The Cord antiquates all other cars in its price class. Just as we predicted five years ago that Straight Eights would sweep the market, which prediction has come true, so now we predict that within five years practically every high priced car will be a front-drive. Owners of Cord cars are enjoying advantages today that will be offered by other manufacturers years hence.

The foregoing statements are emphatically made without reservation. This week has been set aside by all Cord stores as an opportunity for you to find out, for yourself, from the car itself.

New Orleans, La., March 22.—(AP)—Klingstone, far down the rating as a molder, took to the heavy going at Jefferson Park today, winning the Proteus handicap by five lengths from a classy field of routers.

Galahad of the Reuter stable was figured to have the race won when the heavy rains of the last 24 hours again made the track heavy, but when it came to the running Klingstone was much the best of the field. The 4 year old gelded son of Prince Galahad finished with a rush after being given a poor ride by Jockey Palumbo.

The winner, which carried the silks of P. S. Page, galloped over the mile and sixteenth in 1:56 3-5 and paid $8 for a $2 mutuel ticket. A length and a half back of Galahad at the finish trailed By Product under J. G. Demaree's colors.

Rutgers, Yale Swim Aces Break Marks

New Haven, Conn., March 22.—(AP)—Record breaking performances by George Kojac, Rutgers, and Capt. John Howland of Yale, and the upset defeat of the Rutgers' flash in the 50 yard event by Howland and Messimer, also of Yale, today marked the finals of the 24th annual individual championships of the Intercollegiate Swimming association held in Carnegie pool.

Howland successfully defended his title in the 50 yard sprint against his teammate Messimer and Kojac by clipping two-fifths of a second off the national intercollegiate record of 23 3-5 seconds. Kojac, however, partly made up for his surprising defeat in this event by winning the titles in the 100 yard swim and the 220.

The only man to capture two championships, the Rutgers star equaled the national intercollegiate record of 52.4-5 seconds in the 100 yard sprint to take the title away from Howland. Kojac also established a new Intercollegiate Swimming association record in winning the 220 yard event, covering the distance in 2:18 3-5. The old association record of 2:22 2-5 was made by Howland in winning the title last year. The Eli captain did not defend his title in this event.

The finals produced another surprise in the defeat of Brooks, Princeton, defending champion in the dive, by Grandy of Pennsylvania, who won first place and W. Manuel of Yale, who won second place.

Moles of Princeton retained his title in the 220 yard breast stroke, while Wohl, Syracuse and Ruddy of Columbia succeeded to the titles in the 150 yard backstroke and the 440 yard swim, respectively. Both these titles were held by Kojac, who did not participate in the events.

Harms, Fordham, won the championship in the 300 yard medley race, a new event on the association championship program.

ST. MONICA PLAYS ST. ELIZABETH IN FORESTERS' MEET

Two of the hardest fought games of the basketball championships being staged at St. Rita's High school gym by the Catholic Order of Foresters, are in prospect this afternoon as the cage teams swing into their semi-final round.

In the first title game, St. Monica, north section champion, meets St. Elizabeth, south division. The latter sprang the surprise of the tournament last Sunday by eliminating Harmony, west section champ, and should give the north siders plenty of trouble today.

Another good battle should result in the clash between St. Sabina, winner of the south division preliminary race, and Englewood, runnerup. Along with St. Elizabeth, these two teams came through with impressive victories last Sunday.

All of the west section finalists were put out of the race in the opening round, but, with St. Eugene, north section, they will begin consolation play this afternoon. Pairings:

4 p. m.—Lawndale [west] vs. Harmony [north].
5 p. m.—Associated Courts [west] vs. St. Rose [north].

SEMI-FINALS.

3 p. m.—St. Monica [north] vs. St. Elizabeth [south].
4 p. m.—St. Sabina [south] vs. Englewood [south].

Church A. A. Quintets Resume Series Tomorrow

The Church A. A. tomorrow will stage another of its series of championship basketball games at the Hyde Park High gym. The schedule follows:

8 p. m.—Bethany Presbyterian vs. Temple Beth Zion (girls.)
8:45 p. m.—Humboldt M. E. vs. Berwyn M. E. [heavies.]

RAIN HALTS TENNIS FINALS.

St. Augustine, Fla., March 22.—(AP)—The rainy finale in the annual southeastern tennis championship between John Doeg, Santa Monica, Cal., and J. Gilbert Hall, South Orange, N. J., were postponed this afternoon because of rain and heavy courts. The matches will be played tomorrow morning.

Siskin to Seek Juvenile Title on Chicago Tracks

BY FRENCH LANE.

If Epinard's first good American bred son Siskin is to win the 2 year old championship this year he must do it at the Chicago race tracks. For the son of the French stallion has few eastern engagements. He is not, for instance, in the Hopeful stakes at Saratoga nor in the Belmont Futurity.

Siskin hails from the Nevada Stock farm stable and while his breeding lines are probably less attractive than almost any other son or daughter of Epinard in this country, he won the Agua Caliente Futurity so brilliantly he look like a colt that might travel east after a winter campaign and beat the best juveniles of the season. Siskin's dam is Ruddy Light, a daughter of Honeywood. Master Charlie, the winner of the 1924 Futurity in Mexico, came east that year to win the revivals of the Coriorado, Hopeful, and Kentucky Jockey club stakes.

Five or six of the other sixteen youngsters outran Siskin in the early stages of the Agua Caliente Futurity. But Siskin, running like a champion, sped past them in the final quarter to win eased up by six length in front of Shasta Broom. He stepped five furlongs in 1:01 4-5, earned $10,980, and thus became the biggest juvenile money winner at the winter tracks. Reigh Count, Man o' War, nor Wichnever won a race more convincingly.

Because the Nevada Stock farm people failed to name him for the rich eastern 2 year old fixtures, Siskin will have to seek his fame in Chicago and in Kentucky. He is eligible for the Kentucky Jockey club stakes late next fall. A victory in that fixture will place him among the leading 2 year olds of the year, but it will be in the revivals of the 2 year old fixtures at the Chicago tracks where he will have to prove that he is a superyoungster, just out of luck, because his owner and breeder didn't name him for the old fixtures in New York and Maryland.

Women are going to cut quite a wide swath in Chicago turf affairs this season. Their colors will be prominent at all the Chicago tracks. Roy Carruthers, executive director at Arlington Park is the first to announce the names of the feminine applicants for Arlington Park stalls.

This list includes Mrs. Helen Hay Whitney, Mrs. Charles Amory, Mrs. R. Penn Smith, Mrs. Henry C. Phipps, Mrs. F. Ambrose Clark, Mrs. Katarine Elkins Hitt, Mrs. L. G. Kaufman, Mrs. Thomas Somerville, Mrs. J. Simpson Dean, Mrs. George Sloan, Mrs. Mary L. Crawford, Mrs. Wilfred Viau, Mrs. Walter M. Jeffords, Mrs. William Zeigler Jr., Mrs. John D. Hertz, and Mrs. Graham Fair Vanderbilt.

Mrs. Whitney has been racing longer than any of the other women. Her Greentree stable has been up near the leading establishments of the country for almost a decade. She is a daughter of the late John Hay, once private secretary to Abraham Lincoln, later ambassador of the United States to the court of St. James, and who also served as secretary of state. She is the widow of the late Payne Whitney.

Mrs. Vanderbilt, Mrs. Hertz, and Mrs. Phipps are among the luckiest women who ever took part in racing. Mrs. Vanderbilt with Sarazon, Mrs. Hertz with Reigh Count and Anita Peabody, and Mrs. Phipps with Diavolo, Distraction, Nixie, Dice, and others.

Mrs. Jeffords, of course, has gained her fame through the sons and daughters of Man O' War, Bateau, Mars, Scapa Flow, Edith Cavell, and Florence Nighingale being some of them.

No longer will the $13,000,000 "jinx" be a barrier in the progress of the American turf. For there seems every assurance the tracks in the American unit will distribute more than $14,000,000 in purses and stakes in 1930.

Four times in recent years the owners of American race tracks have threatened to give away more than $14,000,000 in purses and stakes. Last year the total was $13,417,827. In 1928 it was $13,332,361. In 1927 the high water mark was reached when the purse and stake money totaled $13,935,610. In 1926 the distribution was $13,854,820.

The tracks which contributed to the huge purse fund were all those in the United States, Canada, Mexico, and Cuba. The same American unit exists this year, but the powerful comeback of racing in Chicago, increased purses in New York, Cuba, and Agua Caliente, and Florida's elaborate program will make it possible for the $14,000,000 mark to be surpassed.

STAGG TOURNEYS BRING MEMORIES OF GREAT GAMES

Meet April 1 to 5 Pairs Country's Best Preps.

The annual high school basketball classic, A. A. Stagg's national interscholastic championship, to be staged in Bartlett gym at the University of Chicago April 1 to 5 is drawing near. And with it come memories of former tournaments in which "kids" battled like men, took their victories graciously and didn't crab in defeat.

A spectator at this tournament recalls the "junior league of nations" from Cicero, Ill.—famed from coast to coast as the lair of Chicago's gunmen—which won the championship two years ago. Poland, Lithuania, Bohemia, Sweden, Ireland, and possibly other countries were represented on that team which won the national prep school championship, and won it as sportsmen, regardless of what the rest of the world may think of Cicero.

Other Pictures Bob Up.

Other pictures bob up on the screen of the mind. The Carr Creek, Ky., team of a couple of years ago, which practiced on a dirt floor and brought the cheers of the spectators when they came on the hardwood of a great university. The Vienna, Ga., team, which seemed dogged by hard luck for two or three years, losing out by a point or two when it seemed slated for the finals, at least.

And last year, where the mental pictures still are undimmed by time! The gallant team from Joes, Colo., a town so small it isn't marked on even the biggest maps. The five tall lads from the Rocky mountain state went through to the semi-finals and then won third place. And again the brilliant Classen High school team of Oklahoma City, with the lean, white faced floor guard, Andy Beck.

Fans Remember Andy Beck.

Any one who saw Andy Beck direct his team will not forget his brilliancy any more than he'll forget little Red Scallon from somewhere on the north Pacific coast several years ago. Scallon averaged [and that word should stand in capitals] something like ten baskets for every game he played. The exact figures escape, for these are memory pictures. But the generalship of Capt. Andy Beck on the floor of Bartlett gym, a lean hook-nosed lad who was as valuable to his team as the spark plug is to a gas filled cylinder in a gasoline engine, stood out just as much.

Back comes the memory of those tall lads from Athens, Tex., who took the national championship to their town of 3,176 last year. The Thompson brothers, all over six feet one, who ranged through the tournament to make the final last year all southwest when they met Classen of Oklahoma City in the final. And Athens won, 25 to 21, in as fine a game of prep basketball as one could ask to see.

Athens will be back this year, along with Denton, Tex., another tiny town which has turned out a great team. Athens beat Denton three times this year, but the Hornets played raggedly in the state semi-finals, losing to Denton, 24 to 19. Jimmy Kitts, coach of Athens, believes his present team is better than last year's quintet. Both of them will be in this year's tournament, which is color in itself.

All Imbued with Fight.

Along with them will come Savannah High school of Georgia, and Jacksonville, Fla., and others from other corners of the wide expanse of the United States. By defeating the best teams in their section, all of them have won the right to compete in musty old Bartlett gymnasium—which twenty years ago was considered a marvel of athletic architecture.

The lads will come in from Metropolitan cities, from tiny towns in the hills and valleys, all of them imbued with the optimism and the "fight" of youth. They'll play good basketball for nearly a week and some one will be champion, but whoever it is they'll be worthy of it. Old Bartlett gym will have more memories in the making when those "kids" line up for the tipoff.

The teams entered from the various sections are as follows:

SOUTH.

Robert E. Lee, Jacksonville, Florida State and "Big Ten" champions; Lakeland, Florida State runner-up; Jena, Louisiana champions; Spartanburg, South Carolina champions; Braselton, Georgia champions; Denton, Texas champions; Athens, Tex., defending national champions; John Reagan High, Houston, Tex., state semi-finalists; Durham, North Carolina, state champions; Homewood, Miss., state champions; Linsley institute, Wheeling, W. Va.; Savannah, Georgia Interscholastic Athletic association champions; Roanoke, Virginia champions; Clovis, New Mexico champions.

EAST.

Chelsea, Massachusetts champions; Burlington, Vermont champions; Waterloo, New York.

FAR WEST.

Whitepine County, Nevada champions; Rexburg, Idaho champions; Chinook, Montana champions.

MIDLEWEST.

Lankin, North Dakota Consolidated High School league champions; St. John's Military academy; Morgan Park High school, Chicago league runner-up; South High, Minneapolis champions; St. Mary's High school, Iowa City, Ia.

AMONG THE FOLKS IN HISTORY

NOBODY'S BUSINESS

by Westbrook Pegler

IT SAYS in the papers that old Clark Griffith, proprietor of the Washington baseball club, received many letters from people signing themselves "Faithful Fan," demanding that he do the right thing by Goose Goslin, one of his employees, and threatening to withdraw their business from his turnstiles should he fail to do this.

Just what would be the right thing to do by this Goslin, I do not presume to say, having heard some people remark that they would like to do one thing and other people express a wish to do something quite else. But I must have astonished old Mr. Griffith to learn that he had so many faithful fans in his clientele, and any baseball magnate who has lived through as many lean seasons as Griffith has undoubtedly would be pleased to meet them and give due consideration to their wishes.

Some Owners Skeptical of Their Fidelity.

It is just barely possible that the people who write letters to the owners of baseball clubs, signing themselves "Faithful Fan" and demanding one thing or another involving no little expense to the owner, are not as faithful as they profess to be. Some club owners are quite skeptical about the fidelity of such people, especially at times when their teams are losing ball games and playing to crowds of 435 people, including complimentaries.

The case of this Goslin is a curious thing, and I have a serious doubt that the combined gross patronage of all the faithful fans who wrote or wired to Mr. Griffith demanding that he do the right thing would have equaled the amount of Mr. Griffith's money which they wished to vote over to the young man involved. Even if there were five dozen of them, their daily contribution at the turnstiles would be only $60. They were demanding $17,000 for the Goose, as against Mr. Griffith's bid of $10,000, a difference of $7,000, and they would have to attend about 116 ball games en masse to reimburse him. Just as an offhand, irresponsible guess, I would suggest that there isn't one fan as faithful as that in the entire clientele of the Washington ball club, nor sixty of them in the combined followings of the two major leagues.

Throwing Arm Unhinged, Ghost Tosser Necessary.

This Goslin used to be a high grade ball player, but two years ago his throwing elbow came unhinged, and he lost some games through his inability to return the ball after catching the same. Most of that season he required the services of a ghost to do his throwing, and several other youths on the club developed dogtrouble performing the leg work necessary in this remarkable situation.

Mr. Goslin would catch a fly ball with runners on base, and after the catch the runners would let out jubilant yells and start going places. The Goose, unable to throw the ball, would run in, and the boys who happened to be playing nearest him would run out to meet him. By dividing the distance and tossing the ball the last intervening six or eight feet, they often held the runners to an advance of two stations all around.

It was an annoying state of affairs, but Goslin was hitting with splendid vigor, so Mr. Griffith let him play on. The next season the young man's arm was better, but then, it seemed, something happened to his vision or his rhythm or both, for his hitting fell off and again he was little more than half the athlete that the terms of his contract presumed him to be.

Threats May Be Safely Ignored in All Cases.

So this year Mr. Griffith thought there ought to be some readjustment of handicaps. His pay checks had assayed one hundred cents to the dollar throughout the time when Goslin's work was running about 65 cents worth. Mr. Griffith therefore offered $10,000. The Goose said he never had been worse insulted. Mr. Griffith said, "You will be soon if you don't sign now." The faithful fans began to declare themselves, and great was the excitement in Biloxi, Miss., where the Washington ball team trained.

Fortunately, it is no concern of mine whether Goslin gets what he wants or Griffith alienates the customers who want the right thing done by the Goose, but I have been observing these rebellions on the letter writing and petition signing type of baseball customers for some time in various situations and believe these threats may safely be ignored in all cases. The baseball customer is like a subway patron in the respect that he wouldn't be a customer if he could find any better value somewhere else for the same amount of money.

There was a noisy uprising of the faithful fans in New York in the off-season when the Giants' firm, for reasons which never were stated and needn't be staged under any law that any one has been able to discover, traded Rogers Hornsby to the Boston Braves.

Vow They'll Quit Giants, but Business Holds Up.

It comes back to me that indignant individuals calling themselves faithful fans of the Giant club organized marching clubs and ladies' auxiliaries and devised a kind of Ku Klux vow never to slide a dollar bill across the shelf for a ticket to one of John McGraw's spectacles again. But the Giants have played to appropriate business ever since then, the volume of trade being regulated strictly by the weather, the current attraction and the present state of the team in the league standings. The boycott which began so passionately seems to have vanished from the situation like cigaret smoke which hangs momentarily in the still air of the grand stand, then blows away.

Mr. Sam Breadon's St. Louis firm was to have been shunned, too, and for the same reason, but two years after the faithful fans had sworn their oaths to remember Rogers Hornsby and avenge him at the turnstiles Mr. Breadon was hard pressed to explain to his many disappointed patrons that the tickets for his world series games were all sold out again.

I quite understand that the contract between the player and the owner in the baseball business is no contract on the owner's part at all, but there are many other classes of employés who are no less deserving and much worse off, so I seldom grow indignant over the troubles of the players any more. Quite likely, the firms are paying all the wages they prudently can in a business where the product retails for a dollar-ten. In fact, the wonder is that prices to the customer have not gone up, considering that it costs from $2 to $50 to see a prize fight with no guarantee of a contest, $2 or $3 to see a day's play in a golf or tennis tournament, and from $3 to $15 to go to the races in corresponding style.

Bill Frey Wins First Heat of Outboard Motor Races

Palm Beach, Fla., March 22.—(AP)—Bill Frey, Madison, Wis., late today led a field of 22 speedy outboard motor boats to win the first heat of races for the Sir Thomas Lipton $25,000 trophy. Frey piloted his Century Hurricane over the five mile course in seven minutes and 30 seconds. Col. S. Tocy, owner and driver of Miss Cello was second, and Eugene Knight in West Palm Beach Baby was third. The lake was rough, causing at least a dozen spills.

BRAVES SWAMP YANKEES, 11 TO 2; BABE HITS ONE

Boston Piles Up 14 Blows Against N. Y.

St. Petersburg, Fla., March 22.—(AP)—The Boston Braves buried the New York Yankees under an avalanche of base hits today to win, 11 to 2. The two tallies of the Yanks came in the third off southpaw Ed Brandt, when Koenig doubled and Babe Ruth drove out his second home run of the exhibition season.

Six hits in the fourth gave the Braves four runs and a safe lead but they piled five more on top of their advantage in the eighth. Score by innings:

New York [Amns.]	002	000	000—	2	5	1
Boston [Nats.]	011	400	05*—	11	14	2

Batteries—Polli, Rhodes and Hargrave and Bengough; Brandt, Selbold and Spohrer and Collins.

FRISCH WORKS AT THIRD.

Bradenton, Fla., March 22.—(AP)—With no exhibition on their schedule for today, Manager Street of the Cardinals put his charges through a long practice session and announced he was well satisfied with the players' condition. Frankie Frisch worked out at third base today, with Sparky Adams, late of Pittsburgh, at Frisch's old station at second. Street, however, was not yet ready to say whether Frisch will be moved to third permanently.

The Cardinals will go to Sarasota tomorrow for a game with the Indianapolis American association club. Bill Hallahan, the southpaw, will be Street's starting pitcher.

RAIN STOPS ROBINS.

Tarpon Springs, Fla., March 22.—(AP)—A heavy downpour of rain in the first half of the fifth inning stopped the hostilities between the Brooklyn Dodgers and the Toronto Maple Leafs of the International league today. The Dodgers were trailing 2 to 1 at the end of the fourth but were in the midst of a rally, having scored three runs, when a halt was called.

Clarence Blethen and Kent Greenfield toiled on the mound for the National leaguers while Fisher and Harrison divided the hurling for the Canadians.

BROWNS BEAT BUFFALOS.

West Palm Beach, Fla., March 22.—(AP)—With Red Kress and Heinie Manush in their lineup for the first time this season, the St. Louis Browns today defeated the Buffalo team of the International league, 2 to 1, in an exhibition game here. Kress' work featured the game, his fielding and two hits largely accounting for the Browns' victory. Manush played only three innings and had an infield hit to his credit. Score:

Buffalo	000	001	000—	1	6	2
St. Louis	101	000	000—	2	8	1

Batteries—Margum, Leverette and Grube; Caldwell, Stewart and Manion.

WASHINGTON WINS, 3-0.

Chattanooga, Tenn., March 22.—(U. P.)—Firpo Marberry and Bob Burke displayed midseason form today and twirled the Washington Senators to a 3 to 0 win over Chattanooga. Marberry allowed only one hit in five innings and Burke was touched for one safety in four sessions. The Senators were likewise held to two hits but combined them with walks to score three runs. Score:

Washington	001	000	200—	3	2	0
Chattanooga	000	000	000—	0	2	0

Batteries—Marberry, Burke and Tate, Ruel; Howard, Marty and Kenna.

PHILS, 8; ROCHESTER, 6.

Winter Haven, Fla., March 22.—(AP)—Darkness ended the second game of the Phillies-Rochester exhibition series at the end of the seventh inning with the National leaguers ahead, 8 to 6. O'Doul, left fielder of the Phils, was forced to withdraw in the sixth when he injured himself in a fall over a base bag.

Batteries—Smith, Irvin, Berley and Jonnard, Hinckle; Willoughby, Smythe, P. Collins and McCurdy, Susce.

REDS, 6; MACKS, 5.

Miami, Fla., March 22.—(AP)—The Cincinnati Reds scored their first victory in the exhibition series with the world's champion Philadelphia Athletics when they downed the American leaguers, 6 to 5, in an 11 inning contest here today.

The Reds, who have been weak at bat, came to life today and pounded out 15 hits.

Batteries—Shores, Mahaffey, Baker and Cochrane; Lucas, May, Johnson, Eckhart and Gooch, Sukeforth.

MOOSE NINE FORMED.

Kalamazoo, Mich., March 22.—[Special.]—The Moose lodge No. 28 of Kalamazoo is sponsoring a semipro baseball club, playing under the name of Kalamazoo Moose. A new park is being built which will be completed about April 1.

THE INQUIRING REPORTER

Every Day He Asks Five Persons, Picked at Random, a Question

The Question.

When do you expect to start playing golf?

The Answers.

Ben Chimberoff, 68 West Washington street, photo supply dealer.—I expect to start just as soon as the chill is out of the air. The greens are beginning to look good, even now. Golf is a pastime that is enjoyable for the good company that is found there.

Miss Irene Feldman, 4915 Drexel boulevard, secretary.—Early next month, I hope. I play on the Jackson park course on Saturday afternoons and Sundays. I like to get in a round before breakfast, especially during the early part of the season. After a winter's absence from the course, the first shots are likely to be embarrassing.

Jules B. Nowell, 4924 North St. Louis avenue, radio store manager.—Well, I feel that the time is ripe now. I'll soon bring out my rusty rods, oil them, and proceed to limber my muscles on some fair or trick course. Usually, as soon as we have fairly decent greens, I am smitten by the call of golf.

Miss Fritzie Levy, 3215 Alnalie street, stenographer.—I am going to start golf for the first time this year. I will want to do my first playing while there are few people on the courses. However, I don't think I ever will be a golf fiend. You never will see me on a course on rainy days or when I would have to wear rubber boots.

John R. Gibons, Hyde Park Y. M. C. A., stenographer.—I already have started playing golf, trying out my game at Cherry Hills last Sunday. I will be out there again today if the weather is suitable. I have been playing golf quite a few years, and I am just as bad as ever.

LINDBERGH SEES GLIDING AS NEW AMERICAN SPORT

Interesting, Inexpensive, and Easy.

BY COL. CHARLES A. LINDBERGH.

[Copyright: 1930: By The Chicago Tribune and New York Times.]

The glider opens a new field for aeronautical development. It places flying within the reach of the great majority of people who never expect to become professional aviators and cannot afford the time and money required to learn to fly and operate a power plane of the present-day type. Due to the low cost and ease of operation, the glider and power glider reach a larger market than the service type of airplane. They will probably become one of the most important factors in primary training and the development of flying in the future.

The effect of aviation upon life in general increases with every new development and application of its uses. Each year it has a more direct bearing upon the business and private life of the average citizen. Regardless of anything that may be said, or of temporary advances or difficulties, it will progress almost exactly in proportion to its application in our daily life. Every new use for the airplane increases our flying activity. If we could fold the wings of a plane and drive it through city traffic to our office door, then the present type of automobile would disappear almost entirely. Aircraft production would change from a few thousand to several million per year and a person who could not fly would be the exception.

Home Made Gliders Dangerous.

Gliding activity will bring a substantial advance in the importance of aviation. It will form a means of training for thousands of pilots from school age up, and in training them it will create a much larger market for power planes. More pilots mean more men and women who will use flying as a part of their daily lives. More flying activity precedes higher production, together with improved machines, lower prices and a greater number of ways in which planes can be used economically.

Glider flying is comparatively safe as a sport or as a method of flying training, if the beginner is under the supervision of a competent instructor while he is obtaining his initial experience. The greatest danger lies in home-made gliders which are not properly constructed and in inexperienced attempts to tow them behind motor cars. Accidents which are certain to happen due to structural failure and improper design in these machines should not lead any one to believe that gliding is a dangerous occupation.

Teaching By Towing.

The tow method of teaching glider-flying allows the student to become accustomed to his controls at such low speeds that it is hardly possible for him to get into serious difficulty. To begin with he has only two control levers to handle. Every maneuver is made by manipulating these two levers. There is no other mechanism to think about. The student is not taken into the air immediately. He is first towed back and forth across the field at ten or fifteen miles an hour while he becomes accustomed to steering. This eliminates one of the controls and allows his entire attention to be devoted to the rudder alone. Later the towing car is driven a little faster and the student is able to raise the tail of the glider. He still is unable to raise the machine from the ground, but he can control the angle of the wings by raising or lowering the tail. In this way he accustoms himself to controlling the glider in everything but banking before leaving the ground or going more than fifteen or twenty miles an hour.

After this preliminary work, which should not require more than two or three hours, the student is towed at a speed that will allow him to fly about 5 feet above the ground, twenty to thirty miles an hour. At this altitude he can learn to land properly and completely master his controls. If he makes an error the tow car is slowed down or the tow rope tripped, and the weight of the glider is so light that it will settle to earth without damage, even though the controls are not properly manipulated. As the student becomes more adept he may climb to a hundred meters or more before cutting loose from the tow rope.

The Soaring Gliders.

It is a short step from the glider to the power glider. A glider reinforced for a small engine and propeller is called a power glider, and it is difficult to differentiate between a power glider and a light airplane. The student who takes his primary training on a glider has the advantage of knowing how to maneuver without motor power and will have a finer feel of his plane than the one who has always had a powerful engine to pull him out of difficulty.

The soaring glider or sailplane differs from the training type in that it is of lighter construction and better streamlined. The present American record holder has a span of 60 feet, weighs less than 175 pounds and with a 140 pound pilot has a wing loading of about one and one-half pounds per square foot. Soaring gliders have remained aloft on wind velocities of less than ten miles per hour. Being light in weight they are comparatively safe and easy to fly. As a sport, soaring takes second place to none. It is not difficult for the amateur to learn, yet to take advantage of every ascending current requires much experience and a great amount of skill. Soaring in the air might well be compared to sailing on the water; the rudiments of either may be learned within a few hours, yet a life time might be devoted to their study.

Many Things to Consider.

The principle of soaring flight is the same for glider or buzzard. It is dependent on rising currents of air. These currents may be formed by wind blowing over a hill or they may be due to heated air over a hot field or desert. On the windward side of a hill or mountain range there is an ascending current; on the lee side it is descending. Air is ascending over warm areas such as dry fields, cities and deserts, and descending over green fields, forests and bodies of water. All of these conditions and many others must be taken into consideration by the glider pilot. The best conditions for soaring are found around cliffs and hills which lie at right angles to the prevailing wind. In high wind velocities it is possible to maintain soaring flight on the windward side of almost any obstruction, but in lower velocities it is necessary to have more ideal conditions. A wind passing over a line of hills will permit soaring up and down their entire length. At good velocities the glider can scar several hundred feet above the crest.

The efficiency of the glider depends very largely upon its speed and gliding angle. To remain aloft the glider must be in an ascending current which is carrying it up at at least the same rate as it is losing altitude in its glide. If its gliding angle is fifteen to one, then it must be carried up one foot in the ascending air current in the same time it moves forward fifteen feet. If the ascending current is stronger, the pilot can soar. If it is weaker, he will have to land below his starting point.

Easy to Pilot.

The glider is usually launched into the wind from the top or the windward side of a hillside. Once in the air and in a rising current it is possible to fly in any direction regardless of whether it is up or down wind. The pilot may fly along the windward side of a range of hills as far or long as he desires, and in high wind velocities he will find upward currents for a considerable distance away from the hills. He can also fly above the range, but he will lose altitude as soon as he passes to the lee side. In cross-country gliding he can take advantage of the ascending currents over hot fields and dry areas to increase his gliding angle between bluffs or hillsides.

One of the advantages of the glider lies in the ease of landing. It is, of course, desirable to land into the wind and in an open field, but it is entirely possible to land down or cross wind, and even in thick brush, without doing any particular damage. A well designed glider will stop within fifteen feet after it first touches the ground, when properly landed. If the wind is blowing the run will be even shorter.

There is nothing particularly mysterious or difficult about motorless flight. It is probably easier to pilot a glider than to drive a motor car in city traffic. The glider has less mechanism and fewer controls than an automobile or a motorcycle and its landing speed is well within the low gear range on a highway. Gliding represents the simplest and most economical form of flying, and it shows promise of becoming one of our leading outdoor sporting activities. Probably the greatest importance, however, lies in its value for training in aerodynamic design, aircraft construction, and practical flight in schools and colleges.

LINDY IN A NEW ROLE

Col. Lindbergh is gaining additional flying fame as a pilot of gliders, or motorless planes. In an adjoining column he tells of his experiences in this new branch of aviation, which he predicts will become a great American sport. [Pacific and Atlantic Photo.]

ENGLAND'S FIRST AIR YACHT IS BUILT FOR PLANE ENTHUSIAST

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON.—The first air yacht ever to be built in England has just been constructed by the Supermarine works for the Hon. A. E. Guiness, an airplane enthusiast.

The luxurious three-motored air yacht is designed to carry six passengers, a crew of three and 600 pounds of baggage. With this load it can cruise 650 miles. But with a minimum crew and full tanks, its range is 2,000 miles. It is propelled by three Siddeley geared Jaguar engines, which give it a cruising speed of 100 miles per hour, and a top speed of 120. The wing spread is 92 feet, the length 66, and the weight 10½ tons.

There are two open cockpits for the passengers, while below are spacious and comfortable cabins and a salon. There is electric light, a ventilating system capable of furnishing warm or cool air, sideboards, dressing tables, wardrobes and bookcases. The interior is hardly distinguishable from that of a seagoing yacht.

There are special quarters forward for the crew, and a galley equipped with oil cooking apparatus. The wireless installation can receive and send messages either in flight or when the machine is at rest on the water.

GREAT BRITAIN'S SIZE RETARDING ITS AIR SERVICE

It Will Never Reach U. S. Proportions.

LONDON.—Expansion of commercial aviation in England will never assume the proportions possible in America due to topographical conditions. This is generally believed by aeronautical authorities, who expressed their views at an aviation banquet here at Croydon airdrome.

"The main difficulty is the small size of England and Scotland on this side of the channel and other European countries on the other side," remarked Sir Alan Cobham, internationally known aviation authority. Sir Cobham is perhaps better known through his efforts in the last few years in conducting an aerial tour of England to acquaint adults and children with air travel.

London to Paris.

"In just a few hours—sometimes minutes—of airplane flying, one is out of a country and into another," he continued. "This factor, however, will not affect international traveling by airplane as is borne out by the fact that 150 persons a day ferry between London and Paris.

"In America, however, a plane can travel 3,000 miles without departing from the boundaries of the United States. In fact, they can go further in many of the larger states than could be possible in our countries on this side of the Atlantic.

Airports Neglected.

"Scarcity of airports is another deterrent in Europe. Although aviation had its first real development over here, the proper foundation—airports—has been neglected. That is partially due to the excessive population of the continent. Larger fields are the real need."

Sir Cobham said that the well organized surface transportation in England and France would offer serious competition to commercial aviation. Trains travel at about 70 miles an hour and take a traveler from the business section of one city to the business section of another; airplanes on the other hand take a traveler from one city's outskirts to another city's outskirts.

More travel is also highly developed, he pointed out. Highways are in the best of condition, allowing for fast movement of automobiles and buses, which are the Europeans' most popular means of travel.

HIGH ALTITUDES AFFECTS PLANES, EXPERT SHOWS

Interesting data on the effect of high altitudes on planes is given by Mr. K. K. Knickerbocker, Chicago traffic representative for Boeing Air Transport. The Cheyenne field is 6,200 feet above sea level. Because the density of the air at 6,200 feet is only 83 per cent of that of sea level, the airplane wings at Cheyenne will carry only 83 per cent of the weight they will at tidewater. The lower atmospheric pressure effects motor carburetion and the power plant develops only three-fourths of the power at sea level. With full load, the Boeing eighteen passenger transport, which weigh eight and three-quarter tons when fully loaded, takes off at Cheyenne in 1,700 feet, contrasted with 1,000 feet at San Francisco or Chicago.

Berlin to New York in Six Hours German's Dream

Berlin to New York City in six hours and at a cost of only $10 is the hope of H. G. Perl, young German inventor. He is reported working on a plane which will develop only 86 horse power, but which will speed through the ether at 40,000 feet altitude. The plane, he says, will weigh only 1,000 pounds, but is expected to develop a speed of between 650 and 750 miles per hour. Direction would be maintained by radio, says Perl.

HOLDER OF U. S. GLIDING MARK TELLS THRILLS

Stayed in Air 9 Hours and 5 Minutes.

[Copyright: 1930: By The Chicago Tribune and New York Times.]

San Diego, Cal., March 22.—Gliding is a safe and fascinating sport, according to Hawley Bowlus, who holds the America endurance record for motorless gliding, having remained continuously in the air here for 9 hours 5 minutes 27 2-5 seconds. In the following interview he gives his impressions of gliding:

"Gliding is among the least dangerous of sports," he says. "It is no more dangerous than riding a bicycle, and certainly nowhere near as dangerous as riding a motor car. The upward current of air is the glider's driving force. The greatest speed a glider can attain with that force is twenty-five miles an hour. As that force decreases, so does the speed and lifting power of the glider. Unless the glider pilot tilts his machine backward there is no possible chance of his falling. As the wind dies down it is possible for the glider pilot to land at a much lower speed than that at which airplanes have to land. The glider's speed is between five and ten miles an hour. At landing he just sits down on the ground as quietly and as gently as a bird.

Accidents Are Rare.

"The weight of the glider is so small [mine weighs only 150 pounds] and has such a great wing spread that it naturally acts like a parachute. If a boy on a motorcycle speeds up a hill that is too steep he is likely to fall backward, but once a glider pilot has gained some experience he will know that he must not tilt up his machine.

"An accident such as happened recently in San Francisco is only possible when the glider is tilted up. The very word gliding indicates that that must not be done. The glider glides down toward the earth when the rising air currents are not lifting it. When the air current is stronger than the minimum rate of the descent of the machine, the glider rises. The pilot ascends on a rising current of air; he soars when he rises above the level of his starting point and is kept above it.

Master of the Air.

"I am unable to describe by words that sublime pleasure one experiences in gliding over hills and valleys, silently, like the eagle, cruising or hovering, rising or descending at will. The ample controllability makes you feel like them, master of the air. The constant alertness watching for favorable air currents and studying their relations to varied scenery below provides thrill and challenge. A few weeks in a glider camp is outdoor life in the word's fullest meaning. Soaring flight requires scientific training, engineering sense, and physical skill.

"Gliding is like child's play and, though the takeoff is spectacular, it is done just as you would fly a kite. The ground crew, with the rubber shock cord which shoots me into the air much as a boy shoots a missile from a slingshot, run for only about ten or fifteen feet before the glider gets away. In my record flight I soared laterally for about 100 feet, then I struck an updraft of air and rose to an altitude of about 800 feet. Then for more than nine hours I flew back and forth about the point.

Lands in Dark.

"About 1 a. m. the wind, which had been blowing steadily from the west, shifted to northwest and I had a little more trouble in staying aloft. Soon after 2 a. m. it swung to the north and the velocity decreased, so that with less than fifty-five minutes between myself and the $2,000 prize, I was forced to come down. I landed within 200 feet of the point of takeoff, dropping the motorless craft to a perfect landing on the road in spite of the total darkness.

"My highest altitude flown in a glider is 1,500 feet. This was unofficial. The height we can climb depends entirely on the currents of air into which we run. As we take off from a high point against which the wind currents are blowing, we are pulled as we would run with a kite, which takes the wind and climbs to the highest altitudes as our string attached will permit.

"We have from three to four men each pulling two cords attached to a hook on the front of the glider, which rides on a wooden or metal keel along the ground from where we take off on. As we leave the high point we run into the first currents of air, which shoot us skyward, all depending, of course, on the velocity of the wind. The glider will sail along nicely in an eight mile or a twenty mile wind, and as we dip we run into other pockets or currents of air, which send us upward again.

"This we do constantly as long as the wind keeps up. As my plane weighs about 150 pounds and I weigh about 190, you can see that the air is not carrying a very heavy burden. Gliding is the sport of the air. Gliding never will have any commercial value, but it will always be the sport of the air as iceboating is on ice and sailing is on the water. The planes cost from $300 to $900."

U. S. FLYER TAKES BLIMP TO BALTIMORE TO SHOW HIS MOTHER

BALTIMORE, Md.—Lieut. Hammond J. Dugan recently brought the navy's tin bubble blimp down from Lakehurst to show it to his mother.

While hundreds of citizens were watching the stubby "tin cigar" weave about the Belvedere hotel, church spires, and other tall buildings, trying to fathom the way of it, persons within several blocks saw a mite of a package whip through the air with a streaming tail behind.

It landed not ten feet from the front door of Mrs. Ferdinand C. Dugan's home at 1015 Cathedral street and was picked up by Dr. Joseph D. Fusco, a dentist, who had visions of a blimp in distress and calling for aid.

Opening the flap of the little rubberoid case weighted with shot, he found in it the name and address of Mrs. Dugan. Looking up, he saw Mrs. Dugan waving a good-by as the tin bubble headed northeastward.

The especially special delivery note to Mrs. Dugan read:

"How do you like my new machinery?"

Motion Picture Industry Big User of Air Express

The motion picture industry is proving to be one of the largest patrons of air mail and express, a check made by K. K. Knickerbocker of the Boeing system of its San Francisco-Chicago and Los Angeles-Seattle business shows. A consignment of movie talkie discs weighing nearly four-fifths of a ton was recently flown from Hollywood to Chicago and eastern points.

Plane Exhibit to Follow Los Angeles Olympics

LOS ANGELES.—Announcement was made here by Robert J. Pritchard, newly elected president of the National Aeronautic association that an international aircraft exposition will follow the Olympic games here in 1932. It is planned that all nations will be represented in aircraft exhibits, he said.

AVIATION GIVES US A NEW WORD; IT'S 'GLIDERPORT'

Aviation coins another word for Mr. Webster's famous book, now that gliders are being adopted by many people as a sport.

Harry Kuchins, a furniture manufacturer of St. Louis, has purchased a tract of land and intends to construct an exclusive "gliderport."

A gliderport is distinguished from an airport in that an airport is a level piece of land which has the least possible number of approach obstructions and the gliderport should be entirely surrounded by high hills so that these motorless flying machines may be taken off from the top of the hills in any wind direction and flown to the level ground in the center.

The gliders division of the Detroit Aircraft is maintaining an advisory staff to assist glider clubs in the selection of their gliderports.

FRANCE PLANNING ORGANIZATION OF 3 AIR SYSTEMS

PARIS.—Proposed reorganization of French commercial aviation airlines upon comprehensive international lines is being discussed in French aeronautical circles.

It is planned to form three great networks of French air lines: [1] Paris to all Euroipean capitals, [2] an oriental France-Indo China system, and [3] occidental system, connecting France with Africa and the Americana.

The plan contemplates the merger of existing French airlines and the participation of surface transportation in the defelopment and extension of commercial aviation. Contracts are to be for 30 years, unless annulled.

NEW · HUPMOBILES

There's quality in Hupmobile which your eyes cannot see. But every automotive engineer knows it is there.

It is the quality of precision-built and precision-tested construction. It is the quality of parts made with watchmaker care. Of materials and workmanship that must pass the most rigid engineering standards.

It is the quality that glides a Hupmobile 70 . . . 80 . . . even 90 miles an hour . . . without a tremor or a strain. The quality that keeps the first year's silken smoothness in the motor for tens of thousands of additional and stressful miles.

You cannot see the extra years of faithful service under the hood of a new Hupmobile. But you will feel the thrill of its mechanical sweetness in your first never-to-be-forgotten Hupmobile demonstration.

Enduring mechanical excellence has ever been the "unwritten trade-mark" of Hupmobile. And it shows itself more brilliantly than ever in the new Hupmobiles.

MOTORS — TRAFFIC — HIGHWAYS

NOW'S THE TIME TO OVERHAUL DRIVING HABITS

They Must Be Corrected for Country Roads.

BY HAL FOUST.

Automobile owners, having heard the advice from reliable service men for years, now generally recognize the need for a mechanical reconditioning of their cars at the beginning of the touring season and following winter's strain on the machine.

Almost as important a seasonal duty—but not generally recognized as such—is a spring overhauling of driving habits.

In the use of the car in the winter—easing the machine over slippery streets, starting cold motors, making no long trip that can be avoided—the automobile is subjected to a mechanical burden that differs from the longer trips at sustained speeds in the summer.

Likewise, the requirements upon the driver change with the seasons.

Aggravates Congestion.

Last Sunday, with its June weather, crowded the highways of the metropolitan area with automobiles, many of them handled by men and women who had almost no country driving since fall. This aggravated the congestion caused primarily by the inadequacy of pavements and the lack of grade separations.

A few slow drivers delayed thousands in getting away from the city for a holiday in the country. And they created a hazard to traffic as a whole, especially on the two lane pavements. All who wished to travel at a reasonable rate had to swing around the laggards.

Slow drivers have always been a nuisance in Sunday traffic around Chicago. Last year, there was some agitation among county commissioners to prosecute the pests for blocking the highways but lawyers were inclined to believe that the Illinois statutes offered no relief to the motoring public.

Thoughtlessness Responsible.

Most of these twenty mile an hour cars were being operated by men not as selfish and inconsiderate as their conduct would indicate. Thoughtlessness was responsible in the majority of cases. The average highway loiterer does not realize the inconvenience and annoyance he is causing his fellow motorists.

For the family that wants to sit in an automobile and not go any place, there are side roads that are more pleasant for loafing, with little traffic and surpassing the main highways in rural scenery in that they have fewer sign boards and barbecue stands littering the landscape. And then there are attractive parking places in forest preserves and beside lakes within easy driving distance of any Chicago home.

This twenty mile an hour driving is appropriate for neighborhood travel in residential streets or for maneuvering snow drifts, but it is an offense against society on the open highways when hundreds of thousands of city dwellers are seeking the wholesome recreation of a holiday amid meadows and woods.

The Speeder a Hazard, Too.

As great an offender, and probably with more criminal negligence in his heart, is the speeder who recklessly zigzags in and out of the lane of cars, risking lives to save fifteen minutes on a twenty mile trip. There were more of these last Sunday than when the touring season is more advanced. Possibly with some of them it was a non-alcoholic intoxication that came with the pleasure of the first country driving of the year.

The road hog that is a special menace is the fellow who speeds on the left side of the pavement to pass a string of cars in one jump and then crowds back into the lane, forcing room for himself, at the approach of an oncoming car. There is no doubt but what the police, state and county, can give the public more protection from this peril.

The experienced driver with due consideration for his fellow men tried to maintain the average speed of traffic in the Sunday crowds, seldom leaving his lane and keeping within a reasonable distance of the car ahead.

Straddling Lane Markers.

When the car ahead lags, causing a gap in the line, a pass can be executed with little risk, even on the twenty foot pavements, by exercising care. The chance of an accident on narrow roads increases if a motorist tries to pass more than one car at a time, even when other conditions, such as a clear road far ahead, are favorable.

On the forty foot roads there is another nuisance that is no longer common on the two lane pavements. It's the car that straddles the lane markers, leaving no room for a car to pass either to the right or to the left except by turning into the space for oncoming traffic.

Four lane rural pavements are comparatively new. The public has not been educated to their use. Even the highway officials differ in their printed instructions and the traffic experts dispute the wording of their recommendations. Some advise slow traffic, including trucks, to use the outer lane and fast vehicles to remain in the inner lane. Others urge motorists to keep to the outer lane at all times except when passing.

Evidence of Ignorance.

All agree, however, that straddling the pavement markers so as to occupy both lanes is evidence of ignorance, thoughtlessness or selfish inconsiderateness.

Notwithstanding the difference in the wording of their instructions, highway officials by varying means are seeking a common end—they want to keep the center lanes open for fast travel.

Eastern states get a higher utility from their forty foot pavement than does Illinois. The drivers in New York state, for example, stay in the outer lanes except when passing. They are drilled to this practice through their experience on three lane pavements with the center lane reserved for passing.

The point to be emphasized in the spring overhauling of driving habits is that Sunday traffic in the metropolitan area demands common sense and courtesy from all if Chicago is to get the most this year from its favorite summer recreation, motoring in the country.

AUTO WARNING

This gruesome, yet arresting, road warning was erected on the Chesterfield and Stavley highway in England. Even a hardened road hog would think twice before taking risks at this particular intersection. [Pacific and Atlantic Photo.]

VOICE OF THE TRAFFIC

TOURIST ACCOMODATIONS.

Chicago, March 18.—Your department on motors, traffic and highways does a lot of good in promoting pavement improvements, but you are overlooking a golden opportunity to perform an additional service for the motoring public.

The promotion of pavements is slow work, so slow that some of your readers may not appreciate what you have done and are doing. My proposal will net quick results.

This is the beginning of the tourist season. A tourist not only drives over country pavements and negotiates the bottle necks in village streets, but he also eats three meals a day and he sleeps at night. Many of the popular resorts of Michigan and Wisconsin like to rob the visitor from Chicago. A couple of stories telling where rates are reasonable and where they are unreasonable would have a wholesome effct.

GEORGE MATTHEWS.

UNIFORMITY.

Milwaukee, Wis., March 17.—There is no excuse for the various states not having uniform regulations for motor vehicle licenses. The automobile is not a one state property. The modern car has obliterated state lines socially and commercially. It is time that legislatures are awakened to this fact.

JAMES CASEY.

FAST TOURING.

Elmwood Park, Ill., March 18.—I made a trip this winter that may interest your readers. It was to Victoria, Va., 1,125 miles from Chicago, by way of Indianapolis, Louisville, Ky.; Lexington, Ky.; Charleston, W. Va., and Lexington, Va.

There were three drivers and one other occupant of the car. The car was kept running all of the time except when stopping for fuel or food. The driving time was fifty and a half hours, averaging twenty-two miles per hour; nineteen miles per gallon of gas, and thirty-six quarts of oil due to several changes.

The cost of the trip was: Gas and oil, $19.96; toll, $1.15, and food, $10.85.

The return trip, via Victoria, Va.; Richmond, Va.; Washington, D. C.; Hagerstown, Md.; Uniontown, Pa.; Washington, Pa.; Wheeling, W. Va.; Cambridge, O.; Columbus, O., and Fort Wayne, Ind., was 1,100 miles. We used sixty-nine gallons of gas and twenty-four quarts of oil. The driving time was thirty-nine and a half hours.

The expenses on the return trip were: Gas and oil, $18.83; toll, 10 cents; fan belt and ignition points, $1.60; food, $12.50.

The car was a 1926 six sedan with more than 100,000 miles on it.

Thanks for THE TRIBUNE maps.

A. EDWARD GRESENS.

SHE'S BEEN FRIGHTENED.

Chicago, March 21.—I want to warn other honest girls. I used to accept invitations from men drivers who would offer me a ride to work while I was standing at the curb waiting for a bus. No more for me. I've been insulted twice this week. Some men who pick up girls while driving to the loop are gentlemen. But others are not, I've found.

A STENO.

OUR MAYOR.

Chicago, March 20. — If we had a worthy mayor maybe the public would vote bonds to build some new bridges over the north branch of the Chicago river. The old structures tie up traffic, but I'm one motorist who is willing to wait for improvements until we get a different city administration, one that we can trust to handle public funds without using the money to build a political machine.

JOHN BURNS.

BRIGHT LIGHTS.

Chicago, March 19.—Why don't you start a campaign against the glaring headlights on automobiles?

People are astounded at the numbers of deaths caused by autos. The astonishing thing is that there are so few.

Pedestrians probably don't know, or don't think about it, but the driver of the oncoming auto when confronted by glaring headlights coming the other way is simply blind for the time being and cannot see any object immediately in front of him until the lights have passed on and, as most every one uses them, it is a continuous procession and the unlucky person who steps off the curb, thinking he can be seen and avoided, gets it, through no fault of the driver who actually hit him.

Plenty of tickets are given out for soiled license plates, parking two inches in front or behind a prohibited spot, but the big thing which is causing loss of life is let go by. It may be necessary in some spots along country roads to use the big lights, but surely not on well lighted streets.

I may have no sense of humor, but I cannot see the joke in pointing a terrible spotlight right into the eyes of an oncoming driver. I've driven for many years and can do it as well as the best, but the glaring lights make it a real torture to drive in the evening.

A. M. KING.

NOT ON PROGRAM.

Chicago, March 20.—There is only one paper that is using its power to give the people a square deal; that is THE TRIBUNE. I enjoy reading it every morning.

There is some talk about widening Pershing road from Lowe avenue west to Halsted street. Is there any truth in it, or is it just the usual line of election time bunk? It would be easy to do. There are just four old shacks to tear down and, believe me, it would be a great help to the driving public.

ED CORRIGAN.

GYP AUTO CLUBS.

Chicago, March 19.—Attorney General Carlstrom should investigate the motor club racket. A few of these clubs have done a world of good for the motoring public and have prospered. New organizations are springing up, some of which operate skin games. Couldn't they be prosecuted for fraud?

ROBERT ANDERSON.

NEW CROSSING SIGNAL.

Chicago, March 18.—Day after day we read of the accidents at railroad crossings in which neither the railroad nor the automobile driver or pedestrian is really to blame. The way I see it, and a great many others do, the crossings are not properly signaled. The oncoming train lights the signal, passes the crossing and the signal is still blinking. The automobile driver sees the train pass, the signal is still on and he drives onto the track, in front of another train going in the opposite direction.

Here is what I am getting at. I have worked out a hookup that will show the automobile driver which direction the train is coming from and after the train passes the crossing the signal is out; and if it is a double track and a train is coming from the opposite direction the signal will show it.

EDWIN H. BERRY.

COPS RESPECT DRAG.

Chicago, March 21.—At 57th and Halsted streets a man driving a car home from work was stopped by an officer and given a ticket for having only one light lit. The man told him that his lights were O. K. when he left work, but the cop would not listen.

Just then a large sedan filled with boys from the city hall pulled up with one light lit and the cop recognized them and passed them.

One of the cops was talking to a man and four machines went by without tail lights. It looked like a person will have to get out of his car at every block and see if his lights are burning. A. J. F.

HOOSIER HIGHWAYS.

Indianapolis, Ind., March 18.—Illinois has been boasting for years about its highway system and Indiana has been modestly plugging along. The folks in the east might get the idea that Illinois is far ahead of her neighbor state.

THE TRIBUNE is responsible for broadcasting this error, but I think your newspaper is finally opening its eyes to the facts. I was happy to read Hal Foust's comment in an article on spring touring that a motorist will have to search a long time in Illinois to find a pavement that compares well in smoothness and alignment with Indiana's U. S. 41 and U. S. 52.

RAYMOND A. KING.

TIME TO PAVE.

Wilmette, Ill., March 19.—All winter, state and county officials have been promising big paving programs to start as soon as the frost was out of the ground. The frost will soon be out of the clay subsoil even where it is covered by existing pavements.

The time has arrived for the concrete mixers to start working. The horn blowing season has ended. Let's have some work. I hope we won't spend the spring listening to alibis for delays.

W. H. ROBERTSON.

4,508,808 U. S. AUTOS VISITED CANADA IN 1929

Tourist Is Recognized as Source of Income.

OTTAWA.—Statisticians are engaged in computing the amount of money spent in Canada last year by American tourists, based on the official report that in 1929 a total of 4,508,808 automobiles of foreign registry entered the Dominion and practically all of them were from the United States. Naturally, there can be nothing but the roughest estimate, but the visiting motorists spent many millions of dollars for services and goods and government departments are giving very serious attention to the cultivation of the tourist trade.

Every province enjoyed a substantial increase in motor tourists over the previous year, 861,358 more cars crossing the border than in 1928. Officials estimate three as the averaging motoring party, so it appears that more than 13,000,000 Americans saw some part of Canada during the motoring season.

Three-quarters of all the visiting cars, or 3,505,500, entered at Ontario ports. Quebec received 528,825; New Brunswick, 196,142; British Columbia, 181,798; Manitoba, 48,514; Alberta, 29,567; Saskatchewan, 21,652, and Nova Scotia, 1,805.

Recognition of the tourist as a source of national income has come from bankers and industrial bodies, and in Quebec provincial authorities have engaged expert cooks to visit the small hotels for the purpose of giving instruction in the preparation of dainty and typical French-Canadian dishes calculated to tempt the appetites and establish pleasant associations. Dr. Donald M. Marvin, economist of the Royal Bank of Canada, has urged that a special study be made of American requirements, pointing out that if their average per capita expenditures, aside from necessary services, were increased only $20 additional Canadian goods would be sold to the value of $240,000,000, and this would mean a very interesting contribution to Canadian trade.

ROADS IMPROVING.

During the fiscal year 1929 more than 7,400 miles of federal aid highways were improved in the United States and Hawaii, according to the U. S. Department of Agriculture.

NEWS AND VIEWS

Four new six cylinder Graham models, ranging in price from $545 to $895 at the factory have just been introduced by Graham-Paige. They include the town sedan, the five passenger six window sedan, the business coupe, and the coupe with rumble seat. All of these various types of bodies are mounted upon the Graham standard six chassis of 115 inch wheelbase. The first of these new models have arrived in Chicago and are on display at the Bird-Sykes Co., local distributors.

Heads of General Motors and of Chrysler believe there will be an upward price trend before the season is much further advanced. The cost of production rises with a decrease in the volume of output. In 1929 the automobile industry experienced a boom, whereas 1930 is seen as a normal year.

From Detroit comes news that manufacturers are recalling employés to their plants. Seventy-five per cent of the normal 108,000 on the Ford pay roll are now working on eight hour shifts four and five days a week. Chevrolet plants are using 80,000 men, which is 80 per cent of the peak. Chevrolet announces a roadster delivery model to supplement its line of commercial cars. Within the next week or ten days, Ford will offer two new de luxe models, a coupe at about $90 more than the price of the standard car, and a sedan with a price increase of about $50.

E. L. Cord, pioneer in the front wheel drive field, predicts that he will have much more competition within the next two or three years. Three manufacturers now have this type of power application and others are experimenting with it. Cord dealers are holding a national "invitation week" beginning today. The public is invited to drive the low slung machine.

An improved type of commercial vehicle, possessing passenger car speed and comfort, has just been announced by Reo. According to Clarence E. Eldridge, sales manager, the newest speed wagon is to be known as the "Super-Tonner," and will be on the market shortly.

POOR HIGHWAYS COSTLY.

Statisticians point out that it costs more to drive over a third class road than one rated first class. The reason motorists object to such roads, however, is not direct money so much as lost time and discomfort.

GERMANY'S NEXT AUTO SHOW IN SPRING OF 1931

Although the automobile exposition held in Berlin in 1928 attracted large numbers of persons and undoubtedly did a great deal toward helping the German motor vehicle industry, the National Association of the German Automobile Industry has decided not to hold another show until the spring of 1931. This decision has drawn caustic comment from a number of leading German newspapers, among them the Frankfurter Zeitung, which points out that it hardly appears consistent for the German car manufacturers to give up holding exposition at home while at the same time making their appearance at foreign shows in full force, as was the case at the recent automobile exposition in Paris.

The paper admits that the financial situation of many German car makers is not at all favorable and that the expense of running a show is heavy, but it concludes:

"After all, one must consider not only the temporary economic situation but also the psyche of the purchaser. The invasion of foreign products is still alarming. Consequently, one shouldn't create the impression of a fear of competition through inaction, perhaps justifiable commercially."

"• • • • My friends invariably praise the Viking and are most enthusiastic about its performance"

I have driven my Viking 7,600 miles in the past four months. Its performance has improved so continuously with use that I have begun to wonder when the peak will be reached.

My duties require travel over the greater part of Virginia, all of it in the car.

For pick-up, sustained speed (and I mean speed), hill-climbing and comfort, the Viking is the equal of any car I know.

Its smart appearance attracts attention everywhere, and I have yet to hear an unfavorable remark. My friends invariably praise the car, and those who have driven it are most enthusiastic about its performance.

E. E. Fuller

Instructor in Nat'l Guard, Richmond, Va.

People who use their cars the most have the greatest enthusiasm for the Viking.

Such owner good-will is the natural heritage of a car that is designed progressively—built faithfully—and priced reasonably.

The Viking is a fine car. It has an 81-horsepower, 90-degree, V-type eight-cylinder engine. Its beautiful Fisher Bodies are generous in size and luxurious in appointment. It will deliver speed, power and acceleration to warm the heart of any owner.

These things are important. But they are not more important than Viking's enduring stamina—unusually long life—and day-in-and-day-out dependability. These are the things that give satisfaction. These are the things that make up value. These are the things you want in your motor car.

And these are important reasons why you should see and drive the Viking Eight—soon.

Chicago's Great Central Market Strong Magnet for Visitors

MAP TELLS HOW CITY OUTPULLS OTHER CENTERS

Draws Passengers from Wide Area.

BY SCRUTATOR.

Chicago is the center of railway passenger traffic from a vast, rich area in the central states, just as it is a center of freight traffic.

The map on this page covers the area. Within it are the center of population of the United States, almost due south of Chicago; the center of manufacturing, a short distance to the northeast in northern Indiana, and the center of agricultural production, which is placed just west of the Mississippi river in northeastern Missouri.

To avoid making the map too complicated, these things are left out. The graphic representation deals solely with passenger traffic. The black circles are the large cities of the north Mississippi valley and the Great Lakes region and the black lines are important railroads.

Illustrates Ticket Sales.

The key features of the map and the ones on which this story is based are the cross marks. Each represents a city or town where the passenger ticket sales are approximately equal to and from Chicago with the passenger ticket sales to and from the opposite metropolis.

As a specific example, there is about as much travel from Boone, Ia., which is west of the center of that state, to Chicago as to Omaha on the Chicago and North Western. The Milwaukee road placed the breaking point between Chicago and Omaha on its line at Marion, Ia., somewhat farther east. However, Marion residents, or persons living near that city, purchased many more tickets going Chicagowards than they did in the direction of Omaha.

The preponderance of travel from all points east of these cities is distinctly toward Chicago.

No Guesswork Here.

It should be emphasized that the information on which the drawing was made has few elements of guesswork. The breaking points on each road were designated by the passenger traffic departments. A majority of the department heads furnished actual figures on the number of tickets sold, but with the proviso that these should not be printed.

Thus a great deal of research was necessary, with the railroads and THE TRIBUNE'S traffic department and business survey cooperating in the work.

In a number of cases there exists a possibility that full justice has not been done Chicago as a magnet for business men and sightseers. The Chicago and Alton, which has a heavy passenger traffic between Chicago and St. Louis, placed the breaking point at Springfield, although an overwhelming percentage of the travelers were Chicago bound and the remainder going to St. Louis. On the Illinois Central a big majority of the Springfield traffic came to Chicago.

Both the Burlington and the Milwaukee report LaCrosse, Wis., as the place where residents are divided on fairly equal terms in their travel allegiance to Chicago or to Minneapolis-St. Paul. The North Western figures indicated Black River Falls, Wis., proportionately equal in distance from Chicago, as the breaking point on their line.

Ride Both Ways.

The drawing power of Chicago from the south and east is fully as marked as from the west. In distance proportions the map apparently shows that the big cities in the two first directions are not quite so powerful as travel attractions as the western cities of metropolitan rank like Kansas City and St. Louis.

Thus Akron, O., on the Baltimore and Ohio, is 258 miles from Chicago and 121 miles from Pittsburgh. Yet about as many Akronites make pilgrimages to Chicago as to Pittsburgh. On the Pennsylvania, Mansfield, O., is the breaking spot between the same two cities. From Mansfield a traveler must go 293 miles to reach Chicago and 79 to get to Pittsburgh.

The Monon specifies Bedford, Ind., as the point where traffic divides as between Chicago and Louisville. On the way from Chicago to Des Moines, by the Rock Island, Davenport is cited as the divisor, while the Santa Fe makes Fort Madison the breaker between Chicago and Kansas City. The Michigan Central makes a division of Detroit-Chicago travel at Kalamazoo, although a great many more tickets are sold to Chicago than to Detroit. The Chicago and Eastern Illinois finds its Chicago-St. Louis break at Findlay, although about three times as much travel goes to the former.

Breaks Near Toledo.

The New York Central's break between Chicago and Cleveland is about Toledo. It should be noted here that the farthest of the large cities in the population is within a night's ride of Chicago and the breaking point of them farther within this limit.

It is not intended here to put the other large cities in an unfavorable light as compared with the country's second greatest metropolis. The true interpretation is that Chicago is the great market center for all the central region. A huge part of this travel is for business purposes.

Either individual roads carry passengers in six figures annually to and from Chicago and the big cities beyond. Mutual interests are served. In general, the inbound traffic is balanced by the outbound.

Offerings of Bonds Exceed 197 Millions

(New York bond list on page 10.)

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, March 22.—A total of $197,337,000 of new bond issues were placed on the market this week compared with last week's heavy total of $185,298,120.

Only once this year has the weekly aggregate of new bond offerings exceeded this week's figure, viz.: the week ended Jan. 17, when $293,398,000 of new issues were marketed, of which a single issue accounted for $150,000,000, that of the American Telephone and Telegraph debentures.

Heavy foreign and railroad financing accounted for the bulk of the new offerings this week, with the largest issue that of $40,000,000 Royal Dutch company debenture 4s with warrants, brought out by a group headed by Dillon, Read & Co. at 89½, to yield 5 per cent.

Are Quickly Sold.

The issue of $20,000,000 Rhine-Westphalia Electric Power corporation 6s, which was quickly sold, constituted the second largest foreign loan. The quick sale of a new issue of $8,000,000 city of Helsingfors, Finland, 6½s was also a feature of the week.

All of the four railroad issues offered this week were sold rapidly and the subscription books closed. This financing consisted of $15,000,000 Wabash railway 5s, $15,000,000 Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul railway 4¾s assumed by the successor company, the Chicago, Milwaukee, St. Paul and Pacific, $14,000,000 Pere Marquette 4½s, and an issue of $5,000,000 Virginian Railway company 4½s.

Oil financing constituted all but $1,000,000 of the $36,000,000 industrial financing done this week with $20,000,000 for the Pure Oil company and $15,000,000 for the Union Oil Company of California. The public utility financing was limited to two issues of $8,000,000 and $2,500,000 for the Associated Telephone Utilities company and the Appalachian Gas corporation, respectively. The issue for Appalachian Gas represented that company's initial piece of public financing.

Offerings by Groups.

Offerings by groups of this and last week follow:

	This week.	Last week.
Foreign	$ 77,181,000	.....

Public utility	10,500,000	17,500,000
Total	$197,337,000	$185,298,120

A total of 18 municipal issues were placed on the market, ranging in size from an issue of $2,500,000 4½ per cent bonds for the city of Birmingham to an issue of $181,000 for the township of Weehawken, N. J. The municipals moved out briskly in view of the rising municipal market.

MILWAUKEE RY. CLIPS RUNNING TIME TO SEATTLE

Official announcement of reduction in the running time of the Milwaukee road's transcontinental train, the Olympian from Chicago to Seattle and Tacoma was made yesterday by George B. Haynes, passenger traffic manager of the railroad company.

One hour and fifteen minutes will be clipped from the present schedule effective next Sunday, March 30. On the new schedule the Olympian will leave Chicago at 10:15 p. m. and arrive at St. Paul at 8:15 a. m. and Minneapolis at 8:55 a. m. The arrival time at Spokane, Seattle, and Tacoma is not effected.

A fleet of fifteen new type high speed passenger locomotives recently purchased by the road will be utilized to make the faster running time. One engine will haul the train the entire distance between Chicago and Minneapolis and because of increased size of the tender stops for coal and water will be reduced, Mr. Haynes said. For 656 miles across four mountain ranges Milwaukee road trains are hauled by powerful electric locomotives.

ATTRACTS PASSENGER TRAFFIC

Railroad passenger traffic in the area mapped which includes the center of population, the center of manufacture, and the center of agriculture in the United States, is directed preponderantly toward Chicago. The cross marks on the map represents points where the number of tickets sold by various roads to Chicago bound passengers is equal to or greater than those sold for passage to the opposite metropolis.

GAINS EXCEED LOSSES IN STOCK TRADING HERE

Chicago List Reacts After Advance.

Chicago stocks weathered a flurry of profit taking in yesterday's short week-end trading. Prices headed upward in the first hour and reacted in the second hour in sympathy with the New York market. However, Chicago stocks did relatively better than those in New York and final quotations showed gains more numerous and larger than losses.

The volume of trading was unusually heavy for a Saturday session, with total transactions running to 210,900 shares. The public utilities, particularly the Insull group, led in activity but showed considerable irregularity. Midland United made a fractional gain on plans to absorb the Central Indiana Power and the Terre Haute, Indianapolis and Eastern companies. Hearings are being conducted before the Indiana public service commission.

Properties Worth $70,000,000.

The combination, if approved, will result in a broad interurban traction system through Indiana, Michigan, and Ohio. A decision in the matter is expected within a month. The properties involved have total assets around $70,000,000. The Midland United company is one of the Insull holding concerns and represents around $278,000,000.

Middle West Utilities sagged a small fraction on a turnover exceeding 37,000 shares, Central and Southwest Utilities and Cities Service also declined minor fractions, but Utilities Power and Light advanced 1¼ and Inland Utilities made a fractional gain.

The automotive and radio groups were irregular. Allied Products advanced more than a point, Bendix Aviation, Cord corporation and Houdaille-Hershey "B" finished unchanged, Borg-Warner was down a minor fraction and Noblitt-Sparks, Winton Engine, Auburn Auto and Pines Winterfront declined a point or so. Atlas Stores advanced 1¼, while National Union Radio and Raytheon were strong; but Grigsby-Grunow and Wextark were lower.

Points of Strength.

In the investment trust group, Insull Utilities and Chicago corporation receded fractionally, but Burnham Trading was strong. Several points of strength appeared in the miscellaneous division. The Standard Dredge issues gained around two points and lesser gains were made by Art Metal, A. M. Castle, Electric Household, Kalamazoo Stove, Missouri-Kansas Pipe line, National Standard, Reliance Manufacturing, Binks Manufacturing "A" and E. L. Bruce.

The fifty most active stocks traded on the Chicago stock exchange last week had a market value of $3,362,222,580 at the close of business yesterday, compared with $3,067,268,438 at the close of the previous week, according to a compilation by Swift, Langill & Henke. This represents an increase of $94,954,142, or 3.09 per cent. The analysis shows that 30 of these stocks were traded in last year. These stocks had a market value of $760,642,898 yesterday, compared with $527,324,690 on March 23, 1929, an increase of $233,318,208, or 44.24 per cent.

PREDICT MERGER OF INDEPENDENTS WITH BIG THREE IN STEEL.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, March 22.—Disclosures that the United States Steel corporation and the Bethlehem Steel corporation were both receptive to the acquisition of the Corrigan-McKinney Steel company, which was purchased by the interests representing the Republic Steel corporation on Friday, has led to predictions in Wall street that before the close of 1930 all of the independent steel companies will be allied with one of the three large companies.

Gulf States Steel company and Inland Steel company are both regarded as slated to join the Republic merger, the destiny of the Youngstown Sheet and Tube company is now the center of a battle between Bethlehem and the Republic interests, and reports have linked the Colorado Fuel and Iron company with the Republic interests.

The expansion plans of the United States Steel corporation and the Bethlehem company are unknown factors as far as official announcements are concerned. The first intimation given that Bethlehem was after the Youngstown Sheet and Tube company was given after the plan of merger had been under consideration for some time and the terms of it had been worked out to the satisfaction of the leading executives of both companies.

No confirmation that the United States Steel company was interested in the Columbia Steel corporation's Pacific coast properties could be obtained until an option to purchase had been signed. It is generally believed, however, that United States Steel is interested in further expansion, particularly on the Pacific coast.

Construction Contracts Show Best Week of Year

New York, March 22.—(AP)—Heavy construction and engineering contracts let in the United States last week aggregated $181,886,000, the largest weekly total since the beginning of the year, Engineering News-Record reports. This figure compares with $77,882,000 in the previous week, and with $55,923,000 in the corresponding week last year.

N.Y. Clearing House Banks Show Increase in Deposits

New York, March 22.—(AP)—The weekly statement of the New York Clearing house shows total net demand deposits [average], $110,164,000 increase; time deposits [average], $16,781,000 increase; clearings, week ended today, $8,817,812,077; clearings, week ending March 15, $7,374,179,721.

STANDARD OIL SHARES PERFORM IN CURB MART

(New York curb list on page 12.)

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, March 22.—General and sustained strength in Standard Oil stocks, all of which had the best trading for the week, featured the short session on the curb. Half a dozen prominent members of the group rose to new highs for the year, with spectacular 10 point jumps in such stocks as Standard Oil of Ohio. Indiana Standard reached a new peak in lively dealings, as did Kansas Standard. Ohio Oil and Humble did likewise.

Other than in the oil stocks bull aggression was lacking in force and prices were rather irregular. This was true, especially, of the utility group. A few miscellaneous stocks were firm on special influences.

Curb bonds this week have almost eclipsed the performance of shares. Stimulated by ease in money even more than were stocks nearly every active listed curb bond moved into new high ground on the largest dealings of the year. Railroad bonds, utilities, some industrials, and all of the foreign list participated in the movement.

The past week has developed one other feature of interest, the revival of strength in neglected low priced stocks. A rising rate of turnover in these frequently marks public participation in trading on a considerable scale.

Stock Exchange Volume Largest Since Collapse

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, March 22.—With a turnover of 23,108,870 shares on the New York stock exchange, the market this week showed the widest expansion in trading since the break of last autumn. On four of the six trading days the volume exceeded 4,000,000 shares, while today's business, totaling 2,314,000 shares, was the heaviest for any Saturday of the year. In the bond market the increased activity was even more striking. Sales of bonds on the stock exchange for the week aggregated $115,372,500, representing the largest volume since the $125,313,230 total in the week ended June 14, 1924.

CHICAGO BANK STOCKS STAY IN FAIR DEMAND WITH SOME DECLINES

Chicago bank stocks continued in fair demand last week with a few issues showing slight declines.

Continental Illinois Bank and Trust company was in good demand at 706 bid, offered at 709, ex dividend. First National Bank advanced 20 points to 770 bid, with offerings at 775. National Bank of the Republic was in better demand and some 4 points higher at 155 to 156. Central Trust company showed little change, sales ranging between 410 and 414. Foreman-State National, ex dividend, lost 5 points at 777 to 782.

Northern Trust showed a lower tendency, being off some 10 points, last sales being recorded at 880. Union Bank of Chicago was neglected at 321 to 325. Peoples Trust and Savings was in supply at 498, with best bids at 494.

In the miscellaneous group, Bendix Service again enjoyed a large turnover, showing no price change, closing 16½ bid, offered at 16½. Chicago Daily News common showed a firmer tendency at 26½ to 26½; the preferred, ex dividend, was wanted at 94½, with offerings at 95½. Chicago Rapid Transit continued in demand, numerous sales ranging between 13½ and 14¼. Creamery Package showed a point improvement at 28½@29¼.

Costalen, British automotive designer, has been elected a director of the Indian Motorcycle company of Springfield, Mass., and will serve as a consulting engineer for the company which has acquired American rights for the manufacture of the Costalen Diesel aviation engine. Income Tax Receipts on March 20 are $460,328,715

Washington, D. C., March 22.—(AP)—Income tax receipts as of March 20 brought the total for the month up to $460,328,715, a sum about $90,000,000 less than the expected receipts for the entire month. The receipts for March 20 shown in the treasury statement were $75,475,289, while those for the same day last year totaled $93,779,154. The total for the month at this date last year was $478,760,685.

Trusts Place Confidence in Present Prices

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, March 22.—The policy of leading investment trusts in retaining or adding to their holdings of standard common stock issues since the beginning of the year is regarded by Wall street as an indication of the confidence which these institutions, and their affiliated banking interests, are placing in present security prices.

Before the fall financial slump, many investment trusts sold from 20 to 30 per cent of their security holdings, in anticipation of lower prices. The trusts were also generally successful in forecasting the rise in prices since November, and steadily added to their investments during November, December, and January.

Retain Investments.

As a result of their success in forecasting broad market swings, the investment trusts have come to be looked upon as shrewd judges of the security trends and Wall street attaches great importance to the fact that they are retaining their investments.

Investment trust operations for several weeks have been confined mainly to revising their portfolios, according to reports current in the financial district. A few trusts are reported to have taken profits on certain investments, but in the main the trusts have tended to invest additional funds in common stocks.

Buys Rail Shares.

During January an $80,000,000 trust decided to round out its holdings of railroad securities by increasing its investment in thirteen different roads to 5,000 shares or more in each. This policy resulted in the purchase of thousands of shares of stock at prices substantially lower than those now prevailing.

The low call money rates have been a minor factor in the tendency of trusts to keep their money invested in securities, according to bankers. While the call money rates are admittedly unattractive, this factor would not prevent the trusts from keeping their money in on call if they felt stock prices were likely to go lower. The general opinion expressed by the trust executives is that they can purchase large blocks of securities on an advantageous basis only during the pessimism caused by business depression.

BANK CLEARINGS FOR WEEK SHOW 18.4% DECLINE

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, March 22.—Bank clearings last week at leading cities in the United States, as reported to Dun's Review, of $11,911,858,000, show a decline of 18.4 per cent, from those of last year.

At New York City, clearings of $8,353,000,000 are 20.8 per cent lower while the aggregate for the principal centers outside of New York of $3,558,858,000 is 12.2 per cent below last year's.

The amount, both this week and a year ago, was increased by the heavy income tax returns. Bank clearings continue considerably reduced and are not only below last year's but are less than they were two years ago at nearly all of the leading cities.

BY FRED HARVEY.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, March 22.—The bears ran the stock market ragged today. Profit taking swamped what few leaders were not under concerted pressure with the result that virtually the whole list lost ground. It was the first important general reaction of the week.

Trading was on the heaviest scale of any Saturday so far this year, a total of some 2,314,900 shares changing hands. The ticker fell far behind the market in the first hour of business and was never able to catch up. Indeed the selling movement seemed to gain fresh headway in the last half hour, throwing it further behind and forcing many important stocks to new lows for the movement.

Breaks Sharply.

One of the sharpest breaks of the two hour session was in Western Union, which dropped nearly 20 points, 5 of which it later recovered, in response to a statement by President Newcomb Carlton that the company is experiencing the worst first quarter in fifteen years and will not earn by a considerable amount its first quarter dividend of $2 a share. The closing sale was 190, the low of the year. The company suffered a loss of more than $1,000,000 in operating income in January.

Western Union January gross was $11,066,234, against $11,707,875 in January, 1929. Operating income amounted to $252,515, against $1,284,882.

The decrease in gross revenue apparently was due to a loss of business on account of the damages to the Atlantic cables by the earthquake last fall and partly to a decline in telegraph business in several American states. The increase in expenses is attributed to some extent to the cost of restoring cable services.

STILL WAITING FOR BARGAIN DAYS?

SITTING on the sidelines while the parade of American securities marches forward?

Prevented from taking advantage of investment opportunities by the timidity and lack of vision of your advisor?

How could those who profess to be trained in the science of investment practice be so outspokenly bearish following the greatest panic in history, when history shows that anyone who purchases sound stocks in the months immediately following a panic inevitably makes substantial profits.

Those who are most boastful of their prophetic wisdom have been almost continuously bearish while securities have advanced 75 points on the average.

Does it not seem like hypocrisy—this boastfulness from those who had been either openly or covertly bearish for the greater part of the past five years?

LONDON MARTS OFFER BARGAINS AS MONEY EASES

Demand Rises; Brings Heavier Trading.

BY SIDNEY CAVE.

[Chicago Tribune News Service.]

LONDON, March 22.—The bargain sale is now on and the early birds are catching the worms. A huge amount of money poured into gilt edged securities, chiefly British government stocks, in a continuation of the surprising boomlet originating last week.

The markets finished the week in a blaze of strength in British government securities, the lowering of the money rates and the expectation of a continuance of easy money conditions being the main incentive for the bumper sudden demand for stocks, a demand increasing daily with a consequent soaring of prices in a market becoming short of supplies. The gilt edged markets literally boiled over.

Change in Sentiment.

The buying was sound and discriminating, making it not always easy to buy good stocks at the prices recorded on the ticker tapes. The atmosphere of the stock exchange shows a complete turn around from the recent abundance of idleness and discontent. Brokers and dealers' offices are showing a welcome activity after the long lean period, and the jobbers no longer are regarding everybody as sellers.

With the world's money rates on the down grade the indications at present are in more than one direction that preparations are well forward for stabilizing war finance for the purpose of bringing about a revival of general trade.

In explanation of the recent policy of the Labor government as it affects financial operations, THE TRIBUNE understands that arrangements are being made for floating the German reparations bonds due to be delivered shortly to the allied powers under the Young plan. The governor of the Bank of England dropped a significant hint at this week's half yearly meeting concerning the formation of the bank for international settlement, in which he declared that the Bank of England in the next ten years will not play an insignificant part in connection with reparations. It is believed here that the first installment of the reparations bond issue will be issued at the end of May or early in June.

Anticipate Another Slash.

This week's bank rate reduction to 3½ per cent was confidently anticipated and the markets are now talking just as confidently of a 3 per cent rate before budget day.

Although the chief interest continues to center on the investment securities, which has naturally spread to the better class of foreign bonds, the buying movement is influencing other security markets—railway stocks, insurance, banking, electrical supply shares, and well covered industrial debentures.

A bullish enthusiasm is spreading everywhere. Many British government loans show rises of two points on the week. There is scarcely a security on the gilt edged list that is not showing strong advances. All Indian loans are well up. The foreign bond market naturally responded to the buoyant atmosphere. Brazilians were the brightest gesture, with 6½s showing a rise of 9¾ points for the week to 94¾, and Sao Paulo coffee institute 6½s are up six points.

Trans-Atlantic favorites were more active, with Wall street rather erratic despite the influence of cheap money. International Nickel was still in the spotlight, reaching 43, when, contrary to expectations, Wall street has shown no disposition to unload on the rise.

PARIS BOURSE FIRMER

BY JAY ALLEN.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS, March 22.—With the government's announcement of forthcoming relief from taxation, stocks and securities were favorably impressed last week on the Paris bourse.

While the first sessions of the week were generally hesitant, and the tendency was for barely firm prices, the market immediately rallied on Wednesday when it was learned that the minister of finance, following a meeting of the cabinet council, authorized the present parliament proposal to decrease taxes, notably on property and stock market operations.

Following a long conversation between the president of a syndicate of brokers and the minister of finance, it is expected that certain restrictions will be removed from the Paris bourse, particularly involving a wider admission of foreign securities restricted by the special law of 1916.

FILES BRIEF ON IMPORT, EXPORT RATE PROPOSAL

On behalf of export firms of the Mississippi valley the Illinois Manufacturers' association has filed a brief of exceptions with the interstate commerce commission against an examiners' report on proposed export and import rates from ports of the Gulf of Mexico and south Atlantic.

"Substantial relief is needed by carriers to the gulf ports from the provisions of section 4, to enable them to successfully compete with carriers operating from north Atlantic ports," the brief states. "Distances between gulf ports and the principal foreign ports are greater than between north Atlantic and foreign ports; gulf steamships are inferior, sailings are irregular and insurance rates are higher."

The brief argues it is unreasonable to compare export and import rates with domestic rates and points out that the examiners, after having reached agreement in every respect with claims of the applicants, suddenly rejected the applicants' whole argument on the presumption that the rates will not meet a reasonable compensatory requirement. Colin C. H. Fyffe prepared the brief.

DEPOSIT SHARES.

It has been announced that 606,048 of the 600,000 outstanding common shares of the Southern California Gas corporation had been deposited in exchange for stock in the Pacific Lighting corporation up to Feb. 20, in accordance with the plan under which the latter company purchased the properties of Southern California Gas.

PROFIT TAKING SWAMPS WALL STREET LEADERS

Prices Are Forced Down Under Bear Pressure.

the company is therefore attributed mainly to nonrecurring and unusual factors affecting the telegraph and cable business, and which, it is said, will not have a permanent effect.

Give Best Accounting.

As a group the oils gave the best account of themselves, but the close usual most of them in retreat with losses of from a fraction to a point or more. Standard of New Jersey, the leader of this section, made a valiant stand and for a time seemed to be rallying forward in fine shape against the general trend, but profit taking proved too much for it in the end and it wound up fractionally lower. Sentiment in the oils, long exceedingly bearish, has changed somewhat since prices of crude oil were advanced in California.

There was also some demand for rubber stocks and United Aircraft, by inclination of the department regarded a new high for the year on reported good earnings. A number of specialties managed to achieve "plus" signs, Texas Gulf Sulphur being conspicuous among them. Investment buying was noted in preferred issues such as American Sugar Refining and Jones and San Francisco.

Bear attacks were particularly active in some directions. The raid on National Cash Register was continued with such success that the issue slumped more than five points to a new 1930 low—nearly half of the early top, however, being recovered in the later dealings. Simmons was also subjected to further attacks with lower prices resulting and Montgomery Ward, which is said to be under pressure by the same pool sunk to new low ground for the year.

The copers held their own fairly well, Kennecott, one of the recognized leaders of the group, closed unchanged from last night's final figure and Anaconda was off only a point or so.

Copper Demand Improves.

Copper stocks are meeting with a little more favor than of a few weeks ago. One reason for the change of sentiment is the fact that so far copper companies have maintained their dividends with but one or two exceptions despite the known reaction in the industry. It also is declared that the demand for copper is improving as wire and cable manufacturers are expanding their own operations with are dependent of course upon the public utility industry where extension is the program.

SHEEHAN, OTHERS MAY BE OUSTED IF FOX SUCCEEDS

New York, March 22.—[U. P.]—William Fox, if successful in his battle to retain absolute control of his huge amusement enterprises, will attempt to purge all the Fox and Loew's motion picture interests and will oust all the executives of his companies who recently opposed him in his refinancing plan, the Motion Picture News said today.

The executives indicated are William Sheehan, vice president of Fox film corporation; James R. Grainger, general sales manager; Saul Rogers, vice president and general counsel, and John Zanft, vice president and general manager of the Fox Theaters corporation. They all opposed a financing plan submitted by Fox at the recent stockholders meeting and supported a proposal sponsored by Halsey, Stuart & Co., one of Fox's major creditors.

A representative of Sheehan said today that Sheehan had entered suit against Fox and the Fox Film corporation for a show-cause order to prevent Fox, the Bancamerica-Blair corporation, Lehman Bros., et al, from issuing any securities.

Exchange Head Resigns After Conspiracy Charge

San Francisco, Cal., March 22.—(AP)—Joseph N. Keyston resigned today as president of the San Francisco stock exchange coincident with his arraignment with eight others on charges of conspiracy to embezzle more than $500,000 from the Bank of Italy. The cases were continued in municipal court on request of counsel. A date for entering pleas was set for March 29. Allegations in the indictment center around asserted use of the bank's funds in stock market speculations, resulting in the disappearance of more than half a million dollars.

News and Gossip of Stock Marts

New Copper.

The annual report of the Magma Copper company for 1929 is expected to show about $7.25 a share earned on the stock. This would compare with $5.14 a share in 1928. Despite the fact that the company has curtailed its operations considerably, it is expected that dividend requirements of $1.25 a share will be covered in the first half of this year.

Merger Announcement.

In some quarters it is believed that the announcement registered by Stutz recently has been due to report that this corporation will be merged by Moon Motor in the near future. In the deal whereby the latter would acquire Gardner, Moon is planning an aggressive campaign in the coming year in line with its acquisition of the Buxton front wheel drive and New Era Motors.

Rubber Benefits.

Firestone Bond and Share is reflecting the benefits accruing to the company as a result of the greater development of its natural gas resources. The alignment of its subsidiary, Ohio Power and Light, with United Gas should materially strengthen the value of Bond and Share in this

LATE SELLING LOWERS WHEAT MARKET PRICES

Sympathetic Decline Is Made by Corn.

BY CHARLES MICHAELS.

Buying of wheat was much less aggressive and prices here and abroad averaged lower. The market held up well in the early trading, but broke sharply toward the last in sympathy with Winnipeg, the finish being at net losses of 1⅛@2c, with May, $1.08⅝@1.08¾, and July, $1.07⅞ to 1.07½@1.07⅝. Winnipeg closed 3⅞@4⅛c lower, with May there only ¼c over Chicago, compared with 2⅜c at the finish on Friday.

Bulk of the selling toward the last was of a local character, although there was some pressure from operators who bought lower down. The government did nothing as far as the May was concerned. Sentiment as a whole was somewhat less bullish.

Liquidation appears to have run its course in the grain markets, and prices were on the upgrade the greater part of the last week, with the finish on Saturday at net gains of 2⅛@3c on wheat, 2⅝@4¼c on corn, 1@2c on oats, and 5⅛@7⅛c on rye, as compared with a week ago. Lard was 25@30c, and bellies, 72½@85c higher for the week.

European Stocks Decreasing.

Buying of cash wheat by Germany in order to secure supplies for mixing purposes before the new import duty goes into effect, and winter weather which has increased consumption abroad has caused a reduction in supplies on the continent and a good demand is generally expected for North American grain, with possibly some American hard winter taken unless Winnipeg loses ground, as compared with Chicago.

The decline of 1¼@1⅝d in Liverpool during the day was regarded as only natural, in view of the sharp upturn which has occurred during the last two weeks, and the same applies to Buenos Aires, which was ⅛@¾c lower. Technical position of the market has been weakened by the bulge of nearly 10c from the recent low point, and local sentiment was somewhat less bearish.

Unless the southwest receives rain over the week-end an increase in the dry weather reports from Kansas and Oklahoma are confidently expected by the trade. The Modern Miller had a report from Lyons, Kas., saying that condition in the two states was decidedly spotted, and there appeared to be no prospect of a bumper yield.

Corn Closes Easy.

Stop loss orders were uncovered in the corn market at the start, with selling mainly in sympathy with wheat. Buying against bids checked the decline, but the finish was about the inside figures, with net losses of ⅝@1c, May being 83⅞@84c, and July, 85⅝@85⅝c. Country offerings to arrive were fair, with purchases of 52,000 bu, mainly No. 4 yellow, at 6c under May for 20 day shipment. Forecast indicated less favorable weather for field work.

Scattered longs were sellers of oats, but there was support on resting orders and prices held within a narrow range, the close being ¼@⅜c lower, with May, 43½@43⅝c, and July, 43⅛@43¼c. Weather conditions were generally favorable for field work. Owing to the limited supplies of oats in all positions in the country, there is a disposition on the part of close observers of conditions to advocate the buying side of the May delivery.

Selling of rye by houses that were on the buying side recently found the market poorly supported and the finish was 2@2⅜c lower, May closing at 64½c, and July, 69⅛c. There was buying of May and selling of July around 5c difference early.

WORLD'S GRAIN MARKET NEWS

Weakness in the Winnipeg wheat market, which has been a leader in strength of late, in declining 4¾c and closing at the bottom, has turned the wheat trade here more strongly to the bear side and caused heavy liquidation by local holders, coupled with increased pressure from the bear side. The trade in all was inclined to take a more pessimistic view of the world's situation. Absence of good foreign buying and of light export clearances, and a belief that southwestern crops will be larger than last year, were the main attractive factors.

Traders who have been bullish on corn for ten days have sold liberally and, in some instances, hedged their holdings by sales of wheat. Believers in corn as an investment proposition regard the setback as no more than natural after a sharp advance and are not at all scared at the increased country offerings of cash grain. Aggregate sales, however, are not considered bearish at present price levels, considering the bullish statistical situation.

Du Page County Plans Fifty Miles of Forestways

WOODLAND PARK SYSTEM TO BE 7,500 ACRES

Tax Rate Not to Be Increased.

"By the adoption and execution of this forest preserve and forestway plant, keyed as it is to the broad highway plans, Du Page county takes one more step in its program for becoming one of the most outstanding counties in the United States. Even more than in the past, the population which is attracted here will be those who demand the fine things shown in this plan, who insist on wide and beautiful boulevards and forestways, and who themselves build good homes on spacious grounds."

(Excerpt from official plan for development of Du Page county forest preserve.)

BY AL CHASE.
[Real Estate Editor.]

Three great "forestways" or recreational belts of lawns, shrubbery, trees, waterways, walks and equestrian paths are contemplated to cross Du Page county from north to south, and linking its forest preserves, according to an announcement made public yesterday by the Du Page County Forest Preserve commission, of which W. H. Bledgett of Downers Grove is president. The other members are W. H. Baethke of Glen Ellyn, Frank E. Ayres of Hinsdale and Nicholas W. Lies of Wayne. Mr. Lies also is chairman of the county board of supervisors.

Fifty miles of winding forestways on both banks of the three waterways meandering down through Du Page county from north to south are contemplated. These belts of greenery will be from 300 to 600 feet in width, or with an average width of 400 feet. They will comprise about 2,500 acres.

In addition the county contemplates adding 5,000 acres of wooded areas throughout Du Page, making a grand total of 7,500 acres of forestway and forest preserve as a future goal to strive for. This acreage is arranged as nearly as possible in accordance with the county's expected population. For example, Du Page, which had only 31,000 in 1910, 42,000 in 1920 and probably will have 100,000 in the 1930 census, will show 168,000 by 1940 and close to 365,000 in 1950, it is predicted.

Not to Be Motor Highways.

The proposed 7,500 acres of breathing space will give Du Page county 23 acres per 1,000 people in 1950, which is conservative, according to the county supervisors. At present Westchester county, New York, approximately Du Page county's size, has 17,000 acres in county park and parkway, which is at the rate of 35 acres per 1,000 people.

Du Page county now has sixteen small forest preserve areas. In addition to providing three great recreational belts of water and greenery across the county, this trio of forestways will link up most of these sixteen forest preserves. They are not to be motor highways, however, but merely wide belts of parkways along the banks of the county's three waterways, the west and east branches of the Du Page river and Salt creek.

Plenty of Good Fishing.

These forestways will extend from 150 to 300 feet on each bank of the streams they follow. The banks will be planted, with the land a little farther away devoted to heavy planting of trees, and at or near the outside border space will be reserved for a bridle driveway, if such is deemed necessary later.

In this belt there will be paths for hikers, bridle path for equestrians, numerous small picnic sites, and occasional necessary water supply centers, lavatories, and comfort stations. The water areas could be stocked with fish. The entire layout of the forestways will combine to make a complete system of the county's recreational lands which will be readily accessible to all of the population.

Expect Dedications by Public.

The report states that it is confidently expected that practically all of the 2,500 acres of river valley forestway land can be acquired through donations by property owners along the right of way.

"If Du Page county is to remain a beautiful and attractive area it must be, under pressure of increasing population public ownership or control of the water courses must be arranged for," the report states. "Already these streams have become polluted, some of them badly.

"This plan will bring about an actually worth-while development of the miles of north and south forestways along the streams, thus making the best and most adequate use of the river valleys, and making more attractive, and accessible the private property which will adjoin the forestways for residential purposes. Instead of these stream valleys becoming the back yards and dumping places they will become the front yards and scenic highways of the county.

Would Permit Reforestation.

"The plans would permit and encourage flood control schemes by the construction of low dams and fords and would also permit and encourage the reforestation and development of a park like character along these natural water courses."

Of the 7,500 acres suggested as the limits of the board's forest preserve it is believed that better than 50 per cent, or 2,750 acres, are now covered with forest or scattered remains of former forests.

A substantial part of the river frontage proposed to be obtained for the forestways have scattered timber on it, although most of it has been cut over," the report continues.

"It would be the program to replant the open spaces of the river forestways in such a manner as to bring the total area of forests or woods to at least 6,000 acres, including the present timber, within 20 years.

"Under such conditions the new planting would be increasingly fine each year, merging into the present timber without a break. The other 1,500 acres would be devoted to open picnic spaces, parking areas, recreation centers, water areas in lagoons, and small lakes."

This forest preserve plan was adopted by the Du Page county forest preserve commission with the express understanding in the resolution that it did not contemplate raising the tax rate or floating a bond issue.

MODERNISTIC SCHOOL ARCHITECTURE FOR CHICAGO HEIGHTS

Royer, Daneley & Smith, architects, of Urbana, Ill., designed the above structure, to be erected at 10th street and Dixie highway, Chicago Heights, for the Bloom Township High school. A bond issue of $760,000 for construction was authorized by voters last year and the bonds have been sold. Work is scheduled to start this spring, with two years required for completion. It will accommodate 2,000 pupils, 800 more than at present are cared for in the old high school. The wing at the left will contain a large auditorium and gymnasium. J. J. Eckfeldt is president of the high school board.

GREENERY BELTS FOR DU PAGE

Du Page county, Cook county's neighbor to the west, is planning an interesting and comprehensive development of its forest preserve system by linking the major woodland parks together with three "forestways" running from north to south across the county. These "forestways" will be from 300 to 600 feet wide and will really be elongated parks along the banks of Du Page county's three streams, the west branch of the Du Page river, the east branch, and Salt creek. They will have bridle paths, pedestrian walks, lawns, shrubbery, trees, and picnic space, but no motor drives. Provision will be made for automobile drives on each extreme edge, if necessity demands it in future years.

Plan $112,500 in Bungalows in Plum Grove Development

Bungalow construction to the value of $112,500 is announced for the Plum Grove development of Arthur T. McIntosh & Co., in Palatine this season, according to an estimate made by B. H. Hellen, general sales manager.

SOL H. GOLDBERG WILL BUILD ON LINCOLN AVENUE

Sol H. Goldberg, president of the Hump Hairpin Manufacturing company, has leased the 146 feet of frontage at 3129-41 Lincoln avenue from the Chicago Title and Trust company, trustee, and the Lake View Trust and Savings bank, for ninety-nine years at a reported average annual rental of $45,798, or a term rental of $4,534,000. Ascher J. Goldfine, J. L. Miller of the Lake View Trust and Savings bank, and Morris Edelberg were brokers.

Mr. Goldberg is to erect a two story fireproof building, space in which he has leased for fifteen years, through Mark Levy & Bro., to the Atlas Stores, Inc. The balance will be rented to chain store concerns. Leichenko & Esser are the architects.

BUYS KENILWORTH RESIDENCE.

Julius Friedlander has purchased the residence at 815 Briar street, Kenilworth, from Henning L. Sandsteel, builder. Mrs. B. Lang of the Winnetka office of the E. E. Stults Realty company, was broker.

CHICAGO WRESTS FLORAL HONORS FROM NEW YORK

Exhibit at Stadium to Rank First.

The Chicago area has wrested from New York state the honor of having the largest garden club membership of any region. Two new garden clubs which recently affiliated with the 90 already members of the Garden Club of Illinois bring a notable roster of enthusiasts with which to launch the first Central States Garden and Flower show at the Chicago Stadium April 5 to 14.

This vast array of floral and landscaping exhibits is credited with being the largest in point of area of any of the twelve flower shows held in the United States. It is said by its sponsors to be one-third greater than the International Flower show in New York which precedes it.

This, they point out, brings to Chicago the honor of climaxing at its close some ten weeks of spring shows where horticulture and floriculture of the highest order is displayed to the interested public.

Exhibits of twelve commercial concerns will fill the Stadium arena proper, fringed with banks of landscaping, displays from amateur and professional gardeners, and from the garden clubs of the middle west. The club exhibits will be displayed to advantage on the terraces built around and overlooking the main floor, which will contain 40,000 square feet of gardens from Chicago public parks, Cook county forest preserve, horticultural associations, and commercial growers.

The garden club displays include miniature model of houses and gardens, full size porch arrangements with growing flowers, vines, and outdoor furniture, living room flower groupings, growing gardens, garden gates with pathway plantings, lawn table settings, rack gardens, and other inviting real life exhibits.

The dinner and special occasion tables will be set with the latest styles in crystal glass and china, and the Sunday tables will offer examples of beauty with economy. Each will be graced with appropriate cut flowers.

Sixty shadow box studies of flowers, each a copy of a picture, will be shown under two classes, Japanese arrangements and colored flower paintings. In the junior garden competitions boys and girls will receive prizes for miniature gardens, conservation posters, and home made bird houses. Potted and cut bloom arrays of unusual size and variety are expected, by reason of there being 171 classes of prizes open to both private and commercial growers.

GERMAN CONSUL TO MOVE TO 520 NORTH MICHIGAN

Dr. H. F. Simon, German consul general in Chicago, has leased 3,000 square feet of floor space on the seventh floor of the McGraw-Hill building, 520 North Michigan, for five years. At the completion of extensive alterations—about May 1—the German consul will move to his new quarters from 646 North Michigan. Other foreign consulates in the vicinity of Tribune Square are those of France, Great Britain, Japan and Rumania. R. B. Witwer of Hall & Ellis negotiated the German consulate lease.

30,799 Californians Get O. K.'s to Sell Real Estate

If the number of Californians engaged in real estate activity is any criterion the business of selling lots, houses, and other realty should be pretty good in the Golden Gate state. Edgar M. Snow, veteran Chicago real estate man, who has been wintering in California, reports that 30,799 real estate brokers and salesmen were licensed during January and February of this year. Last year's licenses totaled 56,013, and T. A. Kelly, deputy real estate commissioner, estimates that 1930 will see a like number, Mr. Snow advises.

WINTHROP AVENUE LEASE.

Elsie M. Langworth has leased the six apartment building at 4870 Winthrop avenue from Agnes E. Monteith for eight years and will operate it as a rooming house. Sam L. Hoffenberg, of the Hensel-Coffman company, was broker.

Polka Bros. Lease Movie Theater at Crystal Lake

Polka Brothers, theater operators in several suburbs, have leased the El Tovar theater, erected by popular subscription at Crystal Lake, and will operate it for ten years beginning March 1st. Carl Dreutzer of Chicago was broker. The lessor is the Crystal Lake Theater Building corporation, of which Edward Kirchberg, Chicago jeweler, is president. Polka Brothers operate the following picture houses: Deerpath in Lake Forest, Pickwick in Park Ridge, Des Plaines in Des Plaines, Fargo in Sycamore, Geneva in Geneva, and the New Fargo in De Kalb.

Hosiery Shop Chain Rents Store at 142 North State

The Red-Robin Hosiery stores, who operate fifteen shops throughout the east and middle west, have leased the store at 142 North State street from the Hatter Newmark corporation for one year and two months at a reported annual rental of $17,000. It is stated that the lessees expect to have fifty stores by the end of 1930. Milton L. Schwartz of Schwartz Brothers was broker for the lessors.

Calls Land in Old "Subs" a Good Bargain

Making money in real estate is accomplished, so big realty investors point out, primarily by following the old Wall street maxim—"buy when stocks are low and no one wants them or has a good word to say about them; then sell when they're high and you hear nothing but predictions of higher prices and everyone else is buying."

The people who have made the most money in real estate, especially the big fortunes that have been amassed from owning Chicagoland realty, have piled up their profits by buying in times like the present when the market is quiet and not by purchase during boom times. There is now developing and has been for some time a slow increase in "good buying." In other words, shrewd investors are quietly picking up bargains, and there are plenty of them to be had. Later on, when the general public buying gets under way on a big scale and prices scoot skywards, many of these same shrewd investors will take their profits just as quietly by selling to the public which by that time will be in a strenuous buying mood.

Suggests Bargains.

In this connection, one source of bargains in real estate, that of the numerous abandoned subdivisions in the Chicago area, again is suggested as a timely object for the investor to look into right now.

Most of these subdivisions were marketed years ago by firms which merely platted their acreage and sold out all of the lots without putting in any improvements. The original buyers paid prices which in many cases would appear ridiculously low in today's market. It is believed by one leading subdivider that a fair profit shown these original buyers would result in the willingness to sell at a price which later on would net the purchaser an unusually good return when he decided to sell.

One of Chicago's largest subdividers pointed out a subdivision laid out not far from Westchester a year or so before Westchester was even thought of. It was entirely sold out at that time at prices way below those paid for Westchester lots.

"Buy When Others Want to Sell."

"If some one would make it a business to look up the owners of lots in subdivisions like this one," he said, "buy them at a reasonable profit to the original buyer, who probably would jump at the chance to sell, he could resell them at a good profit to himself and the new owners would later on make another good profit.

"The big money in real estate is made in a market like this by people who buy when others all want to sell."

LABOR TRIBUNAL TO BE DISCUSSED AT CAPITAL MEET

BY THOMAS WREN.

Building trades leaders and representatives of the National Association of Building Trades Employers will meet in Washington on April 21 to consider adoption of a tribunal which has been proposed to abolish jurisdictional strife in the nation's building industry.

The sketch that will be presented to the general Washington meeting is the outcome of joint meetings of a sub-committee of builders and labor men. This sub-committee was appointed at a Tampa, Fla., meeting of building trades officers and building contractors last February. The labor men are Michael J. McDonough, head of the building trades department of the American Federation of Labor; John J. Hynes, sheet metal workers, Washington; and Patrick J. Morrin, iron workers, St. Louis, Mo.

Rosenthal to Attend.

The construction interests were represented by Oscar W. Rosenthal, Chicago builder and head of the Builders' association; Christian G. Norman, New York, and James J. Scully, Boston. President Hoover urged establishment of an adjustment board as an instrument that would encourage building and help procure the confidence of the public in the construction industry.

Should the Washington meeting adopt the outlined adjustment board the battle waged in its behalf will have ended for E. M. Craig, the executive secretary of the Building Construction Employers' association. His latest office as head of the American construction council is occupying considerable time, but it is expected he will make the Washington trip next month.

Donlin Favors Board.

Former President John Donlin of the building trades department of the A. F. of L., writes in the "Plasterer":

"Union building tradesmen must no longer be responsible for jurisdictional strikes. They are the most vicious and unnecessary disturbing influence confronting the construction industry today. We must not injure communities, cause innocent persons to suffer along with the rank and file of building trades. Such an adjustment board cannot be evaded or ignored."

LOOKING BACKWARD

To March 23, 1920; 10 Years Ago Today

In 1867 Russell Sage advised John J. Hall to buy real estate at Western and Madison. He predicted that in time this section would be close to the city's center of population. Mr. Hall, now ninety years of age, followed Sage's advice two years later and paid what was then the high price of $200 a front foot for the southwest corner of Madison and Western, lot 23x199 feet. He has just sold the property to George K. Ogden and others for an indicated price of $40,000.

RUSSELL SAGE.

After being vacant for several months the one time residence of the late George B. Harris, former president of the Burlington railway, and also for sometime the home of Charles H Wacker, head of the Chicago plan commission, at 1431 North State street, has been sold by the Presbyterian hospital to Samuel N. Crowen, the architect.

An important transfer in north side property has just been closed in the purchase by the estate of Carter H. Harrison from J. K. Farley of the property at the southwest corner of Franklin and Superior streets for $90,000 cash. The lot is 100x100 feet and is improved with a new five story and basement mill constructed building occupied by the Farley Candy company and one other tenant. The Hibernian Bank associates represented Mr. Farley and Callistus E. Ennis & Co. acted for the Harrison estate.

CARTER H. HARRISON.

The old Dupee residence in Woodlawn avenue, south of 48th street, has been purchased by Silas Strawn of the firm of Winston, Payne & Strawn, attorneys. The dwelling is one of the landmarks of the Kenwood district. It was erected nearly twenty-five years ago.

To March 23, 1900; 30 Years Ago Today

Keebler & Co. report having closed a lease for Charles F. Gunther for his six story and basement building, 25x100 feet, at 260 State street, for ten years from May 1 at a total rental of $80,000. The building was rented to Charles O. Smith, Harry Perry and C. H. Colby who will occupy the main floor with a buffet and chop house. Private dining rooms will be located on the upper floors. By the terms of the lease the tenants will build an elevator and install a new electric light and steam plant.

Mrs. M. M. Starkweather has sold through the agency of J. C. Sampson her old homestead at 5229 East End avenue, 150x175 feet, to Avery Coonley for $30,000. The property is one of the landmarks of Hyde Park.

HOME BUILDING, REMODELING

HOUSE OF BRICK UNITES BEAUTY WITH LONG LIFE

And Cost of Construction Is Moderate.

BY LOUISE BARGELT.
[Home Builders Editor.]

Brick walls, besides possessing distinction and beauty quite their own, give to a house an atmosphere of permanence indicative of low upkeep cost. Economy of construction is in no way synonymous with postulate cheapness. We have a good example of a brick house of this type in a sturdy Norman house, built by James Grimm in Lake Forest, Ill. Mr. Grimm's seven room home with two baths can be built of excellent materials for around $13,000. Architect, Willard C. Walker, 58 East Washington street, Chicago.

There is no refuting the fact that the only economical way to build a house is to build it well—of good materials. Those who have already built their homes will recognize the truth of this. Persons who are contemplating building this spring and summer will do well to absorb the diction—as a sort of building dogma—cheap construction is extravagantly expensive.

A man decides to build a home. He has a certain amount of money to spend on it. If he will go to a qualified architect or a recognized and reliable builder, if he thinks he cannot possibly afford an architect, he will find the architect or builder ready to specify methods of construction and materials to use which will safeguard his home from subsequent upkeep and high maintenance costs, and which will insure his home for him as a good investment.

Gets Most for Money.

In this way he will get the most out of his money; perhaps not such a large house as he anticipated but a good house, a satisfactory house and one to which he can add a room or two later on if he finds his purse enlarging to meet new desires.

The house we are considering today is built after the Norman type. Its exterior walls are of common brick, with window and door frames of adzed oak. All the sheet metal work and hood over the main entrance are of copper. The roof is of wood shingle graduated in color and laid with an uneven butt line.

The interior plan provides extreme compactness. The two bedrooms and bath on the first floor are elevated five steps above the living quarters. This allows the window sill line to be placed well above the ground and at the same time permits the house to have the low appearance of a cottage. By raising these bedrooms almost half a story and by sloping the ground slightly towards the rear, the basement space under the two bedrooms has been used for a garage with the entrance in the rear. The incline to this garage level is consequently very slight.

Has Two Bedrooms.

On the second floor there are two bedrooms and a bath and a considerable amount of storage in addition to that shown on the second floor plan.

The living room has an adzed oak beamed ceiling with oak trim. The rail on the living room side of the stairs is built like a screen so that the top rail is horizontal throughout its length and the sides are made of irregular width oak boards with a very low ballustrade at the top.

The fireplace is of rough stone and the heavy oak beam over the top and space along the side for a concealed wood box with iron door.

The walls and ceilings are in textured plaster.

NEW BATHROOMS NOW BEING MADE LARGER IN SIZE

It is interesting to watch and to observe how our bathrooms are growing. They are now seen in many homes so large that they can easily be used as a dressing room, with dressing table, perhaps, which matches the lavatory and a chaise longue displacing the old time bathroom white stool. Room, too, for our modern light treatment machines and for our popular shower compartments.

ABOUT TO BUILD? SOME POINTERS ON LOT PURCHASE

Well Located Site Is Essential.

BY HOMER GRANT.

There will be many people this spring who will take advantage of the present low building costs and deliberately set about solving the problem of how to get the most out of life by buying or building a home of their own.

One of the first steps in home ownership is the buying of a lot. Many people buy a lot and pay for it before they consider building at all for in no other way do they simplify the necessary financial start.

But whether one buys a lot and builds immediately or later on, the choice of the site is vitally important. For no matter how attractive a home may be, how easy to look at and live in, if the surroundings are not satisfactory, if the neighborhood irritates and the community lacks sufficient conveniences to be comfortable to live in, much of the joy of the house is taken away.

How Far Money Goes.

Below are some dozen or more points which the buyer of the lot will do well to check up on, when he considers the purchase of a home site. The money that he has to pay for a lot will determine how many of the various conveniences noted can be obtained, but the home owner can endeavor in every way to secure as many possible advantages as his money will pay for.

Besides the matter of utilities and improvements there are other questions which he should have answered satisfactorily no matter what he may pay for the lot.

Points to Consider.

1. Transportation facilities; how near the lot is to the station and how far the lot is from the business location—in minutes not miles.
2. Character of land; its level. If low inquire into drainage and if it is above street remember that it must be graded down or terraced.
3. Inquire into class of people in neighborhood, not the kind of houses being built.
4. Investigate building restrictions and zoning laws.
5. Inquire into gas, sewer and water supply.
6. Find out proximity of lot to schools and churches.
7. If lot is in fairly new suburb inquire into fire and police protection.

Special Assessments.

8. Investigate the likelihood of special assessments for streets, sidewalks, sewer and so on.
9. Don't forget to ask about electric and telephone service.
10. Reasonableness of taxes in the community in proportion to the facilities and improvements that the town provides.
11. Have title to your land examined by reliable lawyer or title company before signing the deed.
12. Existence in the general vicinity of banks and building and loan associations is desirable if assistance is to be sought in the financing of the home.

Are Improvements In?

A lot where the public utilities and public improvements are yet to be provided is naturally much cheaper than a lot which possesses these improvements and conveniences and the home owner has a certain number of years to pay for these special assessments.

However, he should know just how much they will amount to and count on them, otherwise he may find that they prove burdensome along with the other expenses attendant paying for his home.

He should look into all these matters carefully and decide beforehand whether or not he prefers to buy in a community where improvements are reasonably complete and special assessments not likely to be troublesome.

CLOTH INSERT IN WEATHER STRIP SEALS WINDOWS

Weather stripping of metal with a chemically treated cloth insert to prevent decay is a new type which has been developed recently.

It is claimed that this makes a tight seal, even in cases where the window does not fit tightly. Shrinkage of windows is allowed in that the metal weather stripping has a cloth insert and even a length of an inch or so one way or the other does not lessen the snugness of the sealing effect. The windows may be easily raised or lowered, the metal only coming in contact with the cloth.

SPRING IS HERE; SUBURBANITES TURN TO LAWNS

Garden Groups for Tribune Contest.

Spring is here. It made its official bow on Friday amid the hearty good wishes of almost every householder in the west and northwest sides that there will be a sufficient amount of sunshine and rain to produce extraordinarily fine greenery this year. There is a general enthusiasm among home owners over THE TRIBUNE lawn contest, and many are already working on the turf hoping to be one of the numerous prize winners, the weather was cooperating, of course.

Interest in the contest seems most particularly apparent, and further announcement of the competition is being made by the presidents of garden clubs and civic groups.

Mrs. Plamondon Indorses Contest.

"It's a marvelous idea," said Mrs. George Plamondon enthusiastically as she was leaving for Wheaton Thursday noon to announce the contest to members of the Wheaton Garden club, of which she is president. Mrs. Plamondon's winter address is 451 Oakdale avenue while she is carrying on her work as a director of the Garden Club of Illinois.

"Wheaton is a community of gardens and beautiful lawns, so I am convinced the response will be splendid," she continued.

The Garden club of Park Ridge is unique in the respect that it includes as many men on its membership list as it does women. "This makes it more of a civic enterprise," explained Mrs. J. Woodruff Saul, the president. "And we find that we can accomplish a great deal more with the support of our husbands and other business men of the town. I am quite certain there have already been entries from Park Ridge, and the club will certainly encourage more people to follow suit."

Mrs. Saul Enthusiastic.

Mrs. Saul also remarked that many of the new and small home owners are showing considerable interest in their plots, and would want to take part in the competition.

"The lawn contest will be splendid encouragement for this project," Mrs. Saul said. E. A. Krevis, vice president of the organization, indorsed the president's recommendation.

"I congratulate THE TRIBUNE on its splendid lawn contest it is sponsoring this spring," said Mrs. Joseph R. Chandler of St. Charles, second vice president of the Garden Club of Illinois. "As membership chairman of the state organization I am in contact with most of the clubs, and shall do all I can to arouse interest in all communities of the city and the suburbs within the 40 mile radius. I know St. Charles will support it, for we have had yard and garden contests for the last two years, and the residents are enthusiastic about the idea."

Develops Home Interest.

Mrs. Hattie Glos, president of the St. Charles Garden club; Mrs. Harry Hughes, president of the Pottawatomie of the Junior Garden club of St. Charles; Mrs. R. T. Munn, secretary of the junior group, and Dr. Ruth Lowrey will all indorse THE TRIBUNE competition at the joint meeting of the three organizations Tuesday afternoon in the community house.

"A contest of this nature develops more interest and pride, and what is more necessary for the betterment of any community?" remarked Mrs. A. C. Eby, president of the Elgin Better Gardens club. "There are three garden clubs in Elgin, and they represent the home owners with both large and small lawns. We are sure to have much kinds entering the lawn contest."

Mrs. George M. Kendall, president of the Glen Ellyn Garden club has announced the competition to the four clubs into which the organization is divided. The head of each, including Mrs. R. B. Shepard, Mrs. Charles D. Ayer, Mrs. Clayton C. Myers, and Mrs. Edward W. Peterson, has obtained a hearty response on the part of the members.

C. & N. W. TUNNELS FOR PEDESTRIANS ASKED BY GROUP

Park View Association Demands Subways.

A letter demanding the construction of pedestrian tunnels at Ridgeway and Lawndale avenues was sent Monday by the Park View Improvement association to P. G. Campbell, superintendent of the Wisconsin division of the Chicago and North Western railroad.

Up to the present time no consideration has been given, it was reported, to the communication which was admitted to have been received. The final decision in this matter rests in the hands of the superintendent, his office declared.

Pedestrians Must Detour.

The letter pointed out that commuters using the Park View station were required to walk three or four blocks out of their way due to this lack of pedestrian subways.

"Only recently a man was killed on this station who might have been saved had there been a tunnel," the message declares. In addition, it maintains Park View station furnishes more revenue than any other local station on the Wisconsin division.

Officers Installed.

At a recent meeting held in the Addison Park fieldhouse Richard J. Wuerst was installed as president of the association and Alex Koehn as vice president. Alexander Falk, justice of the peace of Niles township, president of the Morton Grove Improvement association, and first president of the original Park View club 25 years ago, recalled old times in the community. He told of the days when there were no paved streets in the community and when kerosene lamps did the work of the modern street lighting system.

Fred C. Reimers, 2847 N. Hamlin avenue, another old settler in the neighborhood, also recalled days gone by. Other officers installed were William G. Uebel, second vice president; John Eller, secretary; Harry L. Tobey, treasurer, and Joseph Hammond, sergeant-at-arms.

Otto Hammil was named chairman of the committee to aid the Northwest Federation of Improvement Clubs in working out a sports program.

Nellie Marlatt Named Irving Park Librarian

Miss Nellie Marlatt has been appointed librarian of the Irving Park branch library, 3718 Irving Park boulevard, it was announced yesterday. Miss Marlatt was formerly reference librarian of the Legler Regional branch library. Miss Ruth Puffer, who was connected with the North West Town branch, is Miss Marlatt's first assistant.

Maine Township High Moves Into New Building Tomorrow

Quietly and without ceremony or ostentation, the 900 odd students of Maine Township High school will enter their new building at Dempster street and Potter road tomorrow morning just as if they had not spent their last day in the old one on Friday.

Formal good-bys to the old classrooms as well as formal welcomings to the new ones will be avoided; there will be no parade from one building to the other; and classes will be held as usual in the newly completed $750,000 building.

However, next Saturday parents and residents of Des Plaines and Park Ridge, the contributing towns, will be invited to an open house and inspection of the new school. A dedication ceremony will be held late in May.

Unconventional in Design.

The building, which contains 48 classrooms and six laboratories, faces Dempster street. It is V shaped, the two wings forming an acute angle, and as one enters the main entrance and rotunda the design dispels all ideas held in regard to the conventional school building.

Sunlight filters down through four floors in green tinted rays, which obtain their shade from the colored skylight. As one stands in the middle of the octagonal hall the two corridors stretch out on either hand.

Next the rotunda are the school office on one side and the medical examining room on the other. The first floor is given over to vocational classrooms, the woodworking shops, the domestic mechanics room, and auto mechanic room. In the accounting room bronze fixtured cashier windows contribute an atmosphere of reality.

Also on the first floor is a small public speaking room which has a miniature stage done in a modern style which prevails throughout the interior. This room has been also planned for the use of the parent-teacher and other organization meetings.

$50,000 Swimming Pool.

Off the first floor corridor is the gymnasium, which can be transformed into two smaller ones by a folding door. A swimming pool which was added to the plans at a cost of $50,000 is swiftly nearing completion. It is the standard collegiate size tank, 75 feet by 40 feet, and the room seating 500 spectators.

On the second floor above the office is the library, finished in knotty spruce, with a capacity for 7,000 volumes. At either end are alcoves and on the side are small conference rooms for the development of individual projects. Leading from these are handsomely furnished class rooms for the use of senior history and English classes. In these rooms, in which courses are taught encouraging individual study, the student has easy access to reference works. In the library room, floor to ceiling windows afford a panorama of rolling country and wooded landscape.

The third floor contains the laboratories for chemistry, physics, domestic science, biology, botany and agriculture. Connected with the domestic science room is a small dining room for the use of the faculty. Opening onto this room is the student cafeteria with a capacity of 440 persons. The cafeteria room is of such a design that it can be readily transformed into a ballroom.

Band and Radio Rooms.

Rising from the third floor above the main entrance is a tower which contains two large rooms, one above the other. The first is a band room and the other is devoted to the study of radio.

The fifty-eight and one half acres which form the campus will be utilized to the fullest extent, according to Principal C. M. Himel. Three football fields will be laid out, nine tennis courts, a girls' hockey field, a baseball diamond, and plots for the promotion of agricultural projects.

The building will have a capacity for 1,000 students, but by the adoption of a system whereby each room will be made to serve seven classes this number may be increased to 1,500 when conditions warrant. In the years to come additions can be added to the building, plans for which are completed on the blue prints. When completed, another wing will have been added as well as an auditorium, the abutment of which will balance with that of the gymnasium. But this, said Mr. Chubb, "will be a matter of 15 or 20 years."

The members of the school board are: Dr. A. M. Durbis, T. W. Markworth, C. L. Rohde, H. E. Jacoby, and E. W. Bergman.

Approximately 100 students from the school will attend in a body the performance of "The Rivals," to be played from the original script of Richard Brinsley Sheridan on Tuesday night at the Goodman theater.

Portage Park Waltonites Organize Casting Club

Joseph B. Sabotta was elected captain and Charles A. Boos, president, at the organization meeting of the Northwest Casting club, which was held Sunday in Portage Park fieldhouse.

There were thirty-two present at the first meeting, all of whom are members of the Northwest chapter of the Izaak Walton league. The group will use the outdoor swimming pool at Portage park for casting. As soon as the weather permits practice will be held on Saturday afternoons and Sundays. Other officers elected at the time are: John L. Gorin, secretary, and W. G. Holmes, treasurer.

OUR TOWN

Paragraphs About Some Folks You Know.

BY FRED PASLEY.

WARREN E. SCAMAN, Berwyn's bicep-minded citizen, president of that hustling suburb's athletic association and famous for his collection of parrots, is exhibiting a new little bird that promises to be the big noise of his collection. He weighs six pounds, and we'll miss our guess if he isn't named Warren E. Jr., his mamma assenting. He arrived Tuesday at the Oak Park hospital.

A. H. Hagerty reports that he received a note in the morning's mail reading: "Mr. X—— died in December of 1929. His address has been changed to Prairie View, Ill." A. Very good news comes from 3448 Diversey avenue, to the effect that Patricia Irene Tures, just four months old, has cut her first tooth. Her little brother, who is two and a half years old, is already talking.

POLITICS is making such headway in our town that even the school children are succumbing. Henry Krause has been elected mayor of the Mayfair school, and each room has chosen an alderman to represent it in the city council. We learn through reliable Jack Schur, the indefatigable chronicler, that Norman Selig beat Louis Appleton in a checker game and Morris Winestein lost to Bob Alter, but that inasmuch as they were only spring practice tilts, the regular season not yet having opened, no serious damage resulted to personal feelings.

FOLKS from Evanston, Rogers Park, and Chicago journeyed out to Park Ridge last week to help Mr. and Mrs. Milton Myers celebrate their 57th wedding anniversary.

Camp Duncan Knights Plan Reunion at 'Y' on Thursday

BY ONEY FRED SWEET.

Signs of spring have caused those who have known the thrills of Camp Duncan to plan a reunion for next Thursday night. Camp Duncan, near Round lake, is the scene of summer activities of the boys from the west side department of the Y. M. C. A. Thursday's rally will be held under the direction of the Order of Camp Duncan Knights at the west side "Y," 1515 West Monroe street.

The master of ceremonies at the rally will be Angus De Pinto, who, this coming summer, will be at Camp Duncan, as grand councillor of the Knights, for his ninth consecutive season. Parents of the boys, many of whom have visited the camp at various times, will be guests at Thursday night's program. Again they will hear the Camp Duncan loyalty song, the composition of Fred Krupp, 4621 Jackson boulevard. Leon McKinney will lead the singing.

Slides to Be Shown.

Slides will show the activities of the more than 700 west side youngsters who attended the camp last season and a description will be given of the new buildings under construction. The improvements have been made possible through the generosity of Joseph S. Duncan, donor of the new $315,000 boy's building opened at the west side "Y" a year ago.

The first overnight hike of the season, another sign of spring, was scheduled for last night from the "Y," the destination being Willow Springs. The boys planned to carry full equipment, sleep on the ground, and cook their own food over the camp fire.

A popular place for talking over such ventures is the "cabin" in the boys' building. Here, when the door is closed, is all the atmosphere of a cabin in the north woods, and the congested city might well be a million miles away.

The west side "Y," as a character forming organization, has progressed far since it was launched in 1889. It soon outgrew its first quarters on West Madison street, near California avenue, and, eventually, the old Holden residence, at the present site, was obtained for activities.

Jacob Beidler was among the contributors to the movement in earlier days. In the 1893 canvass for funds, several of the west side pastors, particularly the Rev. William W. Lawrence, rendered valuable aid. J. A. Hiller was executive secretary for a long period.

524 Beds Available.

About 1910 dormitories were built beside the old Holden house. In a general million dollar campaign the west side "Y" received appropriations that permitted tearing down of the Holden home and building a place for activities that included a gymnasium and swimming pool. There have been four additions, until today the dormitories supply 524 beds.

Many men, now business leaders in Chicago, recall their activities at the old "Y," a fact which causes them to be contributors to its upkeep. T. C. Thompson has been active as chairman of the committee of management since 1919.

A. C. Williams, executive secretary for the last nine years, has been active at the "Y" since 1915. Previous to coming to Chicago he was active in Y. M. C. A. work in St. Louis. He served with the 149th Field Artillery during the world war.

Aids Underprivileged Boy.

The West Side "Y" has tended more and more to meet the needs of the underprivileged boy. A basic fee of $1 is charged, and 20 cents a month for privileges. More than 1,000 boys belong.

The dormitory is one of the largest in the country. Living here are many youths from the small towns, workers in the loop and nearby industries, as well as students, finding a friendly and homelike atmosphere during a period of readjustment. Here they find comfortable rooms, wholesome companionship, physical recreation and social activities. The "Y" has a membership of 2,547 men and boys.

Two fully equipped gymnasiums offer a variety of sports and recreation—handball, wrestling, boxing and bag punching. A game room affords a wide range of diversions—billiards, checkers and chess. The swimming gives an opportunity to take plunges any time of day and during any season. There is a cafeteria operated exclusively for men.

Management Committee.

The committee of management of the West Side "Y" is composed of T. C. Thompson, chairman; C. D. Allen, C. A. Stone, William Lees, R. H. Thompson, A. R. Dole, G. S. Tuchband, C. R. Holden, J. W. Badenoch, T. W. Brophy Jr., A. B. Martin, O. A. Postelwait, Dr. H. O. Wernicke, F. M. Knight, T. I. Foster, Paul Hassell, L. R. Brink, C. B. Clemons, E. G. Olmstead.

A. C. Williams is executive secretary; H. W. Smith, business secretary; Walter Olsen, assistant business secretary; E. W. Ruehrwein, director of physical education; James Rink, assistant physical director; P. Sorenson, assistant physical director; R. P. Bowdon, boys' work secretary; Charles Woodhouse, assistant boys' work secretary; George Ratcliff, industrial and young men's secretary; Carl Howard, assistant industrial and young men's secretary; Norman Nelson, office secretary; C. Pinkerman, assistant office secretary, and H. Banta, night secretary.

HOME PRECINCT OF MICHAELSON IS 94 PCT. WET

Moreland Gives the Result of Poll.

BY ARTHUR EVANS.

The home precinct of Congressman M. A. Michaelson, who made the nation's headlines in the famous leaky trunk episode, voted 94 per cent wet in the prohibition post card poll conducted by James C. Moreland, one of the nine Republican candidates for nomination for congress in the Seventh district.

Mr. Moreland, who weeks ago beat the Literary Digest to it, centered on a special canvass early this week of the home folks, the neighbors of Mr. Michaelson, who voted for the Jones 5 and 10 while he was under indictment by the Florida federal grand jury and before his trial and acquittal after the jury was out four hours.

Tabulation Is Announced.

The tabulation as announced yesterday by the ballot committee, Charles E. Ummach, Edward F. Boyle, and Henry J. Siewert, at the Inland Trust and Savings bank, showed the following results in Mr. Michaelson's home precinct:

Do you favor the present prohibition law and its strict enforcement?	7
Do you favor modification of the prohibition law, to permit sale of light wines and beer under government control?	66
Do you favor repeal of the present prohibition law?	47
	120

In an adjoining precinct in the 35th ward, the returns were:

For prohibition	6
For modification	32
For repeal	41

So far, 4,472 votes have been cast and tabulated in the Moreland poll, in the 7th, and the results as certified by the committee show it running about 10 per cent dry and 90 per cent wet. The figures are:

	Men.	Women.	Total.
For prohibition	214	231	445
For modification	826	846	1,672
For repeal	1,215	1,146	2,361

Born in Log Cabin.

Mr. Moreland, whose great, great grandfather, Capt. Yates, was aide-de-camp to George Washington at the surrender of Cornwallis, was born in a Kentucky log cabin, worked as "printer's devil" on a country newspaper, and for the last 17 years has been engaged in real estate and home building on the northwest side. As a lad, he was a marathon runner, and later helped organize the Portage Park Athletic association.

"I shall accept the instructions of the people as expressed in this poll," says Mr. Moreland, "and shall go to Washington pledged to carry out their wishes.

"We have been misrepresented by Leaky Trunk Michaelson for years. While I am not a drinking man, I realize that the welfare of the whole country is in jeopardy by the situation brought about by prohibition.

"On other issues, I am interested in keeping the tariff wall sufficiently high to protect our own industries

L.V.L. ANNOUNCES ITS PREFERENCES FOR LEGISLATURE

Records of 600 Aspirants Investigated.

Out of six state senators running for reelection in west side districts only one, Senator John J. Boehm, Democrat, of the 15th, receives the out and out recommendation of the Legislative Voters' league in its report issued last night. In the 7th, Senator Arthur A. Huebsch [Rep.] is given an even preference with Frederick B. Roos [Rep.].

Four senators receive no mention whatever—P. J. Carroll [Dem., 9th], J. B. Leonardo [Rep., 17th], Lowell B. Mason [Rep., 23d], and John Broderick [Dem., 27th].

The league announces that its list is confined to the names of candidates recommended by the league or who seem most preferable in districts which have contests. This time the number of candidates is so large that the league has investigated 600 candidates throughout the state, and it has listed "only those aspirants who seem best fitted."

Important Matters Ahead.

In its preamble the report deals with important legislation to come before the next legislature, such as tax revision, improvement of court machinery, and reapportionment. The foreword and the report on west side districts follow:

"The Legislative Voters' league presents herewith its findings regarding candidates for the general assembly in the various districts in the state," the foreword reads. "Twenty-six senators and 153 members of the house are to be chosen this year. Each party will have a candidate for the senate in nearly every district, but under the so-called minority system of representation the house members in thirty-one of the fifty-one senatorial districts will be selected at the primary. This is due to the fact that in all but twenty districts the two principal parties have arranged matters so that only two Republicans and one Democrat, or vice versa, are to be nominated for the three seats in the house to which each district is entitled.

Nomination Really Election.

"For this reason the members of the house will be really selected at the April primaries in all but twenty districts of the state. This situation clearly makes it the duty of the voters to examine with utmost care the fitness of the primary candidates.

"In a few instances legislators named below as given preference were listed in our January report on outgoing members as having been on the pay roll of the sanitary district of Chicago during their term of office. This preference has been given to these few because, nothwithstanding this reprehensible pay roll connection, their qualifications appear to be superior to those of competitors.

"The same is true in the case of other candidates listed whose names have appeared on the pay rolls of other public bodies. The league condemns, however, the practice of persons receiving compensation from two public offices at the same time.

Some Names Omitted.

In some cases no selections have been made, either because fit candidates are lacking, because there is no contest at the primary or because of insufficient information in spite of diligent inquiry. Honesty, good judgment, and independence are the qualities most essential in legislators.

"As we have often pointed out, the importance of choosing able and dependable legislators can hardly be over estimated. The acts of the general assembly affect the lives, property, and well being of the citizens in countless ways, and particularly in the levying of taxes.

"Because of the great number of candidates in the field the following list contains only the names of those whom the league recommends or who seem most acceptable in districts where there are contests."

SEVENTH DISTRICT—Huebsch or Roos are preferred.

Arthur A. Huebsch, 354 Dubois boulevard, Brookfield, lawyer; is ending his first term, in which he was entrusted with the handling of many important bills and gave careful attention to the business of legislation. He was on the pay roll of the sanitary district while a member of the legislature. The league condemns the practice of receiving compensation from two public offices at the same time.

Frederick B. Roos, 514 Marengo avenue, Forest Park, lawyer; formerly served three terms in the senate after three terms in the house; in its report on his last term in the senate the league described him as a capable and hard working legislator who had shown increased independence and had made a very creditable record. During part of the previous term as senator he was on the pay roll of the sanitary district. The league condemns the practice of receiving compensation from two public offices at the same time.

Political Notes

Two complete tickets have been filed in the Des Plaines city election for April 15, when aldermen will be elected in five wards. The tickets are known as the Progressive Citizens' and the Good Government tickets. The fight is hottest in the fourth ward, where five candidates have filed. There are approximately 600 votes in the ward.

Four candidates have filed for village clerk in the Franklin Park election April 15, and two complete tickets are in the field for the three trusteeships. None of the trustees are running for reelection. The two tickets are known as the People's party and the Reorganization ticket.

Frederick B. Roos, candidate for the Republican nomination for state senator in the Senth district, is running on his record as state representative and senator, having held three terms in each office. He was last elected to the senate in 1922.

The Twenty-eighth Ward Regular Republican Woman's club will meet at 8 o'clock tomorrow evening at the home of Mrs. Lillian Benton, 3848 West Lake street. Arrangements will be made for the annual banquet of the organization to be held some time in April. Mrs. Adele Hockemeyer is vice president of the group and Mrs. Joseph Mulholland is the secretary.

Circuit Judge William V. Brothers has granted an injunction to restrain the board of election commissioners from placing the name of Edward R. Hruby on the ballot as candidate for Democratic committeeman of the Twenty-third ward. This leaves Ald. John Toman, regular organization candidate, unopposed.

Charles Vavrock, who is running against Charles Vavrik, Snow-City hall candidate for Twenty-third ward committeeman, states that he represents the young voters of the ward and was among the original Emmerson supporters. He was born and reared in the ward, is 28 years old, and married.

The Central Northwest Business Men's association has indorsed Raymond T. O'Keefe, Democratic candidate for state representative from the Twenty-fifth district, basing its indorsement on O'Keefe's activity in the fight for feeder buses.

The Illinois Republican Service Men's league has announced its indorsement of Joseph H. Wright, candidate for representative in the Seventh district. It added that Wright has also been indorsed by the Sixth Congressional District Service Men's league, the regular Republican country towns organization, and the country towns organization of the northwest townships of the district, recently formed.

Joseph J. Lelivelt, Maywood, Democratic candidate for state senator, and Emmett McGrath, Brookfield, candidate for representative from the Seventh district, have received the indorsement of the Cook county Democratic central committee, according to an announcement made yesterday. Lelivelt is a lawyer and an old resident of the country towns. McGrath is the present representative, and has received the indorsement of the Illinois Taxpayers' league.

James C. Boudreau has announced his withdrawal as Democratic candidate for state senator in the Ninth district. He states that his withdrawal is the result of pressing business.

Judge William V. Brothers of the Circuit court denied an injunction for the dropping of Harry Stein's name from the ballot for Democratic committeeman of the Thirty-fourth ward. The report, which appeared last Sunday, was based on an erroneous City Press dispatch.

and the American workingman. High wages mean greater buying power and prosperity for the whole nation.

Pledges Aid to Veterans.

"I believe in taking care of the veterans. As time goes on we will be called upon more and more to aid the boys who answered the call of their country. We must never forget our obligations to them.

"I believe the postal employés deserve consideration. Their pay is inadequate and their old age pensions should come from the government instead of from their own pockets. The immigration question is one the Republican party can be trusted to give proper consideration, as is farmers' relief."

District leaders are inclined to regard Moreland as Michaelson's strongest opponent. The Moreland forces say they have the support of Frank P. Murphy, Deneen candidate for committeeman in the 41st ward. There is a plethora of candidates.

McKeone Backs Roudanez.

Georges Roudanez, a Deneen captain in the 40th, has the backing of John J. McKeone, Deneen candidate for ward committeeman, and is actively campaigning against the leaky trunk. Fred W. Lee is campaigning for modification and against the world court and the bridge nuisance.

Coincidentally, an attack is being made upon the Anti-Saloon league by State Representative Edwin B. Bederman, candidate for reëlection in the 25th district, which is in the Seventh, or leaky trunk, congressional. Bederman has the Deneen support. He charges the league with responsibility for the refusal of the legislature to reapportion the state and give Cook county its proper representation.

"The Anti-Saloon league," says Bederman, "knows if Illinois is reapportioned the state prohibition law will be repealed. Repeal failed by a small margin when it was last presented and the league had to use every whip it could muster to pull enough votes together to carry its point.

Oppose Sumptuary Laws.

"But once Cook county gains its rightful representation, then let them present the repeal bill. My district, the 25th, is the largest in the state. We have but one senator and three representatives—we should have three senators and nine representatives.

"In addition, this district is one of the wettest in the state. There is nothing vicious about my constituents. They are home owning and home loving people.

"Every member of the house who voted against reapportionment and fair representation also opposed repeal of the prohibition act. Any candidate in this district who would allow the Anti-Saloon league to indorse him would toll his own political death knell. And that is true of many other districts."

Trouble for Igoe.

After all the oiling and greasing of last week a knock still remains in the engine it seems for Congressman A. J. Sabath in the Fifth and Congressman James T. Igoe in the Sixth. John Stuchlik, a druggist and manufacturing chemist, who was born on De Koven street in 1873, is on the trail of Mr. Igoe, clamoring that what Chicago needs in congress is "new blood" among the congressmen. Stuchlik has been a druggist for 35 years, and his father, William Stuchlik, is said to be the oldest Bohemian settler in Chicago. He has lived here 86 years. Druggist Stuchlik has been president of the Lawndale Automobile club and is vice president of the Pistakee Improvement club.

"I am opposed to the Volstead law," he says, "because a law that is not upheld by the people is worthless, for it does not tend to make better citizens. The country is awake to the evils that have come in its train and to the menace they constitute to our social structure and to the perpetuation of an orderly, democratic government.

"The establishment of bureaus to regulate business affairs imposes added work which is obnoxious to business men. Let Europe have its bureaucracies; let America cling to its representative form of government.

"In conjunction with the postoffice and people of my district, I urge adequate extension of delivery and service.

"Aviation is a matter of especial import to this district on account of the airport on Cicero avenue. We must provide for future needs by providing ample fields for service and landing.

"The other day Chicago's request to be designated as an airport of entry in order to facilitate air traffic between here and Canadian points was turned down by Seymour Lowman, assistant secretary of the treasury. He has the eastern viewpoint.

"I believe every Chicago and Illinois congressman should work energetically for local matters which concern this region. The east and the south and other parts of the west work for their own constituencies; why should the Illinois delegation not develop a regional consciousness and work for the people back home?"

"Mutiny" in Fifth.

A "new blood" mutiny against Congressman A. J. Sabath in the Fifth centers around Anton Napieralski, who has the backing of Barth Collins, who succeeded the late Dennis Egan as Democratic leader in the 20th ward. He has been on the state committee fourteen years. Some ten days ago County Chairman A. J. Cermak poured on the oil to such effect that Benjamin Peristein, one of Moe Rosenberg's followers, was led to withdraw from running against Sabath. It leaves Sabath with six opponents.

"Sabath started a candidate against State Senator John J. Boehm in the 15th district," says Barth Collins, who is a candidate for ward committeeman. "Sabath put up Peter P. Pielminski, who is working for the city at the Bridewell. Senator Boehm has served fifteen years, and the Legislative Voters' league in its January report said he is 'courageous, attentive and dependable; record very good.' Yet Sabath is fighting him. So we're backing Napieralski against Sabath."

Mrs. Retta Kuhn Martin, for twelve years an employé of the Du Page county treasurer's office, is a candidate for the Republican nomination for treasurer.

MRS. RETTA KUHN MARTIN.

Throughout her service Mrs. Martin has been chief deputy, with the exception of a period in 1924-'25 when she was treasurer, following the death of Treasurer Geo. Fix.

Mrs. Martin is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. A. Kuhn, pioneer residents of Du Page county. Her elementary education was received in neighborhood schools and her intermediate training at Batavia High school. Mrs. Martin has attended De Kalb Normal school and the Universities of Wisconsin and Chicago. She taught for seven years in the public schools of Wheaton.

STRAWN TO TELL LIONS CLUB OF FINANCE TANGLE

Silas H. Strawn, chairman of the citizens' finance rescue committee, will speak at the luncheon meeting of the Garfield Park Lions club Thursday at the Midwest Athletic club. He will discuss Chicago and Cook county finances and tell briefly of his work as campaign chairman of the Chicago council of Boy Scouts of America.

Edward Damler and Bernard Baer are co-chairmen for the meeting at which delegations from the leading west side civic organizations will be present. The groups represented will include the Garfield Park club, the West Side Kiwanis club, the Austin Kiwanis club, the Northwest Lions club, the Madison Rotarians, and the West Town Chamber of Commerce.

PROPOSE VOTE IN OAK PARK ON BECOMING CITY

Petitions Started; Post of Magistrate Abolished.

Circulation of petitions asking a referendum in Oak Park on a change from village to city form of government was started Wednesday. The movement, sponsored by J. Edward Jones, attorney and opponent of James M. Feron for the office of police magistrate, followed passage of an ordinance last week by the village board abolishing the office of police magistrate and the steps taken to submit to referendum the proposal that the village create a Municipal court as authorized at the latest session of the general assembly.

Mr. Jones is supported in the circulation of the petitions by Mrs. C. G. Peterson of 631 North Humphrey avenue and the organization which was backing him for police magistrate until the office was erased from the ballot.

As soon as the petitions are signed by one-eighth of the legal voters of the village, voting at the last village election, they will be presented to Mr. Crysler and the board of trustees, according to Mr. Jones. By state law it is then the duty of the officials to submit the question to a vote of the electors of the village at the ensuing municipal election or at a special election on a date to be designated by them, and to give 20 days' notice of such election.

Hold Magistrate Plan Unfair.

President Charles H. Crysler and the village trustees pointed out that the fee judiciary or police magistrate system was apt to be unfair as the magistrate is entitled to keep all the costs as his compensation unless he decides against the defendant. At the latest session of the general assembly an act was passed permitting a municipal court to be established in any city or village in the state having a population of not less than 15,000 nor more than 500,000 with the provision that there be one judge for every 25,000 inhabitants.

This judge is elected by the people and holds office for a term of six years and receives an annual salary fixed by the board of trustees. All of the fees and court costs go to the village, and the candidate for judge must be qualified by four years' active practice as an attorney and counsellor at law or by four years in a judicial capacity.

Mr. Jones believes that the abolition of the office of police magistrate is a step of progress, but he maintains that the proposed municipal court is still one of limited jurisdiction as it cannot handle chancery cases nor criminal cases other than those in which the punishment is by fine or local imprisonment, and the amount of jurisdiction is only $2,000. He also explains that the salaries of municipal judges must be paid out of the village treasury, which would mean a great expenditure if Oak Park had its full quota of judges.

City Court's Powers Broad.

With a city government, he points out, a city court can be established which has jurisdiction in all civil cases, including chancery, and all criminal cases, excluding those of murder or treason. By this plan provision is made for choosing only two judges from the population of the community; the salaries would be paid out of the state treasury; and there would be no cost to the city for clerk's or sheriff's fees.

"No one can deny seriously that we have long outgrown a village form of government," stressed Mr. Jones. "Oak Park has become metropolitan within the last few years and is growing more so every day. The population estimate for Oak Park by the Chicago Association of Commerce for 1929 was 66,500, while the forecast of the Regional Planning association is 75,000 for 1930, 115,000 for 1940, and 130,000 for 1950. Our neighbor, Evanston, has been a city since 1892 and is smaller than Oak Park.

"This is a move that must be made to prevent annexation to Chicago, for the population has been changing from one of home owners to that of apartment dwellers. A vote on annexation at this time would be hazardous, for many of these people are attracted by the cheaper gas, light, telephone, and transportation rates we would have if a part of Chicago. Furthermore, if proper action is not taken at this time measures toward annexation will undoubtedly be taken in light of the wealth and taxable property of our suburb, especially at this time of bad city situations."

Answers Objections on Cost.

Mr. Jones answered the objections arising in regard to the increased cost of the local government.

"Many people think that adoption of city form of government necessitates paying the aldermen a salary," he said. "Section 88 of the Illinois statute on cities and villages does provide for pay for aldermen. The same section, however, provides for a salary for the trustees of a village. Since the trustees of this village have been serving without pay, it is only fair to assume that aldermen will be elected who are willing to serve without pay when we become a city.

"It is interesting to compare the average tax rates of Evanston, a city, and Oak Park, a village, for 1927. We find the average taxes of the former to be $5.77 per $100, whereas that of Oak Park was $6.17. These figures were taken from the real estate board survey."

OAK PARK POST PLANS AWARDS FOR STUDENTS

Bronze Medals to Go to Finest Pupils.

With the object in view of developing all around citizens of service and leadership among the youth of today, Oak Park post, No. 15, of the American Legion, has sponsored granting of school award medals.

The Americanism committee has obtained the coöperation of W. J. Hamilton, superintendent of the Oak Park elementary schools, in giving their plan a trial during the present school year. The schools selected are Holmes and Whittier. It is the hope of the post that the idea may be well received and that next year's awards may be made in all the public, private and parochial elementary schools of Oak Park and River Forest.

The medals—bronze discs on which are engraved the figures of a doughboy and a sailor—will be awarded to the leading eighth grade boy and girl in each school. Points will be based on citizenship, scholarship, leadership, sportsmanship, and respect for the human body.

Medals will be awarded at the Memorial day services. Charles E. Butler is chairman of the Americanism committee. Duane L. Tice is the post commander.

Portage Park unit, No. 183, will initiate fifty-five new members at its meeting March 28 at the Wilson Park field house, Wilson and Milwaukee avenues. Mrs. Florence Kellogg, president of the state department, and Mrs. Margaret Miller, committeewoman of the ninth district, will be special guests. Mrs. Blanche Teander will be chairman of the evening's activities.

Victory post, No. 7, reports a rapid growth in membership and unusual progress on the part of its drum and bugle corps. The post meets every second and fourth Monday of the month at 4221 Irving Park boulevard. The corps, James Mason, instructor, practices every Monday night.

For this afternoon Van Buren post, No. 401, is sponsoring a gala day and get-together meeting to greet its new 1930 members. The Princess theater, donated through the courtesy of Anthony Czarnecki, will be the scene of the event, which will start at 2 o'clock. Among those who have accepted invitations are Lester R. Bentson, C. Wayland Brooks, and John H. Walker. Thomas Keon, senior vice commander of the post, will have a signal message to convey. Fred W. Zei of Lincoln Park post will instruct the recruits. The women and children are especially invited. Van Buren post's uniformed drum and bugle corps will parade at 1:30 o'clock.

Hiram J. Slifer, Cantigny and Tank Corps posts, were hosts to the second district conference at Cantigny post headquarters, 73 West Van Buren street, Thursday night.

$40,000 CENTER IS DEDICATED IN SUGAR GROVE

A new $40,000 community building was dedicated to America's war veterans by the town of Sugar Grove, Ill., on March 14. The dedicatory address was made by Leigh Sauers, chairman of the community building board of managers. Senator Harold C. Kessinger of Aurora was master of ceremonies.

The main floor of the building, which consists of one story and the basement, is devoted to two clubrooms, a large stage with dressing room, a checkroom, and a good sized auditorium and gymnasium. In the basement is the banquet hall, small dining room, Boy Scouts' room, and kitchen.

The woman's clubroom is dedicated to the memory of Mr. and Mrs. David Crawford, who gave $1,000 to the community center building fund several years ago. Mr. Crawford was supervisor of Sugar Grove township from 1896 to 1900.

COMBINE PARK AND PLAY POSTS IN RIVER FOREST

Boards Plan to Merge Next Year.

Closer relationship between the River Forest board of recreation and the River Forest park board has been effected through the appointment of Alvin L. Lyons, director of recreation, to the position of superintendent of parks. He will coördinate the work of the two groups so that each will be helpful to the other. Swan Lindberg of Oak Park was made assistant to Mr. Lyons.

The employment of a single director for the two groups is the first step toward the consolidation of the two boards, according to Roy Nix, park commissioner. Separate appropriations have been made for the present year, but a merger next year will save the village taxpayers a considerable amount, officials pointed out.

Mr. Lyons has had charge of the recreation work for the playgrounds and the schools for two years. Following his graduation at Beloit college, he superintended work of a similar nature in Rockford. For four years he was physical director in the Y. M. C. A. in Keokuk, Ia., and from there he went to North Central college, Naperville, to be an instructor in swimming. During the time he has been in River Forest, Mr. Lyons has organized and directed two baseball leagues in which 30 teams are expected to be enrolled this year; he founded a basketball league representing all of the churches in the village, and a boys' football league he has conducted three gymnasium classes, a tennis tournament and a play festival; and he has initiated a complete system of graded physical education in all public and parochial schools, as well as a full program of after school activities.

Mr. Lindberg is a brother of Gus Lindberg, park superintendent in Oak Park. He has studied landscape gardening in Europe as well as in this country, and has worked for four years in Oak Park.

RENAME HEAD OF OAK PARK'S SCHOOL BOARD

Garvey Wins Solid Vote of P.-T. Council.

James J. Garvey, 230 North Oak Park avenue, will be the only candidate for the presidency of the Oak Park board of education at the village election April 12.

He was the unanimous choice of the representatives of the eleven school districts in Oak Park at a meeting of the Parent-Teacher council of District 97, held last week in Lowell school, 965 Lake street. Mr. Garvey has headed the board since 1923, and had indicated a desire to retire at the close of the present school year. A. E. McClintock of the Lowell schol district placed his name before the council.

The three year terms of three of the nine members of the board expire in June. Mrs. Sara Hughes, 216 Scoville avenue, was nominated to succeed herself, and H. T. Beard, 633 South Highland avenue, is a candidate to succeed himself. Mrs. Robert M. Stephen, 1041 South Highland avenue, was nominated to fill the position occupied for nine years by A. F. Epperson.

In addition to the persons named for places on the board of education, John G. Ford was nominated for township trustee to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Sampson Rogers. Mr. Ford has been actively interested in the work of the schools during the last few years, having served as president of the William Baye Parent-Teacher association, president of the Parent-Teacher association council for two years, and as a member of special committees for the consideration of problems of administration and school policy.

KNEW TWO WORDS OF ENGLISH 9 YEARS AGO; WINS M. A. AT U. OF C.

Nine years ago a half starved immigrant youth, whose knowledge of English consisted of two words, made his way westward in search of the Utopia where, he had been told, an education could be had for the asking. To Selig Starr, 3619 Douglas boulevard, this is the city where dreams come true. Last Tuesday the degree of Master of Arts was conferred upon him by the University of Chicago.

SELIG STARR.
[N. L. Gordon Photo]

Starr was born in Poland, of Jewish parentage. Mental and physical privations overshadow every recollection of his childhood. The Hebrew Theological college at Kovno, Lithuania, afforded him his first opportunity for study. His Talmudical training there was so thoroughly and rapidly absorbed that, though scarcely more than a boy, he was ordained rabbi.

Chicago offered Starr his first taste of secular knowledge through the Haven school's department for adult immigrants, at 1472 Wabash avenue. "On my first night there I greeted my instructor with the two words that were my English vocabulary—'I will,'" Starr said.

Starr was 25 years old when, in 1928, the university awarded him his bachelor's degree. "The Exclusion Bills" is the title of the thesis which won for him his master's degree.

Starr is an instructor in the rabbinical department of the Jewish People's institute, at Douglas boulevard and St. Louis avenue.

WOMEN'S CLUBS GET READY FOR FLOWER SHOW

Educational Programs on Schedules.

Educational programs and meetings in the interest of the Chicago Garden and Flower show which will open at the Hotel Sherman next Friday occupy most of the time on woman's club calendars during the coming week. These sessions will stand in contrast to the gayety of the last week which was particularly apparent Friday evening at the reciprocity meeting of the Junior auxiliary of the Irving Park Catholic Woman's club.

Mrs. W. Earle Adams, president of the seventh district of the Illinois Federation of Women's Clubs, and Mrs. George A. Harriman, president of the seventh district juniors, and presidents and members of junior auxiliaries throughout the district were special guests of the Irving Park Catholic junior group at Independence Park fieldhouse. Miss Virginia Lewand was in charge of the program assisted by Miss Marjorie Kramer, president of the organization; Mrs. Burrell J. Kramer, senior sponsor of the club, and Mrs. William Wermuth, president of the mother club.

"Kleptomaniac" Presented.

A one act play "The Kleptomaniac" was presented by members of the auxiliary including Miss Mary Evelyn Fassbinder, Miss Florence Hanner, Miss Margaret Hoyne, Miss Anne Welter, Miss Bernadette Wallace, Miss Lucille Kowalkoscl, and Miss Rose Charapata. A fashion show ending with a bridal procession in which Miss Kramer took the part of the bride, closed the program.

Committees at the Austin North End Woman's club are busy working on the six exhibits which the club is to enter in the Garden and Flower show. Mrs. W. O. Young is chairman of the garden circle of the club, and is also chairman of the garden department of the sixth district. She is planning and working out the miniature garden exhibit, and has appointed four committees to carry out the plans for the other four entries. Mrs. George J. Reiter is chairman of the group on table decoration. She is assisted by Mrs. John Woodruff Walter, Mrs. Carl Bergquist, and Mrs. George W. Tanner.

Mrs. Manton Heads Committee.

Mrs. James S. Manton heads the committee on exterior window box decoration, and the other members include Mrs. J. Edward Ercanbrack, Mrs. Fred W. Bowes, and Mrs. George Seamon. The sun parlor exhibit is being planned by Mrs. J. Henry Eger, assisted by a group of junior members, and flower arrangements in a shadow box are being worked out by Mrs. C. P. Owen, assisted by Mrs. Burton Williams, Mrs. O. C. Blendorf, Mrs. H. W. E. Kerr, and Mrs. F. A. Forrey. Mrs. John E. Fast is chairman of the committee on bud and bark effects. Her group is composed of Mrs. W. R. Moulds and Mrs. Craig D. Butler.

Hinsdale to Enter Exhibits.

The garden department of the Hinsdale Woman's club will enter the same exhibits in the Garden and Flower show as the Austin North End club, with the exception of the minature garden display. Chairmen of the committees in charge of the Hinsdale entries include Mrs. Duncan J. Hill, Mrs. A. L. Ammott, Mrs. Sterling Cramer, Mrs. George A. Berry Jr., and Mrs. Lester Roth.

Mrs. Gordon C. Abbott will be the speaker at the last meeting this year of the literature department of the Nineteenth Century Woman's club of Oak Park, to be held at 11 o'clock tomorrow morning in the clubhouse, 174 Forest avenue. Mrs. Abbott will speak on "A Vista of Fantasy." The annual business meeting and the spring luncheon of the organization will be held March 31.

"Musical Appreciation" will be discussed by Mrs. Harold McNamee at a meeting of the Congress Park Woman's club at 1:30 Tuesday afternoon. Mrs. George Kendall, soloist, is to present a musical program. Members of the music committee who will act as hostesses for the affair include Mrs. Harry Wilde, Mrs. Vera Balaty, Mrs. W. T. Demmer, Mrs. H. G. McNamee, Mrs. Edward McGrath, Mrs. D. C. Paradis, Mrs. L. R. Sprenger, and Mrs. J. J. Summers.

Programs of importance will be given at the West End Woman's club and Forest Park Woman's club next Friday afternoon. The civics and philanthropy department of the West End club will hold its annual business session at 2 o'clock at the clubrooms, 37 South Ashland boulevard. Reports of the last year's work will be given and the election of department officers will be held.

The department of modern languages at Proviso Township High school has arranged the program for the meeting of the Forest Park club which is in charge of the department of education. 400 SCHURZ HIGH GIRLS REHEARSE FOR DANCE SHOW

More than 400 girls of Schurz High school are practicing daily in preparation for a dance-drama, which is to be given on the evenings of May 9 and 10 in the assembly hall of the school, Addison street and Milwaukee avenue.

Miss Lucy Courtney and Miss Elma McRae are in charge of the performance, which will include both group and solo numbers. The musical accompaniment will be offered by the school orchestra under the direction of James Mason. There are 50 boys and girls in the orchestra.

The dance-drama, according to Miss Courtney, has a plot which will be interpreted by the dance numbers. Aesthetic and classical dancing will form the greater part of the program, which she said is much more ambitious than high school students usually attempt.

125 LEADERS ARE MADISON-KEDZIE GROUP'S GUESTS

Charles C. Wedding in Charge of Meeting.

More than 125 prominent business men of the west side were the special guests of the Madison-Kedzie association at a luncheon last Wednesday noon at the Graemere hotel. Charles C. Wedding, president of the organization, was in charge of the meeting and introduced the guests, who included Mark Shanks, president of the West Town Chamber of Commerce, and the following officials of the Madison-Kedzie Trust and Savings bank: William N. Jarnagin, chairman of the board; George R. Boyles, president; James E. Gorman, vice chairman of the board of directors; Raymond J. Hurley, James F. Raleigh, and Charles M. Hines, members of the board of directors, and David E. Shanahan, member of the advisory committee.

Shanks Outlines Projects.

Mr. Shanks discussed briefly projects undertaken by civic organizations of the west side during the last year, and pointed out the need for coöperation between such groups for community improvements and business betterment.

Mr. Shanahan, who is also chairman of the boards of the Central Manufacturing District bank, the Terminal National bank, and the Midland National bank, outlined the situation which resulted in the organization of the Madison-Kedzie Trust and Savings bank a little more than a month ago to take over the deposit liability of the former Madison-Kedzie State bank.

Shanahan Points to Future.

"It is pleasant to be associated in this prominent west side institution," said Mr. Shanahan. "I have spent my entire life in Chicago and have a particular interest in the west side, because, for 36 years, I have represented in the general assembly a district which is one-half in the West Town and one-half in the South Town. By first-hand knowledge of the importance and tremendous possibilities of this community we look forward confidently to the day when the Madison-Kedzie institution will lead Chicago's outlying banks."

Mr. Jarnagin and Mr. Boyles, a west sider who was born within a half mile of Madison avenue and Kedzie street, asked the support and coöperation of the group, and gave assurance that the officials of the Madison-Kedzie Trust and Savings bank were working for a greater west side. Mr. Gorman, who is president of the Rock Island railroad as well as an officer of this institution, reviewed his childhood experiences on South Halsted street, and told of the early contacts which were still invaluable.

Vaughan's Chicago Parks Lawn Seed

It Contains NO Timothy

TIMOTHY SEED, which is hay seed, is the greatest cause of lawn failures in the Chicago region. Seventy-five per cent of all grass seed mixtures sold in this area are chiefly composed of the seed of this coarse hay, which comes up quickly, but inevitably ruins a lawn.

Vaughan's Chicago Parks mixture (or Columbian for sandy soil and shady lawns) is composed of Kentucky blue grass, red top and white clover (with no timothy). This is the combination which has proved its merit for permanent lawns in this section through fifty years' experience, and is recommended by the United States department of agriculture.

The Value of Recleaned Seed. The only thing of value you get when you buy lawn seed is the live seed of permanent grasses it contains. Weed seed, dead seed, dirt and chaff, are worse than worthless. Cheap seed which contains these adulterants is more costly, in fact, than recleaned seed for which you pay more, but which contains nothing but live seeds. All Vaughan's Seeds are tested for purity and germination. They are clean, live, and honestly labeled.

Vaughan's Chicago Parks Lawn Seed (or Columbian blend for shady lawns and sandy soil), ½ lb., 25c; 1 lb., 50c; 5 lbs., $2.40. 1930 Spring Catalog free by mail or at our stores.

CHICAGO TRIBUNE's $5000.00 HOME LAWN Competition

195 CASH PRIZES for the Best Home Lawns!

YOU PAY NOTHING Just take care of your own lawn

For the 195 home lawns in the Chicago area adjudged best in accordance with a few simple rules, the Chicago Tribune will pay $5,000.00 in cash prizes. You pay nothing. Just mail the coupon and take care of your own lawn.

Only home lawns are eligible. Big estate lawns, commercial lawns, or any kept up by people who earn their livings as caretakers or gardeners, are barred.

It can be the front lawn or the backyard lawn. It doesn't have to be a big lawn, either. If your ground measures at least 20x10 or the equivalent of 200 square feet, mail the coupon today and your name is entered.

You WILL NOT be competing with all the lawns in the Chicago area. This territory has been divided into five main divisions: South, Southwest, West, Northwest and North. Thirty-nine prizes totaling $1,000 will be awarded to the best lawns in EACH division. North lawns will compete only with North lawns. South lawns compete with South lawns, and so on.

Decide now to have a better lawn this summer. You'll get a lot of fun and enjoyment watching your lawn shape up, and besides you may win a cash prize for your effort. Fill in and mail the entry coupon today. Then watch the Tribune for the lawn-keeping hints and suggestions which will be printed every Sunday during the contest.

The RULES

1 For the 195 home lawns in the Chicago area adjudged best in accordance with these rules, the Chicago Tribune will pay $5,000 in cash prizes.

2 To be eligible for prizes, lawns must be located on land on which contestants live at the time of judging and in the territory within a radius of approximately 40 (forty) miles from Tribune Tower.

3 A lawn may be of any size, shape, style, or type, provided only that each contains an area of at least 200 square feet or the equivalent of a plot measuring 20 by 10 feet.

4 The contest area is divided into five main divisions. Thirty-nine prizes will be awarded to lawns in each division. First prize $250; second prize, $150; third prize, $100; fourth prize, $75; fifth prize, $50; sixth prize, $35; seventh prize, $20; next thirty-one prizes, $10 each. Total prizes for each division, $1,000.00. Total for the five divisions, $5,000.00.

5 Estate lawns, commercial lawns, and all others cared for or maintained by persons who earn their livings in whole or in part as caretakers, gardeners, or landscape architects, are barred. The competition is open only to amateur home lawns maintained by the entrants themselves, without paid assistance from anyone other than unskilled labor.

6 This competition is open to all, except employes of the Chicago Tribune and their families, and others automatically excluded by the contest requirements.

7 All entries must be received in the Tribune office bearing a postmark not later than Monday, May 12, 1930.

8 A committee of competent judges will be appointed by the Chicago Tribune and their decisions will be final. In case of ties, duplicate awards will be paid. The exact judging dates will be announced later and will be governed, of course, by the nature of the season.

9 Each lawn will be judged upon its merits as a whole. Points to be taken into consideration include design, neatness, freedom from weeds, ragged edges, etc.; improvements made to lawn during the season, and general harmony of surroundings.

10 The only requirement to enter the contest is to fill out the coupon properly and mail it to the "LAWN CONTEST EDITOR," the Chicago Tribune, Postoffice Box 1718, Chicago, Ill. Coupon must bear contestant's name in full, address, and division: North, Northwest, West, Southwest, or South, of the city or suburb in which he or she lives. DON'T FORGET TO INDICATE THE DIVISION. Judges will inspect your lawn at the proper time. The publishers of the Tribune will not be responsible for the loss, delay, or non-delivery of entry coupons.

OAK PARK BODIES UNITE TO RUSH HARLEM BRIDGE

Urge Completion in Time for Opening Sept. 1.

Civic organizations in Oak Park are urging an active campaign for the completion of the Harlem avenue bridge across the drainage canal by September. Members of the chamber of commerce and the Lake-Marion-Wisconsin-Harlem District association are working with the county board, the sanitary trustees, and the Illinois commerce commission, the bodies directly responsible for the construction of the bridge.

According to T. J. Dolan, superintendent of the project, the bridge will be completed by July 1, but this does not open the way to Oak Park and River Forest from the south, for approaches must be built and bridges across three railroads, the Chicago and Illinois Western, the Atchison Topeka and Santa Fe, and the Chicago and Alton, must be constructed.

Nineteen Caissons Ready.

Plans called for the sinking of the caissons last summer, but difficulties of the sanitary board delayed the work until spring, throwing the bulk of it into the winter months. Nineteen of the 24 caissons are already in, and as soon as the other five are laid the county board may proceed with the railway, the upper steel structure, and subsequently the cement approaches.

Representatives of the chamber and the La-Mar-Wis association are also petitioning the Illinois commerce commission and officials of the three railroads to plan for the bridges.

C. of C. Names Committees.

The board of directors of the chamber of commerce, headed by John A. Swanson, recently appointed three committees to study the parking problem in the village, the question of license fees, and the village plan. William H. Rattenbury heads the committee on parking, and the members include Paul E. Zimmerman, Philip Gibbs, T. O. James, George Puchner, Robert L. Tiffany, Lester McAllister, E. A. Hellman, P. J. Neilson, Sam Rugalis, and Russell Critchfield.

George Heminway is chairman of the group which will work with the village plan commission. He is assisted by William Einseldt, O. B. Balch, John A. Heist, D. S. Stratton, Roy Corna, Joseph Noble, Col. A. D. Bain, E. E. Rose, Robert Nicholas, William H. Rattenbury, O. C. Braesie, and Tolfer McArthur.

The committee on license fees is headed by R. B. Crandall and the membership includes Burt Collett, E. A. Downing, Fred Haupt, D. F. Stratton, Milton B. Lickton, R. C. Church, R. M. Newcomb, Rollin Poppen, Hugh Walter, H. W. Rowe, W. H. Ehrt, and P. A. Jackson.

THE CHUCKLE COLUMN

High school students, send in your best laughs to the Chuckle Editor of The Tribune. Two dollars will be paid for each jingle, joke, or verse printed in the Metropolitan section. Address your contribution to the Chuckle Editor, Metropolitan section, The Tribune. only, and print your name and address plainly.

The radio bridge game—No. 18 in the current series—broadcast Tuesday from W-G-N, The Chicago Tribune station, was notable as a demonstration of the way in which a bridge expert makes advantageous use of the inferences he draws from the bids of the various players.

The exhibition players were: Mrs. Harry B. Jones of Youngstown, O.; Mrs. Isabel Jenkins of Ottawa, Ont.; Ely Culbertson of New York City, and Lieut. Alfred M. Gruenther, U. S. A., of West Point. They held the following cards:

Mrs. Jones.
S—Q, 10, 8.
H—Q, 5, 3, 2.
D—8, 7.
C—10, 9, 7, 4.

Mr. Culbertson.

S—9, 5, 3, 2.
H—10, 9, 6.
D—J, 10, 2.
C—J, 5, 2.

Lieut. Gruenther.
S—A, 7, 6, 4.
H—8, 7, 4.
D—K, Q, 8, 6, 5.
C—8.

Lieut. Gruenther, as dealer, south, did not have a strong hand, but with its five card diamond suit headed by king-queen, and its side ace, too strong to pass. He bid one diamond. Mr. Culbertson, west, bid one no trump. While he had the adverse suit stopped only once, his hand unassisted assured eight no trump tricks supposing that the clubs would run. Mrs. Jones, north, was obliged to pass. Mrs. Jenkins, east, had no possibility of a bid. Lieut. Gruenther, who had bid the full strength of his hand on the first round, could do nothing but pass on the second.

Hoped to Deceive Declarer.

Mrs. Jones, north, appreciated that since her partner's diamond suit had been strong enough to bid, it furnished a more advantageous opening than either of her own four card suits; so she led the 8 of diamonds. When Mr. Culbertson, west, surveyed east's hand as dummy, he saw it held substantial assistance in its lowly jacks; the jack of clubs solidified that suit, and the jack-ten of diamonds enabled dummy to cover north's 9, thus forcing Lieut. Gruenther, south, to play a diamond honor and break the back of his diamond suit. On dummy's 10 Lieut. Gruenther played the queen; Mr. Culbertson, west, declarer, false carded the 4.

Lieut. Gruenther could not afford to lead diamonds away from his K-8 up to declarer's ace and dummy's jack; neither did he want to start the spade suit, as to do so might hasten the drawing of the spade ace from his hand. He particularly wanted to retain the ace as an entry until after his partner had obtained the lead, if that were possible, and continued the diamonds through dummy's jack. The singleton club obviously was a bad lead; so Lieut. Gruenther's only choice was to lead hearts. Generally when leading from a three card suit up to weakness in dummy, the highest of the three is chosen; but in this case Lieut. Gruenther led the 4 spot, his lowest heart, as he wanted the declarer to place a high heart in his hand. He hoped to deceive the declarer into finessing, thereby permitting north to obtain the lead. But Mr. Culbertson did not yield to the heart finesse temptation. He knew he could finesse later if he wished to; while Lieut. Gruenther, south, might have the queen of hearts, it would place declarer in a serious position if north won this trick with it and established the diamonds—as she could do by another diamond lead—while south still had the ace of spades.

Counts Eight Sure Tricks.

Mr. Culbertson was certain south had the ace of spades because without it south would not have had the strength for his initial diamond bid. Even if he held both the queen of spades and the queen of hearts with his king-queen-high diamond suit, he still would have to hold the ace of spades to aggregate the two quick tricks his original bid indicated.

So to trick two Mr. Culbertson played the ace of hearts; north played the trey, knowing she could complete the signal or not, as seemed advisable on the next round of hearts; dummy the 6.

Declarer then took the ace and king of clubs, north playing the 4 and 7; dummy the 2 and 5; south the 8 of clubs and the 4 of spades, discarding the spade instead of a card from his worthless heart suit to mislead declarer into thinking he was guarding a heart honor. Declarer continued clubs, leading the trey, in order to enter east's hand for the lead through south he must make to gain his ninth and game saving trick. North played the 9 of clubs; dummy the jack; south the 6 of spades, continuing his deceptive tactics.

Declarer could count eight sure tricks—five clubs, two hearts, and one diamond. He had deduced that south must hold the ace of spades, therefore a spade lead from dummy must make the king in the closed hand a winner. So, although the play of Lieut. Gruenther, in the south, indicated that the heart queen was in his hand and that a heart finesse would succeed, declarer was too seasoned a player to be decoyed away from what was practically a certainty into taking an unnecessary risk, particularly when the latter play must be based upon inferences drawn from the play of a skilled adversary who might be anxious to deceive a trusting declarer.

Makes His Game.

Consequently declarer led dummy's duece of spades to the sixth trick; south played the 7, hoping declarer would finesse and give north the lead; declarer played his king for reasons already explained; and north played the 8. To trick seven declarer led the queen of clubs; north played the 10; dummy discarded the 9 of hearts and south the 5 of diamonds. Declarer continued with the 6 of clubs. North discarded the 5 of hearts, not wishing to complete her signal; dummy discarded the trey of spades, and south the 6 of diamonds. In making this discard south appreciated that it might be necessary for him to keep two hearts. Should he discard a heart on this trick, and the declarer should then lead a heart followed by a spade forcing south in the lead, he would have to lead away from his diamonds.

But declarer with game in his hand, did not risk trying to place the lead with the hope of making an extra trick. To tricks nine and ten he led the king of hearts and the ace of diamonds, all players following suit. The last three tricks he conceded to his adversaries. He scored 30 for his three tricks—game—at no trump, and 30 above the line for three aces.

Mr. Work's Comments.

In his talk on the way the hand was bid and played, Mr. Work commended Mrs. Jones, north, for drawing the correct inference from Lieut. Gruenther's original diamond bid, and deciding on his suit as the best one to open. Too often, according to Mr. Work, players refrain from opening a suit bid by partner when it has been overcalled by an adverse no trump, reasoning that the declarer is expecting the suit to be led and must be able to take care of it, and that it will be better to surprise him by leading something else. Then there is also the player who places a higher value on his own cards than on those of his partner, and who leads his own suit when he might better lead the one his partner has named. It is not an invariable rule that partner's suit must be opened against a no trump, but nine times out of ten it is the best policy unless the leader has an established suit or one he knows he can establish and run. Mr. Work also praised declarer's spade lead from dummy, based upon the positive inference that the ace was in the south hand.

WALTER D. SCOTT W-G-N SPEAKER TOMORROW NIGHT

Tim Lowry to Introduce N. U. President.

Dr. Walter Dill Scott, president of Northwestern university, will be the speaker on the Universities of Chicagoland program over W-G-N, The Chicago Tribune station on the Drake hotel, at 9 tomorrow night. The university will also be represented by members of the student body. Alumni will be represented by Tim Lowry, captain of the not to be forgotten 1926 football team. Lowry will introduce Dr. Scott.

DR. WALTER DILL SCOTT.

Tonight members of Jean Goldkette's W-G-N orchestra appear between numbers by the orchestra as soloists. The violin trio is to play a special arrangement of "Souvenir" by Drdla. The three fiddlers are Victor Young, Ben Simons, and Sam Natshun. Another novelty in the 11 o'clock show tonight will be a trombone solo by Bill Herring, "Travelin' All Alone."

A piano duet of North Country Sketches is the offering of Al Nilson and Carroll Huxley.

Beverly O'Brien, soprano, will share honors with Don Lindley, trumpet player, as soloist on an orchestral half hour at 9:30 tomorrow night.

JAMES M. BECK TO SPEAK OVER W-G-N AND NBC

Representative James M. Beck [Rep., Pa.] will speak over a nationwide radio hookup including W-G-N, The Chicago Tribune station on the Drake hotel, from the hall of the American Philosophical society at Philadelphia at 7 p. m. Wednesday, on "The Changed Conception of the Constitution."

JAMES M. BECK. [Harris & Ewing.]

Representative Beck, formerly solicitor general of the United States and one of the leading constitutional authorities of the nation, is expected to present to the radio public through this oldest learned society in America, of which he is a member, a new view of the constitution.

Whether the 18th amendment will be discussed is not specifically known, but in view of his recent statements in the house of representatives it is expected that in his paper, which is based on the Webster-Hayne debate in congress 100 years ago [Jan. 21, 26, 27, 1830], he may have something further to say on the wet and dry question.

Synchronization Tests Made

A report on the success of a synchronization test conducted by stations WCAH of Columbus, O., and WHP of Harrisburg, Pa., with 500 watts each on the 1,430 kilocycle channel is awaited by the federal radio commission. The experiments were conducted on special authority of the commission.

Two masters on Symphony hour

Dr. Frederick Stock, who will conduct the Chicago Symphony Orchestra this afternoon.

THE impressive simplicity of Bach and epic grandeur of Brahms make their impressions on the Chicago Symphony concert for radio this afternoon. Dr. Frederick Stock, director of the Chicago Symphony Orchestra, has chosen these masters for the program sponsored by the Standard Oil Company (Indiana). The Suite in B Minor, by Bach, is one of the greatest, one of the simplest masterpieces ever written. It is representative of the work of this musical monarch. The Symphony No. 3, by Brahms, is one of the German musical epics; an inspiring piece of work. These works are most advantageously presented by one of America's leading orchestras from W-G-N this afternoon at 2.

George Nelidoff, a Russian singer, whose talents will be displayed in the Musical Melange.

Russian singer at 4:30 today

THE voice that has echoed in the concert halls of Petrograd fills the ether from W-G-N today. George Nelidoff is the greatest artist appearing in the Musical Melange. Nelidoff was graduated with honors from the Imperial Opera Company, Petrograd, and filled concert halls all over Europe. He opens the vocal section of the Musical Melange with a piece from Verdi's Masked Ball, Eri Tu. His second number bears the Melancholy title, One Who Has Yearned Alone, a composition from the works of Tschaikowski. Also Iolanda's song, Desolation, etc. Instrumental passages by the W-G-N Symphony Orchestra. 4:45.

Goldkette lads show capabilities

Jean Goldkette's W-G-N Orchestra is the dance band superb. They've hog-tied old man jazz, clipped his horns, amputated his bellowing, and reduced noise to a minimum. That's what made jazz a frolicsome lamb instead of a bleating unicorn. And what does it? Just hear the lads that make the music in their Sunday hour tonight. Three fiddles from the string section play Vic Young's violin trio arrangement of Drdla's Souvenir. The weeping trombone of Bill Herring complains that it's Travelin' All Alone. One Al Nilson and another Carroll Huxley each apply two dexterous hands to the concert grand and make it trot around like a ouija board. They play North country sketches. We're talkin' 'bout the 11 o'clock show.

Pat Barnes and the Old Timer

Two keen witted thinkers will sit in repose before the microphone this evening, leisurely discussing matters. They are Pat Barnes and Old Timer, thinkers. Though neither of them is strict conservative, the views of Old Timer are more seasoned and settled. He points out to Pat the fallacy in the viewpoints of Barnes. He answers the questions that stump the youth of the land. The discussion is offered under the sponsorship of The Hub, Henry C. Lytton & Sons, and is scheduled for tonight at 7:00.

March of progress and other tunes

The march of progress, stark and symbolic of a definite forward movement, is the signature of the Mandel Brothers' Anniversary program to begin at 7:30 tonight. Gay music, favorite old and new tunes, orchestras and vocal soloists. Sara Ann McCabe, soprano, Walter Pontius, tenor, and Little Joe Warner are singers.

WEST SIDE HIGH STUDENTS START CLEANUP DRIVE

Organize Campaign for Chicago A. of C.

More than 125 high school faculty members and students were present at the promotional luncheon held yesterday noon at the Hotel Sherman for the Chicago Clean-Up, Paint-Up, Plant-Up campaign for April 20 to May 3 sponsored by the Chicago Association of Commerce. John R. MacGregor, chairman of the movement, presided, and others seated at the speakers' table included Mark Seelen, vice president of the campaign; Miss Ethel Foster, secretary; William J. Bogan, superintendent of schools; Joseph J. Butler, superintendent of the bureau of streets and alleys; Patrick E. Egan, chief of the fire prevention bureau; Mrs. Willis M. Graham, chairman of community service in the Illinois Federation of Women's clubs, and Dr. Arnold A. H. Kegel, commissioner of health.

Students Organize Campaign.

Following a musical program by the Harrison string quartet, which is composed of Sam Arron, Robert Agron, Jack Levinson and Sidney Levinson, details of the campaign were explained to the high school representatives who are the official organizers in the various communities of the city. Through them groups in elementary, parochial and private schools, women's clubs and civic organizations are established.

Eight west and northwest side high schools which have organizations in charge of the "clean up" were represented at the luncheon. The schools and the delegates included Austin High school, James Woodmansee, chairman; R. C. Compton, faculty advisor; Miss Conchita Serig, Wesley M. Westerberg, Howard Pierce, and J. A. Senquist; Crane Technical High school, James Lynch, chairman; William C. Waterstradt, faculty advisor; Kenneth Demb, W. R. Lange, and Miss Freida B. Zeeb, dean of Crane Junior college; Lucy Flower Technical High school, Miss Muriel Midler, chairman, Miss Charlotte M. Long, faculty advisor; and Miss Dora Wells, principal; Harrison Technical High school, Sol C. Vallen, chairman; E. E. Hawkins, faculty advisor; F. L. Morse, principal; Robert Agron, Sam Arron, Robert Gregg, and Joseph Klicka; Marshall High school, William Swartz and Ralph Grossman, chairmen; and Miss Mary Zimmerman, faculty advisor; McKinley High school, Miss Elaine Miller, chairman; C. T. Richardson, faculty advisor; and Miss Dorothy Bass; Roosevelt High school, Sidney Spasberg, chairman; Edward H. Schultz, faculty advisor; Miss Rosemary Carroll, and Jack Light; Tuley High school, Joe Kessel, chairman, and Joseph J. Novotney, faculty advisor.

3 Contests Launched.

Three contests have been launched in connection with the campaign, and several pupils of the elementary grades and many high school students have already entered. The poster competition will continue until May 3, when the official poster for the 1931 clean up campaign will be chosen. This year's poster, which is being given city-wide publicity, was made by George Thorpe of the Hoyle Continuation school. Two prizes of $25 and $15 will also be awarded to the two schools submitting the best posters in this year's contest.

All high school students are eligible to compete in the general accomplishments contest by submitting a report of the year's school activities.

Prizes for Best Essays.

Prizes in merchandise worth $100, $75, and $50 will be given for the best essays. Two rewards of $15 and $10 will be presented to the students producing the best results in the "before and after" picture contest, which is open to grammar and high school students. The purpose of this competition is to show how the accumulation of waste material takes place if no effort is made to remove it, and then to show the same place cleaned and made attractive.

The committee assisting Mr. McGregor and Mr. Seelen in the campaign includes Allen D. Albert, B. W. Castle, C. T. Chapman, C. S. Clark, L. P. Larsen, W. A. Loper, Martin P. Luthy, R. H. Roberts, L. C. Vaughan, Duane Wanamaker, and Harold E. Watson.

Flower School Students Will Exhibit Handiwork

Pupils of Lucy Flower Technical High school will present their handiwork next Saturday at the Woman's City club to acquaint the club members with the work of a girls' technical high school. Demonstrations will be given by the girls at 10 o'clock in the morning and at 3 o'clock in the afternoon on garment designing and the removal of household stains. The club will give a luncheon at 12:30 in honor of Miss Dora Wells, principal of the school. Mrs. Harvey A. Tyler, chairman of the public school committee, will preside.

MUSIC TEACHERS OF NATION WILL HEAR W. SIDERS

Many Suburban Students Win High Honor.

More than a score of students from the west side and the western suburbs will take part in the performances of the National High School orchestra and the National High School chorus when they appear next week before the music supervisors' national conference in the Auditorium theater.

R. LEE OSBURN.

The orchestra, composed of 325 boys and girls representing 39 states, will be heard in two concerts, Wednesday and Thursday evenings. The concert by the chorus, which includes 400 of the best singers from high schools in 29 states, will close the convention Friday.

Dr. Hollis Dann, director of the Washington, D. C., Community choir, will conduct the chorus and Frederick Alexander of Ypsilanti, Mich., will be the guest conductor. A special feature of this program will be the singing of three numbers from memory by the entire audience. Dr. Dann believes that this will be an interesting but hazardous undertaking even though the audience will be composed largely of teachers and supervisors of music.

Few Americans Memorize Songs.

"Unlike Europeans few Americans have a répertoire of songs they can sing from memory," Dr. Dann declares. "It will be a delightful and epoch making event for a great American audience to sing well three great choruses from memory."

The conference leaders hope this feature will be the beginning of a campaign for the memorizing of a limited number of songs by every child in the upper grades and in high school.

The concerts of the National High School orchestra will be directed by J. E. Maddy and Henry K. Hadley, both of New York. Walter Damrosch will come from New York to rehearse the orchestra before the supervisors' conference in the Stevens hotel Tuesday afternoon. Dr. John Erskine, president of the Juillard foundation, and Guy Maier, pianist, will be the soloists for the orchestra. The performance Thursday evening will be open to the public, and the proceeds will be used to carry on the work at the National High School orchestra and band camp at Interlochen, Mich.

Orchestra Formed in 1926.

The orchestra was first organized to play for the 1926 convention of the national high school conference in Detroit. The following year it was assembled to play for the department of superintendents of the National Education association at Dallas, Tex. The third group was organized for the music supervisors' conference in Chicago in 1928, from which meeting grew the National High School Orchestra and Band camp. The 1930 orchestra was formed at the request of the school superintendents and music supervisors to play at their respective conventions.

THE WORLD'S GREATEST NEWSPAPER

March 23, 1930

"GONE AWA-WA-WAY FROM LONGVIEW BOTTOMS," is the artist's title descriptive of a bit of landscape nestling in the lowlands of the great preserve dedicated to fox hunting and sports of the field by the Southern Grasslands Hunt and Racing foundation. An area of twenty-eight square miles, near Nashville, Tenn., constitutes the estate, which is being put into shape for field sports by removal of all wire fencing and the substitution of rail fences, stone walls, and hedges. The foundation aims to perpetuate in America the recreations of the fields in the style that is so ardently pursued in England.

"JUNE MOON" was a play about the song writers of Broadway, and its women characters were the flashy cynics of the Manhattan night clubs. This is Ruth Holden, who acted one of them vividly during the Chicago run of the well-liked comedy.

"GAUCHOS" are in style on the stage and screen, and Leonard Ceeley, who swaggers with Peruvian bluster through "Nina Rosa," is a striking specimen of the type. The picture shows him as the dangerous South American cowboy of that popular operetta.

GEORGE HOUSTON used to sing with the American Opera company, but this season his resonant voice and romantic personality have been employed to advantage in "The New Moon." Here he is depicted in the costume of that operetta's kind-hearted pirate king.

500 YEAR OLD DESIGN . . . WORTH A FORTUNE recreated in a Gulistan Rug! See it at your store now!

A carpet that "scholars rate among the first half dozen of ancient carpets now in existence."

So says the Official Handbook of the Pennsylvania Museum of Art, where the original of the Gulistan illustrated above hangs today!

It was woven 88 years before America was discovered, when Tamerlane the Great reached the height of his power in Samarkand! Note the cypress trees, expressing life eternal, which make up the rich field of this rug!

Wealthy collectors have spent fortunes acquiring a rug like this old Persian masterpiece! Museums cherish such rugs as their most priceless possessions.

To have reproduced this famous design in a Gulistan rug, with such amazing fidelity and beauty, represents an outstanding achievement in American loomcraft.

*"The recipe is the same used in our kitchen at Nice, France"

writes Mrs. H. Wilfred Lord

Corn Products Refining Co.
New York City

Gentlemen:

My husband, who is a world-wide traveler and an author, lived in France for many years. No dinner is complete, as far as he is concerned, without a salad of some kind.

And he is very critical when the salad is served. I have tried pure olive oil and various other substitutes, but he prefers Mazola to any of them, as he says it is never rancid, strong-tasting or has an unpleasant odor.

The recipe I use for salad dressing is the same used in our kitchen at Nice, France, while we lived there. (See recipe to the left.)

Mrs. H. Wilfred Lord
Boston, Mass.

½ teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon white pepper
2 dashes of paprika
4 tablespoons Mazola

Mix thoroughly, then add slowly, while stirring continuously, two tablespoons red vinegar.

The above is Mrs. Lord's personal recipe for French Dressing. The following is the standard Mazola French Dressing recipe familiar to thousands of housewives. It takes but 2 minutes to prepare—and conclusively proves the superiority of Mazola as America's finest oil for salads.

½ cup Mazola ½ teaspoon salt
3 tablespoons vinegar
⅛ teaspoon white pepper

Beat thoroughly and use with any vegetable, meat or fish salad. If a sweeter dressing is desired add 1 teaspoon Karo Red Label.

Mazola is famous the world over for purity, quality and flavor. Regardless of price, you can find no finer salad oil than this clear, golden oil—pressed from the hearts of fully-ripened corn kernels.

1000 MILES INLAND

. . . where giantess ocean fliers embark for Europe

Father Point, where the St. Lawrence is 20 miles wide. © Associated Screen News, Ltd., Montreal

DO YOU KNOW THE DRAMATIC ORIGIN OF THIS GREAT SEAWAY?

How does it happen that America's second largest seaport lies 1000 miles from the sea? What super-geographer created this mammoth seaway which allows transatlantic greyhounds to sail 2 days within the verdant majesty of a continent?

Ages and ages ago the Atlantic adjusted its boundaries. It thrust out a giant arm. It wedged 1000 miles of its salt water deep and wide into North America. Its avenue-like appearance raised the hopes of early French explorers. They were sure it was the long-sought passage to China. Thus, the St. Lawrence seaway!

Every year, new thousands of enlightened travelers take this giant seaway to Europe on a Canadian-Pacific liner. They delight in its widening path to the Atlantic . . . 2 miles, 10, 20 miles across, between 2 magic coast-lines.

Both to port and starboard, Norman-French Canada cries them a 2-day "bon voyage" on the St. Lawrence crossing. Habitant villages, ox-tilled fields, forests, rivers, mountains fill their drowsy deck-chair reverie, while a pink-cheeked cabin boy serves tea.

Then, after only 4 days open ocean, they disembark at Southampton, Cherbourg, Havre, Antwerp, Hamburg, Liverpool, Glasgow, Belfast. They have discovered the St. Lawrence way of going to Europe.

EMPRESS OR DUCHESS . . .
CHOICE OF ACCOMMODATIONS

You may have any sort of accommodations you desire on the St. Lawrence seaway to Europe. The great Empresses offer every first-class luxury. The 4 new Duchesses, 20,000 gross-ton sister ships, present the last word in cabin class. You may go popular tourist-third, and third-class, too. There are 3 to 5 sailings every week by Canadian Pacific's fleet of 18 giantesses.

Inquire about "all-expense" House Party Motor Tours, $395 up, Collegiate Tours, $335 up, visiting principal European countries and Passion Play.

Today, 220 ships a month sail up and down the St. Lawrence seaway, full steam ahead. Leaders of these are the 18 luxurious liners of Canadian Pacific's fleet, headed by the famous white Empresses and Duchesses. They make the most direct Atlantic crossing. They sail from Quebec or Montreal, the latter America's second largest seaport, 1000 miles from the sea . . . an overnight jump for 75% of America's population.

And, in 1931, a giant, new queen of the fleet . . . S. S. Empress of Britain, 40,000 gross tons. Embodying every sea-going luxury, her mammoth white hull will speed from Europe to the heart of America in five days!

The JOYS of BEER ARE NOT FORBIDDEN

They are at their best in this new-day brew

No beer of old was ever better than Atlas Special Brew. It is brewed by masters whose beer was always the leader in Chicago. It has the same age, same flavor, same quality and purity.

We go to extremes to give you something even better than the old. We cool the brew gradually, then filter it through white wool pulp. We treat the water, to give you the same mellow flavor as the famous beers of Europe. The brew is aged for months, then pasteurized after bottling.

Atlas Special Brew, in all you loved best, will bring the old days back.

What About Alcohol?

Of course, we evaporate most of the alcohol, but you would not know it if someone told you this was old reserve.

Alcohol was always a small factor in beer. What you liked was the tang and sparkle, the flavor and zest. You liked it as a help to digestion and an aid to sleep. All those helps and delights are at their best in Atlas Special Brew.

Cease Your Regrets

No need to miss a malt-and-hop brew that you loved. No need to turn to unripe "near-beers" or to rank home brews. They only spoil the memories of good beer.

If you will only insist on Atlas Special Brew, you will find it equal to the best of old—as a joy drink, a tonic and an aid to sleep. It is supplied by over 15,000 grocers, delicatessen stores and drug stores in Chicago and surrounding states. It costs only 15c a bottle, much less by the case of 24 bottles, so order some now at your store. If you should have any trouble getting it, write or telephone us for the name of your nearest dealer. The Chain Drug Store

By W. E. Hill

[Copyright: 1930: By The Chicago Tribune.]

Irate lady in a chain drug store telephone booth about to tell the entire sales force that she can't get her nickel back.

Meet Mr. Brophy, Miss Nierhaugen, and Miss Wobbe, on duty at the chain drug store luncheonette, where anything from a tabloid shore dinner to a Western Egg Special can be had during lunch hour. Miss Wobbe (right), who is a very dainty girl, is having a terrible time with the mayonnaise dressing getting into her fingernails, and you know how boy friends prize daintiness! Pinned to the bosoms of Mr. Brophy and the Misses Nierhaugen and Wobbe are framed cards with their names printed thereon. This is so you can speak to them without having been introduced and is a welcome innovation in more ways than one.

Prescription clerk looking askance at a prescription calling for a pint of whisky.

This refined young bachelor is waiting twenty minutes that is going to take half an hour. Meanwhile he is learning something he never knew before about girdle hose supporters from a showcase opposite.

"Dentists are simply crazy about these brushes! We can't get enough of them." Mrs. Phyllis Toe is behind the counter where they sell the home remedies, the magnesia, and the tooth brushes. Here she is, maltreating the bristles of a tooth brush for a customer who wants a medium soft.

Tillman clerks among the gift candy, the publishers' overstock, the floating toys and the electric grills. A boy who makes the grade in a chain drug store has to be pretty smart these days. Customers will wander up to the book counter and ask Tillman what to read. And Tillman will have to know at a glance whether to offer "The Doctor Looks at Love, Divorce, and Remarriage" or "The Mystery of the Dismembered Corpse."

Joe, the handy man and sometimes delivery boy around the drug store, en route with a sedative marked "Rush" for a charge customer who can't sleep.

Weil McLain boilers are fighters, too!

They FIGHT high fuel bills

30% to 40%
added vital heating surface absorbs more heat from your fuel

Fuel-saving corrugations absorb more heat from the fire

The fuel-saving characteristics of these Weil-McLain corrugations have been adapted to all Weil-McLain Boilers by placing extra heat-absorbing surface directly above the fire, as well as in all other vital heating surfaces—adding materially to their fuel economy.

Fuel-saving corrugations and balanced back-and-forth fire travel enable Weil-McLain Boilers to save fuel and give more heat

Combat planes are real fighting machines because they are built to fight. Weil-McLain Boilers are fighters, too. They fight fuel and heat waste and protect home owners from high fuel bills.

Scientific combustion develops more heat

Through scientific combustion, Weil-McLain Boilers provide more thorough final burning of fuel. The fire burns bright and clean—and lasts longer. Utilizing more of the heat developed through better burning of the fuel delivers more heat to radiators. Stopping waste up the chimney gets your money's worth out of the fuel you burn.

Fuel-saving corrugations like this ∿∿∿

As an example, Weil-McLain Round Boilers are able to utilize more heat because the heating surface is greatly increased by means of fuel-saving corrugations.

You can readily see that corrugations like this ∿∿∿ crowd 30 to 40 per cent more heating surface into the same space than an ordinary flat surface like this ——— would occupy.

Corrugations greatly increase the heating surface in the crown sheet section directly above the fire where heating surface is most valuable. In addition, all other vital heating surfaces have these same corrugations to absorb more heat and fight fuel waste.

Balanced back-and-forth fire travel

More heat is actually utilized in the Weil-McLain Round Boiler because Weil-McLain fire travel is not only back and forth between all the corrugated heating surfaces, but it is balanced as well. Apertures in the boiler sections through which gases must pass are curved with mathematical exactness, so that the hot gases travel the greatest distance through the center where the draft is strongest, thus fighting fuel waste up the chimney. There are no short-cuts to the chimney at any time.

These features protect you

These Weil-McLain "fighting features" mean not only freedom from high fuel bills—but the protection of your health and comfort. These exclusive structural features fight fuel waste and deliver more heat with only a normal amount of attention.

Weil-McLain Boilers have been designed not only for the efficient burning of the fuel you have been accustomed to use, but with forethought for the burning of oil, coke, the smaller sizes of hard coal and for the smokeless burning of soft coal.

Joyous and Vigorous

like children's laughter

it is part of the happy household

BOBBIE thinks Susan can play on his team and Susan, the tomboy, would rather fight battles with lead soldiers than rock to sleep the prettiest doll in the nursery. And mother is sure that tomboy or ball player, her children's laughter is part of her happy, vigorous household.

So, tired or gay, frolicking over the nursery, sitting politely at table, Bobbie and Susan and countless other children in countless other households break into smiles and shout with joy when "Canada Dry" is placed before them.

It is a joyous beverage. It is a sparkling drink. It matches the high spirits of children and is good for them. Its purity recommends it to parents. Why? Because of its basic excellence. The very foundation of "Canada Dry" is "Liquid Ginger"—which we make from selected Jamaica ginger root by a special process. This process is controlled by us and, unlike any other method, retains for "Canada Dry" all of the original aroma, flavor and natural essence of the ginger root. Rigid laboratory control assures uniformity, purity and highest quality.

And into your household this fine old ginger ale will bring its cheer and vigor. Into your household . . . to your Bobbie and Susan . . . this fine old ginger ale will bring laughter and joy. Is there a Hostess Package of twelve bottles in your pantry, for your children?

To people who are only soap-and-water clean—

Do you take your bath and let it go at that, thinking you can offend no one? Then there is a new habit you should learn . . . a measure of protection without which many knowing women and men would not venture forth.

For here is a new habit . . . a luxurious, satisfying habit that perfects the bath . . . a dainty habit that effectively guards against any suggestion of unpleasant body odor, which even soap and water cleanliness does not always remove.

Boyer's After-the-Bath Talc neutralizes body odors and will keep the skin sweet for several hours. Always use it after bathing. This precaution is well worth while, as many women and men know. It insures a personal daintiness that effectively relieves the fastidious from worry.

Soap and water is necessary. Then Boyer's After-the-Bath Talc Always! A purring shower of its cool softness applied with the luxurious big puff that is in every box. The protection lasts long after the effects of the bath have worn away. Truly a most satisfying perfection . . . no wonder it is so popular.

Perfumed with a subdued fragrance that accentuates the refreshing odor of soap and water cleanliness, Boyer's After-the-Bath Talc leaves the body with a rose petal freshness, characteristic of aristocratic living. Sold by all drug stores. Boyer, the Society Parfumeur, 15 Rue Royale, Paris, and 2700 Wabash Ave., Chicago.

Your hands can stay

YOUNG

PLEASE do not "let your hands go". It is so unnecessary now, even for hands that do things. Science has created a new method for keeping them young. Specifically for hands, THINC Hand Creme (pronounced "think"). Of course, THINC is not an ordinary cold cream, lotion, or vanishing cream. It is for the express purpose of making busy hands soft, white, flower-like. And it works so quickly. You can actually see it roll out the hidden dirt that you didn't know was there. Overnight it brings finely-textured beauty. And THINC is not even expensive. So little is needed, and the 60¢ tube is of generous size. All toilet goods counters have it, in tubes and jars.

To Increase Your Child's Weight

A Discovery From Switzerland That May Make Your Child Over—
Not a Medicine, But the Most Delicious Food-Drink Known

Please Accept 3-Day Supply to Try

WATCH WEIGHT INCREASE
A POUND A WEEK
NERVOUSNESS DISAPPEAR

THE special test offer made here is to enable mothers to try this new creation from Switzerland before purchasing a regular supply.

New to America, but old to Europe, its use has spread over 54 different nations of the world. Over 20,000 doctors are advising it.

It throws a new light on the problem of the underweight or nervous child. Weight increases of a pound a week are common to it. Nervousness is frequently curbed in a few days.

"Leo Gained a Pound a Week"

"Leo is five years old, a very nervous child, and I was about discouraged trying to get him to drink milk, when I noticed the advertisement of Ovaltine. "It was very easy with the Uncle Wiggily Mug. He quickly finished the three days' trial and we have purchased a large size can. I weigh him each week and he gained a pound a week last month. And his nervousness is decreasing wonderfully."
Mrs. Anthony H. O'Rourke,
37 French Ave., S. Braintree, Mass.

"Gained 5 Pounds in 3 Weeks"

"My boy gained 5 pounds in 3 weeks, after using Ovaltine. When he started in school he was nervous and thin, and played so hard he didn't take time to eat. At night he would toss and roll in his sleep, and sometimes scream.
"Since trying Ovaltine he eats his 3 meals a day, drinking Ovaltine with each meal and also between meals. We see the greatest change in him—he's filling out, sleeps quietly at night, and is no longer a 'nervous' child."
Mrs. R. O. Campbell, 503 N. Grand Ave., Pittsburg, Kansas.

What It Is

It is a food-drink called Ovaltine—utterly different in formula, taste and effect from any other known. Enticing beyond words to the childish palate, Ovaltine is a scientific food-concentrate not remotely to be confused with powdered cocoa, chocolate, malt or sugar mixtures offered as substitutes.

Ovaltine may make your child over—try it.

Developed 38 years ago by a famous Swiss scientist, Ovaltine contains, in highly concentrated form, virtually every single vital food element necessary to life, including, of course, the Sunshine Vitamin D.

Due to an exclusive process, employed by no other food-drink known, it supplies those vital elements in such easily digested form that a child's system will absorb them even when digestion is impaired.

How It Acts

Some of those elements in Ovaltine build bone and muscle. And thus create new strength. Others build firm flesh. And thus constantly increase weight. Others develop nerve poise; for, as weight increases nervousness perceptibly decreases.

Other elements foster richer blood. And thus combat conditions of anemia. All are supplied in scientific ratio to meet the body's needs. That is why results are often so astonishing.*

Digests Starches

Then, too, Ovaltine has high diastatic value. Which means the power of digesting the undigested starches from other foods eaten. Thus, this scientific creation not only furnishes tremendous food energy in itself, but greatly increases the effectiveness of all starch foods your child eats. Such as oatmeal, bread, potatoes, etc., which comprise over half the normal child's daily diet. Consider what this means.

Results will surprise you. Note the difference in your child's weight, in nerve poise, in greater strength and energy. Find out, for your child's sake, what this creation means to you and yours. Give at breakfast, always. Give at meals and between meals. Get Ovaltine at any drug or grocery store or send coupon for 3-day test.

*(Note) Thousands of nervous people, men and women, are using Ovaltine to restore vitality when fatigued. During the Great War, it was a standard ration prescribed by the Red Cross as a restorative food for invalid soldiers of all nations.

"...THE SAME ANN...A REAL BIT OF ENGLAND"

"... the same Ann. It wasn't two days before she had managed to find the trimmest sort of cart for that colt I bought in Calcutta. Now, each morning when she starts off from the terrace, her obviously West End tussor, her sure horsemanship ... and most of all her fresh, clear complexion make you know that a real bit of England is driving through the compound."

—From the letters of an Englishman abroad.

Soap and Cream and Powder...Give your skin the cool refreshing protection that the English Woman uses

SEARCH the world over, but only among English women will you find complexions so flower-like in texture. How does the English woman achieve—and preserve—that matchless beauty? You may be amazed to know that she follows no elaborate ritual of creams and lotions. Her cosmetics are so few as almost to arouse skepticism.

Soap, cream and powder—that is all. But each is of superlative quality. First, Yardley's English Lavender Soap. And you will find that it leaves your skin clear and refreshed with a new and healthful beauty caught in its soft texture.

Then, English Complexion Cream, as a cleansing cream to complement the use of soap and water; as a nourishing cream for use at night; and as a powder foundation in the morning. Used in this way, it is to be smoothed on liberally and then washed off with water. The fine, thin film that remains is an excellent base for your powder.

And last, Yardley's English Lavender Face Powder. Gentle, cooling and enduring, it comes in smart shades that will blend correctly with the tones of your skin, accentuating your own color.

The Bunny Family's Easter Party Cut Outs

SET no. 4

Girls! Boys! Cut Out and Dress the Bunny Family!

$2,500.00 In Cash Prizes!

Children! Here's great fun! And a chance to win a big Cash Prize!

Easter is coming! And here we have the Bunny Family Easter Party Cut-Outs. Can you cut and dress the Bunny Family?

Each Sunday until and including Easter Sunday, the Chicago Tribune will print a page of Bunny Family colored Cut-Outs. These interesting groups, which appear in the same place each week (as page 7 of the colored comic section) began on March 2, when Set No. 1 was published. Many who failed to start in the game of Cut-Outs the first week found out what a fascinating game it proved to be when they looked over the section the second or the third week, and they then joined in. Because of the heavy demand for papers, many had been unable to get copies from news stands on the first two Sundays.

As a result the early groups were reprinted the second and third Sundays, so that as many as wished might then start in the competition which offers much fun and enjoyment, as well as liberal cash prizes.

Those who failed to start in the first three weeks, however, still may do so by obtaining back copies containing the earlier sets.

Just follow these simple instructions: Each Cut-Out contains several dresses or costumes. Take scissors, cut out the Bunny and the costumes. Then dress the Bunny in the costume which you believe looks best. The small extensions marked "FOLD BACK" are to fasten the dress to the Bunny and should not be visible in front when the figure is complete.

Each fits the Bunny of that set. Try them. Which do you like best? Hold the one you like best.

You may paste or pin the costume on the Bunnies. You may paste them on paper, on cardboard, in scrap books, or any other form to send them in.

CAUTION: Do not send Bunnies one at a time. Wait until all 8 have been printed and you have dressed them and then send the entire set of 8 to "Bunnies," the Chicago Tribune, P. O. Box 1720, Chicago, Ill.

The Chicago Tribune will pay $2,500 in Cash Prizes to the children who send in the neatest and best entries. See the prize list opposite.

You can use the prize money to buy anything you want. Or you can start or add to a Savings Account at the Bank. This offer is open to every girl and boy except children of Tribune employes. You pay nothing. All entries must be in within 15 days after Cut-Out No. 8 is published.

You do not have to buy The Tribune to compete. You may copy or trace the Cut-Outs and send in your copies. The Tribune may be examined at our Offices or Public Libraries free of charge. In case of ties duplicate prizes will be paid.

PARIS DESIGNS COSTUMES FOR RAINY DAYS

Even Shoes, Hats, Gloves, Scarfs and Purses Shed the Water Like the Proverbial Duck's Back

By Bettina Bedwell.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS—(Special.)—In the tumult and thunder of the Paris spring fashion openings, now roaring along like a national Republican or Democratic convention, a meek announcement of inestimable benefit to womankind is being made. Style resolutions for the betterment of rainy day clothes are being passed by the Paris dressmakers. These measures are not getting front page notice because of the mighty battle between the long and short skirt factions, but they are of great personal importance to every woman who is going to hoist an umbrella during the coming season, and I leave it to you to decide how many are going to be affected.

Ineffectual attempts have previously been made to improve the appearance of rainy day clothes, but since they were directed almost exclusively toward increasing chic of raincoats and umbrellas, they were faulty measures, at best. This spring the ensemble is being treated, and Paris is realizing that women have heads, hands and feet and money and powder puffs—that can also get wet in the rain. She adds rainproof details with Parisian cachet, and makes for the first time a head-to-heels ensemble for wet weather.

And what about girls who always lose their umbrellas when the sun isn't shining? Who forget their rubbers and overlook their galoches because of an instinctive hatred of such cumbersome and ugly footgear? Have they no rights? Must they pay the price of discomfort or dowdiness? Paris bootmakers say NO, and bring out shoes that are dainty and fitting and that shed the rain like a tin roof.

Paris milliners and glovemakers take hold of the problem of umbrella losers and add impermeable hats and gloves that are O so smart, to the cute rain coat, so you stay dry in a downpour, and chic, too. The bagmakers, feeling a leak, have dashed out to the style marts with water tight bags that are so attractive they will be carried by lots of smart women in shine as well as rain. Scarves, too, have taken the rubber cure and are impervious to moisture. The smart rainy day ensemble has been launched in all its details, and the complet emerges for the first time in fashion history.

Rubberizing of fabrics has been going on for long and weary years, and the results have been similar, at best, to the first talkies. The best you could say of either was they meant well. Any material with rubber as its base could be detected easily by the olfactory test applied to Turks and goats, but this season there are fabrics concocted from rubber that are thoroughly and efficiently waterproof and that are as odorless as ozone. This is only one of the charms of the new rainy day materials that Paris uses for coats, hats and suchlike details of the ensemble. They are really and truly beautiful. Velvets, silks, satins; wool crepes and tricots woven and patterned identically like the fashionable fabrics that are being made into fair weather ensembles, are used for raincoats, bags, hats and other costume details.

It isn't merely a question of material, either. Raincoats are given graded formality of line and cut, so that you can have a simple coat for runabout wear, a draped and feminine coat for afternoon and even a raincoat for evening, if you need it. Each of these wraps can be suitably worn over the smart dresses the season supplies for varying times of day. Hats for the rainy day are divided into two general classes. The brimmed hat is for the girl who is liable to lapses of memory in regard to her umbrella, and the little bonnet is for the more careful class.

Accessories for dark and damp weather—the mode a la mud—match meticulously like those of any other time, and colors differ not a tiny shade from the colors you would wear on sunny days. They may be a shade livelier if you like, for brightness of apparel has a greater charm on a gray day.

Fashionable women of Paris usually start the many wet days that are the special weather allotment of this city in an ensemble like the Leda ensemble shown today. The coat is made of first-leaf green ondamoussa, that bright vernal shade being particularly fashionable, and the creped wool, also. It is, however, a turn coat, and worn otherside out is green, white and black tweedy stuff, so you have two raincoats in one. There is a belt around the normal waistline, and big set-in pockets for hankies or whatnot.

The small draped hat is made of the same stuff as the coat and is folded around the ears in a fetching manner. The shoes are from Perugia and are made of highly polished brown leather that doesn't get sloppy looking in the worst rainstorm. They are fitted like a glove and held close around the ankles by a strap. Needless to say, they keep you from getting wet, cold feet. The short slip-on gloves are also brown, also glazed, and likewise superior to raindrops.

Another model is an afternoon raincoat from Jean Patou, and it adheres to the soft, draped lines that are the heart and soul of spring afternoon fashions. Patou makes this coat of the most beautiful skyey blue crepe, with a scarf at the neck, cut in one with the coat itself and a sash at the waistline, tied in a big bow at the left side. The hat is light blue waterproof crepe on top and darker blue on the under side. It is ruffled at the sides of the brim in the smartest manner, and trimmed with stitching on the upper side. The navy blue leather shoes button trimly about the ankles.

It is inevitable, of course, with capes and cape coats as thick as the congested districts of New York, that raincoats fall heir to shoulder capes, and one of the most fashionable types is shown on this page. This cape coat is made of Pompeian red impermeable velveteen. The collar is a long scarf and the cape just covers the shoulders. The sleeves are slightly flared at the bottom by small godets. A red beret partially covers the curls of the rainy day girl, and if they aren't put in by nature she must carry a good solid umbrella with such head pieces.

One of the trickiest of Paris rainy day accessory ensembles is shown in another sketch. The scarf, bag and umbrella are inseparable. The bag announces its special type by its handle that is made of two carved ebony ducks with raffia tails billing (and doubtless cooing) together. Duck heads are embroidered on the flat sides of the bag.

The waterproof scarf has two similar heads embroidered on one end, and a duck's head surmounts the short but adequate umbrella. Moulin also supplies a duck motif in ebony and raffia for the brim of the tweed hat that has a smart split brim.

The gloves are made of the same stuff as the scarf—a rubberized crepe, and both are edged around with hand stitched embroidery. All of the smart shops in Paris have such rainy day ensembles, and one of the best is from Suzanne Talbot, made of blue and white printed waterproof crepe. Slip-on gloves, scarf and hat are all of the same material, and should be worn with a blue raincoat.

The Perugia shoes sketched here are his newest sports and rainy day shoes of polished leather in one piece, reaching to the ankles.

[Copyright: 1930: By The Chicago Tribune.]

This dressy rain-wrap with its smart capelet-scarf from Leda is in Pompeian red impermeable velvet. The beret is of velvet to match.

A rainy day accessory ensemble from Moulin. Bag and scarf are of green handwoven material embroidered with appropriate ducks in black silk and natural raffia. The bag-top, umbrella handle and hat motif are carved ebony ducks with raffia crests and tails. Perugia makes new sports and rainy day shoes ankle high, in one piece of polished leather.

Leda makes this reversible raincoat of young-leaf green ondamoussa lined with green, black and white tweed, with beret to match. The high shoes from Perugia are of brown glazed leather.

Patou drapes this afternoon raincoat in "blue-skies" crepe and faces the brim of the matching hat in darker blue. Perugia's low rain shoes are of navy blue leather.

PARIS SNAPSHOTS

Paris spring styles are turning Greek after dark. Evening dresses have double Greek waistlines, draped bodices and the long, limp skirts of Grecian maidens. Greek sandals complete the picture.

Lelong has, as his featured colors, peppermint green, firmament blue, tint yellow and shell pink.

Pique, organdy, mull and linen are important materials matters of the spring time mode in Paris. Jackets, blouses and accessories are made of these fabrics.

Fringes again appear on evening dresses and coats of the Paris openings. There's at least one fringed ensemble in every collection.

The smartest accessories are turning blue. Fashionable women are wearing blue evening slippers, carrying blue chiffon handkerchiefs and twining turquoise jewelry around arms and neck.

Furniture Bespeaks Elegance

By Edith Weigle

A corner of the petit salon.

Beds are covered in a rich brocade.

French Styles Will Be Popular as Long as There Is a Desire for Aristocratic Beauty and Distinction.

THERE is a lightness and color and an aristocratic feeling about French furniture, particularly of the Louis XVI. period, that is hard to duplicate. It seems to have a special appeal for women, perhaps because of its delicacy and grace and because such charming fabrics are used in upholstering it.

French period furniture in good reproductions is not inexpensive, and it always requires a more or less elegant background, but it gives value received in its luxurious effect. Take the corner of the bedroom pictured today. Against a perfectly plain, formal background of soft gray paneled walls outlined in dull gold the beds stand out in elaborate relief. They are covered with a sumptuous flowered brocade, in itself almost enough decoration for the entire room. The footboard and legs of the beds are carved in leaf patterns and there are swags of carved flowers in the center top of head and foot rails. A crystal chandelier with pendant crystal drops completes the picture.

A glimpse of a French drawing room or petit salon is shown in another picture. Here the paneled walls are a pale blue and a portrait of a woman in an Empress Josephine gown carries out the French feeling. A good copy of a Nattier, either an oil or a colored print, would be equally appropriate. Nattier was the painter who did portraits of the sisters of Louis XVI., Mme. Elizabeth, Mme. Sophie, and Mme. Adelaide.

The little love seat placed between the two commodes is coveped in blue brocade with a small rose figure. The two chairs, extremely feminine and chic, are Louis XVI., and are done in gold moire brocade, finished with antique nail heads. The coffee table has a marble top.

Window draperies are of glazed chintz in a Dresden pattern against a creamy background, and are ruffled in blue taffeta.

The effect of this group of furniture is utterly charming. The other photograph shows a corner of the same room, with a beautiful French chair, a copy, painted white and upholstered in brocade. Even if an entire group is not French, such a chair as this would always fit in and strike a note of distinction. The little commode of mahogany and satinwood is French, but the nest of tables is not. A carpet in a neutral tone covers the floor.

A typically French grouping.

The furniture described today was seen in loop department and furniture stores.

The Heppelwhite Era

By WillElla de Campi

Fine Proportion, Pleasing Curves and Grace Characterize This Period.

WillElla de Campi will be glad to assist the homemaker in any problem pertaining to home furnishings. Address your letter to WillElla de Campi, The Tribune, Chicago. Inclose stamped, addressed envelope for personal reply.

AMONG the great masters of design in the late Georgian period was George Heppelwhite, whose work became popular about 1765. His style enjoyed a vogue so great that it exerted a marked effect upon the development of both English and American furniture. Since Heppelwhite was the most notable cabinet maker of the period, the majority of the furniture made at that time is classified under his name, even though there were contemporary craftsmen whose work was equally praiseworthy.

Several influences are traceable in various Heppelwhite pieces. Most noticeable is that of the classic spirit which had been already introduced by the brothers Adam, whose architectural force was at its height during the period of Heppelwhite's greatest activity. Another marked influence, also of classic tendency, was that of the Louis XVI. style.

Beauty of proportion, lightness and grace, pleasing curves and distinctive contours characterized Heppelwhite's work. His designs almost invariably showed sound common sense, and a recognition of the value of utility. Though mahogany was his preferred medium, he used satinwood and rosewood to meet special orders. Following the precedent of the brothers Adam, he turned to inlaying and painting rather than to carving in his decoration of furniture. Carving, when used, was done in low relief.

Inlay or marquetry became more and more popular and designs were carried out in this manner with charming results. Many different kinds of wood in various colorings were incorporated in the delicate patterns. Chief among these were satinwood, tulipwood, sycamore, rosewood, maple, yew, holly, amboyna, and ebony.

The best of the painted work was done in grisaille on satinwood, with the glowing tone of the wood left as an uncovered background. Pieces which were to have the whole exterior surface painted were generally made of birch or beech. Black, green, or white, usually formed the ground with decorations in grisaille. The work of Angelica Kauffmann, Cipriani, and others of their school, was requisitioned by Heppelwhite for embellishing his furniture.

Most frequently used for decorative motifs were husks, or wheat ears, draped urns, garlands, swags, the three feathers of the prince of Wales, straight parallel lines, and delicate vertical patterns on the legs of tables, etc.

Heppelwhite was a faithful advocate of the curvilinear tendency which became so popular during the late 18th and early 19th centuries. Curving lines were everywhere noticeable in his chairs, sofas, sideboards, etc. Chests of drawers, tables, and cabinets were made with serpentine, semi-circular, or semi-oval fronts. The curves, however, ran in the same general direction, the top and bottom lines in these places being almost invariably horizontally straight with vertically straight side lines.

Though he made all manner of pieces, Heppelwhite is best known for his shield back chairs with tapering square legs, often ending in a spade foot. Other noticeable pieces were wardrobes, which supplanted the old highboy, dressing tables with heart shaped mirrors, cabinets with long, tapering legs, distinctive sideboards, and graceful four post beds.

Heppelwhite chairs were original and distinctly practical. Belonging only to this period are the distinctive shield-back, hoop-back and interlacing heart-back chairs. It is true that Heppelwhite made round and oval backs, but these were also produced by other cabinet makers of the time. Tops of the shield-back chairs were of two shapes, either serpentine, or with a slight unbroken bowed curve, like the top of a crusader's shield. In many of the oval-back chairs, the three plumes of the prince of Wales were displayed. The backs of the chairs did not usually join the rear seat rail, but were supported by extensions of the back legs rising above the seat and curved slightly inward.

Seats were ordinarily square with a slight tapering toward the rear, or else were slightly rounded in front. In some instances the seat frames were left visible, while in others they were covered with upholstery. Practically all seats were either upholstered or fitted with cushions. Legs were usually square and tapering. Though there were a few examples of rounded legs, they were not typical.

Sofas and settees were made in two different styles: the upholstered sofa, and the chair back settee. Both showed the same characteristics as the chairs. Upholstered sofas had either round or square legs. Their backs were either simply bowed, or broken into a series of curves, rising toward a crest in the middle. Backs were curved around to form arms which dropped in a sweeping curve to meet the seat at the top of the front legs. The upholstered sofas usually had eight legs and were much longer than the settees of preceding periods.

It was during the Heppelwhite era that the sideboard was evolved by the combination into one piece of separate pedestals and side tables, which had formerly been placed side by side. A certain dignity of appearance was attached by the addition of wooden urns at each end of the sideboard cutlery. Among the sideboards of that time the best were those designed by Thomas Shearer, a contemporary of Heppelwhite. He specialized in sideboards, bookcases and desks with secret drawers. To him is credited the origination of the serpentine front. In many instances the similarity between Heppelwhite's and Shearer's designs is so close that it is almost impossible to judge the work of one from that of the other.

Commendable restraint and simplicity marked the bedroom furniture made by Heppelwhite. Four post beds of comfortable and cheery attractiveness took the place of heavy and elaborate examples which were characteristic of earlier periods. Heppelwhite four posters were particularly graceful and light. This accounts for the abandonment of thick stuffy draperies, and for the increase in use of clean, fresh chintz in bright, vivacious colorings.

Other bedroom appointments were designed to be both beautiful and useful. Typical Heppelwhite wardrobes, superseding the highboys of previous days, were divided into two sections, the lower part was composed of drawers, and there was a cupboard above, set upon the drawers in a style similar to that of the double chest. Dressing tables were equipped with convenient mechanical folding devices and with strong and sensibly adjustable mirrors. Washstands and dressing stands were also made to accord with other pieces.

Among the materials used for upholstery and hangings were damasks, brocades, silks and satins, with medallions, floral designs or stripes, and printed cottons or glazed chintz. In some instances red or blue morocco leather and various types of horsehair were used for covering furniture. Light colors were generally favored, chiefly soft blue, green or mauve.

Today's illustration shows a distinctive bedroom, furnished with delightful Heppelwhite pieces.

Treating the Oily Skin

By Antoinette Donnelly

Wholesome Diets and Cleanliness Aid in Obtaining a Clear, Unblemished Complexion.

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—Where there is an excess of oiliness the skin had better be viewed as a rich field for other facial blemishes beside the oiliness. Blackheads, pimples, exaggerated acne cases, enlarged pores are among the beauty ills that threaten.

The relation of a good, wholesome diet to a clear, unblemished skin is now preached from every health and beauty pulpit. Ignorance on this score or failure to put into practice the diet precepts recommended is treated with impatience.

Some functional disorder, it is true, may exaggerate the oiliness of the skin. But more frequently than not the excess oil can be modified to a perfectly normal greasing of the skin by a change from over consumption of fat, rich, greasy foods to a balanced diet well sprinkled with vegetables, fruits, and the foods that incite digestion and bowels to healthier action.

In almost every case of extreme oiliness, in blackhead and acne conditions, a well known skin specialist tells me that constipation is present, due largely to the lack of fruit and vegetables in the diet, to too little water intake, and to an excess of sweet, starchy, and richly seasoned foods.

Adopt Fat-Free Diets.

So the first step in reducing the irregular oil outpouring from the tiny pores is to reduce fats, starches, and sugars in the diet to the least possible intake for health upkeep and substitute fruit and vegetable salads, fresh cooked vegetables, and fruit desserts. This does not mean that one must give up all her favorite dishes—only that she must eat sparingly of them.

For a month or six weeks, however, it would be well to adopt a comparatively fat-free diet. If one is in good health and feeling strong she could—and most satisfactorily for her complexion—subsist almost exclusively on fruits and vegetables, between times drinking water copiously, and thus give her complexion a fair start.

The whole thing is to correct faulty bowel action. Take mineral oil. It is not habit forming and in emulsified forms it is not unpleasant to take. Or take one of the mineral oil-agar mixtures, or agar-azar, or psyllium seed. Take something that is healthfully laxative. Or take enemas. Remember that evacuation is appreciably aided by drinking liberally of water. Constipation often originates through the abnormal dryness of the food residue. Take at least your six full glasses a day.

Soap and Water Cleansings.

For local care the oily skined one must rely on soap and water for face cleansings. It is the only way by which the greasy content of the pores can be properly disposed of before it has a chance to solidify, become spotted on top, and develop into blackheads.

Refrain, above all things, from piling on an already oil charged surface more fat or oil from creams and skin foods whose mission is to supply lubrication to dry surfaces. There are cleansing lotions for oily skins on the market which eliminate the extra fat loading danger referred to, but there is no rule against washing the face with soap and water also, and doing it more than once a day.

You are familiar, no doubt, with the need of a good astringent to combat the oil excess, but not enough people are aware of the astringent properties contained in cold water—cold, cold water. As a skin tonic, cold water conclusions to the usual face washing, no matter what the skin condition or texture, stand unparalleled. For the oily skin it has particular magic in that it contracts the muscles around the tiny glands, correcting faulty secretory functions. Use it always after you wash the face. Use your other astringent, too—but use your cold water as a tonic for what ails the complexion.

There are agreeable and valuable astringent preparations on the market from which to make a choice. Or for removing the oily film you may use alcohol or witch hazel. You can wipe the surface frequently during the day with your astringent. Besides removing the film of oil, astringents contract the pore openings. Certain herbs and vegetable essences put into reliably manufactured products have astringent properties of great value. You can add a few drops of benzoin to the last cold water face rinse with thoroughly pleasing result to an oily skin.

This oily type of skin, above all other types of skin, has to be under strict surveillance constantly, and the thorough cleansing with soap and water morning and night cannot be too urgently recommended. It is the only way you can prevent powder, dust, grime, or any foreign material from combining with the excess oil to set up future trouble.

Powder Puff Caution.

Caution about powder puff cleanliness is strongly urged, for no end of difficulty may be ascribed to the soiled puff's action in combination with the already unhealthy acting sebaceous gland.

Astringent masks may be employed on the oil burdened skin. The clay packs of wide popularity a few years ago are good. Used once a week, they may make a valuable contribution to the pore corrective work. Fuller's earth, the important ingredient, you can buy at any drug store and mix with witch hazel until you have a smooth paste. Spread over the face and let it dry and harden. Immerse the face in a bowl of tepid water to remove the clay.

An even simpler astringent mask may be made from the white of an egg applied as a coating over the face and let dry. If the skin is extremely oily, a second coating of the egg white on top of the first can be used. You can feel a tightening of the skin and a contraction of the pores under this homey mask treatment.

The enlarged pores that invariably accompany the type of skin of which we are talking respond happily to the astringent treatment suggested, to the cold water especially, and to the weekly or semi-monthly mask applications.

Women the World Over

Mrs. Harry Payne Whitney, famous sculptor in New York City, is endowing a museum of American art, which will carry on a vigorous campaign to discover fresh talent.

Princess Eudoxie of Bulgaria, sister of King Boris, is said to purchase only one gown a year in order to aid the poor.

Lucky Mother

"My success with Dorothy isn't just luck," says Mrs. I. Alvine, 7636 Blackstone Ave., Chicago. "It is due to a plan. "She has escaped the ill-effects of colds and upsets because, at the first sign of a cold; of bad breath, coated tongue or feverishness, I open her bowels with California Fig Syrup. She loves its taste and I like its gentle, thorough action."

Mothers by thousands praise California Fig Syrup. For fifty years physicians have endorsed this pure vegetable product. It tones and strengthens stomach and bowels; stimulates appetite; encourages digestion and assimilation. Its use helps make sallow, listless children rosy and energetic.

Look for the name California when buying. That marks the genuine; safe for infants, effective for children in their teens.

On Introductions

By Helen Bartlett

It is the aim of this department to serve as a practical guide in problems of every day etiquette. Self-addressed, stamped envelope must accompany each request for information. Send your letters to Miss Helen Bartlett, Sunday Department, CHICAGO TRIBUNE.

MANY letters come to this department asking: "What is the correct form of introduction?"

Or, "What shall I say when I am introduced to a young man (or young woman)?" Or again, "How shall I acknowledge an introduction?"

And, in a manner of speaking, each correspondent says: "Please make it easy for me. I don't want to know how to greet an ambassador or a diplomat's wife or a king—I don't expect to meet any. I want to know about the simple introductions I must make or acknowledge, every day."

A great deal of grace or a great deal of awkwardness can be displayed in the simple acts of introducing or being introduced. An unkind observer might judge pretty accurately of one's social education in this way.

There are things one should never do. Never use the phrase "make you acquainted"; next, never say "Pleased to meet you"—that has the great drawback of appearing obviously false, because you never know on introductions whether or not you're pleased to meet any one. Never present a woman to a man; always present a man to a woman.

Never say "Mr. Smith, meet Mr. Jones." The word "meet" is not used. And when you are introduced avoid saying "I am pleased to meet you" or "I am glad to meet you."

Do Not Shake Hands.

A man does not offer his hand to a woman on introduction and should not feel that he's being coldly treated if the woman does not offer hers. It's a woman's privilege to offer her hand, of course, but it is better to shake hands too little than too much. The gesture attains something of sincerity and significance if it is offered in parting as a sign of good fellowship. If, however, a man should offer his hand to a woman on introduction she should take it cordially and no matter who she is, or thinks she is, she commits a decided social error if she ignores it altogether.

Young people are always presented to older people of the same sex, even though there is supposed to exist the custom for married women to take precedence over unmarried ones. If they are near an age this rule may be observed, but if there is a difference in ages that is quite apparent the matron is presented to the maid.

Young men are presented to older men.

The guest of honor, however, has every one presented to her—old, young, distinguished, or otherwise. She will, however, if she is skilled in such things, acknowledge the distinctions and age by her manner.

The Simpler, the Better.

The truly correct form of introduction is "May I present," but as that is rather formal and stilted for most occasions, it can be understood rather than spoken and one may introduce by merely mentioning names, provided this is done in the proper manner. For instance, one introduces a man to a woman by saying, "Miss Martin, Mr. King." Or one may introduce a contemporary to one's mother by saying "Mother, this is Miss Jones." One person of the same age and sex is introduced to another by saying either name first—simply, "Mr. Smith, Mr. Brown." It is never necessary to repeat the names, as "Mr. Smith, Mr. Brown—Mr. Brown, Mr. Smith." This is unnecessary and absurd.

The simpler the introduction, the better and the easier. One may say, "Mr. Gordon, do you know Mr. Black?" or if you are not sure that you are introducing friends for the first time you may say, "Miss Gray, I think you know Mr. Smith?" But don't say it as though you expected an answer, for this may cause embarrassment on both sides.

Correct Replies.

The correct form of receiving an introduction is simply to say, "How do you do?" or "Good evening," or "Good afternoon." If you wish you may repeat the name, saying "How do you do, Mr. Jones?"

"But a simple "How do you do?" suffices in nearly every case. If you do not understand a name, don't say "I did not catch the name," or "What is your name?" but inquire later of some one else who is sure to know.

When to make introductions must be left largely to the discretion of the individual. Never make introductions to those in your party of casual people who stop to greet you in the street or public places. If two are walking on a street or shopping in a store and a third person comes up to greet one of the two the other should walk on and not make an introduction necessary. If you are leaving a house when others enter, do not stop to be introduced to them. Say good-by and leave at once.

A hostess should never drag a guest about a room introducing him or her to a great many people. She should introduce her guest to those near at hand, so he will not be stranded, but the sort of hostess who buzzes about all the time, just introducing people, is not particularly graceful.

However, to neglect making introductions can be as bad as making a mountainous job of it. If a party is small every one should be introduced to every one else. If a group of people attend a public function under one person's auspices, their hostess should see that they become acquainted. If a hostess invites friends to play bridge at a charity affair she should introduce them to people with whom they are to play. If one brings a group to a football game or a hockey match one should be sure to introduce those who will sit together.

A Hostess' Duty.

No matter how big a party, the hostess should see that the young girls have dancing parties; that dinner partners know each other, and that any guest asking an introduction to another guests gets it.

If a hostess is remiss about these things those sitting next to each other at table or in a drawing room naturally introduce themselves, or just talk as though they had been introduced—but this does not constitute a basis for friendship or further recognition.

Concerning that much asked question, "Who speaks first?" the answer is still, "The woman." The woman, in the case of acquaintances or persons little known to her, makes the first sign of recognition. With friends, of course, there would be no question—the greeting would be spontaneous on both sides.

To go about "cutting" people, no matter what the reason, is rather serious business and means warfare. It indicates quite definitely that you don't wish to recognize that person's presence on the earth. On the other hand, the recognition by a salutation of another person's presence means nothing at all save that the person who gives it is well bred.

Answers to Etiquette Questions.

"Kindly tell me how to acknowledge an invitation on a calling card with the hostess' name engraved and the other matter written in longhand, thus:

At the —— Club.
Saturday, March twenty-second.
Mrs. John Smith.
At half past two.
Tea.

"Should this be answered?

"E. H."

If you expect to attend no answer is necessary. If you do not go you send cards, to arrive the day of the tea.

Embarrassing Moments

The Tribune will pay $1 for every letter published on "The Most Embarrassing Moment of My Life." Address Embarrassing Moments, Chicago Tribune. Write on one side of the paper. No manuscripts returned.

In the Wrong City.

One day I picked up a street car token on the street and dropped it into my purse.

Several months later, after a shopping tour downtown, I looked to see if I would have enough money for a soda besides my car fare home and found I had just the price of a soda and the token.

I enjoyed the soda, then boarded a street car for home.

Imagine not only my embarrassment but my predicament when the street car conductor said, "Lady, if you want to ride on this token you will have to go to Omaha." V. N. S.

Thoughtless Remark.

We have a certain salesman with our firm who is always playing tricks on the girls. While enjoying a peaceful afternoon after a lunch hour of music and what-have-you, I noticed a familiar form sweep by my desk to the switchboard.

Without looking up, I said, "Well, sappy, what are you up to now?"

I felt about as cheap as a penny waiting for change when the general manager replied, "Can you suggest anything exciting?"

I discovered that this "old crab" was a little humorous after all, but nevertheless I've decided to "look before I leap." L. P.

Dressing for the Date.

Betty and I were employed in a beauty salon. We often wore each other's hats and dresses out to lunch. One day a friend from my home called and asked me to have lunch with him.

As I was getting into my street dress I spied a lovely white felt hat beside Betty's dress. I tried it on and thought how lucky I was. I had a lovely lunch and was coming up the stairs feeling great when I heard some one say, "There's my hat!"

A patron had come that morning for a permanent wave and had left her hat in our dressing room. I found this out all too late, to my sorrow. S. C.

Hasty Conclusion.

Many years ago, when I was training to be a nurse, there was a girl in my class who had been married quite young and had recently lost her husband. Her little boy, Bob, 10, frequently visited his mother and I was quite fond of him.

After his mother graduated she left the city and I did not see her until last summer, when I met her on the street. She had a young looking man with her, whom I took to be Bob. After greeting her I turned to the young man and said, "Goodness, Bob, you certainly have grown up in a hurry!"

Imagine my embarrassment when she explained that he was not Bob, but her husband, and they were on their honeymoon. It is hard to say which of the three of us was the most embarrassed. S. A. H.

VERDICT.

(In a country club.)

The stranger faced an ordeal where the women sat.
A jury of her peers all watched her pass
To move in careless quiet down the room.

The stranger's hat turned down,
Their hats flared up.
Her coat was plain, perhaps,
And tailor made. But then her frock
Last season's cut and color
Tipped opinion's scales.
The jury turned thumbs down.

She passed. The jury never knew or guessed
The stranger walked with queens;
Lived, nursed and taught within war's very heart
And, in time's peace wrought dreams
Of marble, and of solid bronze
With strong and famous hands,
Or tended babes.

She passed in quiet and a dowdy hat.
Their verdict stood.

Patterns and How to Use Them

By Clotilde

Frocks Emphasizing Sender Lines Are Not Difficult to Make; Also, There's a Winsome School Dress for the Little Miss.

THE shirred sides of the bodice of the dress made by pattern No. 3069 lend a soft effect to the figure, and the low placed skirt fullness helps to give an appearance of slenderness. The dress is fitted so as to show the curved line of the hips, while the panel at the back is a further means of giving length. The vestee of a contrasting color is cut with a deep V neckline, an outline that is universally becoming. The close fitting sleeves are finished at the wrist with turndown, flaring cuffs, made of the same material as the vestee, and the unusually full skirt is cut so as to dip each side of the front and back.

The bodice is made with a dart at each underarm seam on the front, and the front is shirred between large perforations at the lower end of the underarms seams. The front is cut surplice fashion and the right is lapped over the left front, keeping the lines indicating the center front together, and the lower lapped edges are basted together.

Then the collar should be made and set on to the bodice—the vestee made and set in place, notches showing just where it belongs. Before putting the vestee in position the neck should be finished with a narrow bias binding.

The front of the skirt is joined to the side back skirt sections, and then the back panel is set in place. Clip the curved edges of the panel and then turn in the edges, making a half inch turning. Have the seam line plainly marked on the edges of the skirt, and lay the turned in edge of each side of the panel over the corresponding skirt seam, pinning it in place at close intervals before basting. Baste from the top towards the bottom, and then after overcasting the edges together on the wrong side, stitch twice—once close to the turned under edge and then about three-eighths of an inch inside.

Keep the skirt on a table while you are working, as it is so full it might stretch badly if allowed to weigh down. For size 36, the skirt measures about four yards at the bottom.

Binding or picoting will finish prettily. Navy blue crêpe marocain with chartreuse, crêpe de chine in dark wine tone with a blending shade of the same material, and georgette in black with white or eggshell contrasting are chic suggestions.

Pattern No. 2697 makes a charming little dress for girls. It consists of a skirt that is laid in wide box plaits all around and finished at the bottom with a wide hem. The skirt is attached to a sleeveless waist and has suspender straps on the front. Then the little bolero jacket finishes this smart little outfit.

It is just the thing for classroom wear or for travel. A printed crêpe de chine, combined with a solid color, printed rayon crêpe, sportsweight linen, pique, and tweed like cottons are appropriate. One of the wool jerseys in red, combined with a midnight blue velveteen for the jacket, would be most attractive.

A new arrangement of plaits, giving a smart flare, is shown in pattern No. 3133. Diagonal lines emphasize the flat hipline, and at the same time carry out the idea of length, an important point in the new mode. A narrow belt marks the normal waistline, and the soft collar and jabot frill and the deep turned back cuffs are all important details.

The dress isn't at all difficult to make, and should be smart and useful for general daytime wear. Perforations show clearly just how to lay the plaits. Crease or fold from the top down, then pin and finially baste. Do all this work from the top towards the bottom, and don't forget to run your fingers under the plait folds to see that everything is smooth underneath. If a slight twist is felt anywhere, release the pins and shift the fold enough to smooth things out.

After the skirt and waist seams are finished, turn the lower edge of the waist under, clipping where necessary, and then pin the two parts together. Pin first at the center back and front, then at the side seams and then in between. Baste carefully and then stitch, using two rows about three-eighths of an inch apart. The bottom of the skirt may be hemmed invisibly. The sleeves are dart fitted, and are left open at the wrist end, and closed there with tiny snaps.

Checked covert cloth in a dark green tone, with the collar and cuffs cut on the bias, and navy blue Canton crêpe with the collar and cuffs of an eggshell crêpe are smart combinations.

3069—Woman's and misses' dress. Sizes 16 and 18 years and 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, 46, 48, and 50 inches bust measure. Size 36 requires 4 yards of 39 inch material and ¼ yard of 39 inch material for knots and ends, ⅝ yard of 32 inch contrasting, and 2½ yards of 4¼ inch wide lace.

3133—Woman's and misses' dress. Sizes 16 and 18 years and 36, 38, 40, and 42 inches bust measure. Size 36 requires 3¾ yards of 39 inch material with ⅝ yard of 39 inch contrasting.

2697—Girls' dress. Sizes 6, 8, 10, 12, and 14 years. Size 8 requires 1¼ yards of 40 inch material with ¾ yard of 40 inch contrasting and 1⅛ yards of 40 inch material for the bolero and 2 yards of binding.

Foretold Coal Delivery.

Early one morning I dreamed that coal was put in our basement by mistake. I told my husband of my dream and he laughed and said, "I guess no one will give us any coal."

That same day about 5 p. m. the doorbell rang and a driver informed me that he had put a ton of coal in our basement by mistake instead of delivering it next door. The coal holes in the sidewalk were close together and the driver did not know of his mistake until told by the person who had ordered the coal just as he was driving away. A. H.

Warned Against Partner.

Five years ago, my husband, a young man in business in the east, bought out his 73 year old partner, with the unwritten understanding that the older man was to retire from business.

I had a vivid dream of his partner going in the same line of business a few doors away and ruining my husband. My husband laughed at my fears. But when he went to his store as sole owner for the first time, his partner appeared at a furniture store three doors away. He made enough competition to force my husband to sell out at a disadvantage, just as I had dreamed. F. W. H.

SALTS FINE FOR ACHING KIDNEYS

When Back Hurts Flush Your Kidneys as You Clean Your Bowels

Most folks forget that the kidneys, like the bowels, sometimes get sluggish and clogged and need a flushing occasionally, else we have headache and dull misery in the kidney region, severe headaches, rheumatic twinges, torpid liver, acid stomach, sleeplessness and all sorts of bladder disorders.

You simply must keep your kidneys active and clean and the moment you feel an ache or pain in the kidney region begin drinking lots of water. Also get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any good drug store here, take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and is intended to flush clogged kidneys and help stimulate them to activity. It also helps neutralize the acids in the urine so they no longer irritate, thus helping to relieve bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; makes a delightful effervescent lithia water drink which everybody should take now and then to help keep their kidneys clean.

A well-known local druggist says he sells lots of Jad Salts to folks who believe in trying to correct kidney trouble while it is only trouble.

What is your sewing problem? Do you have trouble in following a pattern? Do you find difficulty in making a skirt hang evenly or making a sleeve that doesn't twist? If there is anything you would like to know about these or other problems of needlework, write to Clotilde, The Tribune, Chicago, inclosing a stamped, addressed envelope if a personal reply is desired.

HERE are two suggestions for women who make their own and their children's clothes — and they are really good.

The first is for girls and women who like separate skirts and blouses that are worn under the top of the skirt. If your blouse is washable be sure that the shrinking has been thoroughly done. Then set the bottom of the blouse into a band. The skirt doubtless will have some sort of a pretty belt to conceal the band that the skirt is put into. Buy hooks and eyes that are riveted onto a length of tape. Shrink these strips of tape thoroughly and then sew the strip that holds the eyes onto the outside of the blouse band—having the top of the eyes toward the bottom of the band.

Sew the strip on which the hooks are fastened to the inside of the skirt band, having the tops of the hooks towards the top of the skirt band. You should plan the sewing of these strips so that when skirt and blouse are hooked together they will absolutely not show. The eyes should be far enough below the top of the band so that when skirt and blouse are hooked together the top of the blouse band will be covered a little by the top of the skirt band. You can see at once how perfectly the dress as a whole will stay in place; and when laundering time comes you simply have to unhook the two parts.

So many blouses are lighter in color or shade than the skirt with which they are worn; and often dresses are made where different colors are used for blouse and skirt, so instead of sending the entire dress to be cleaned, you can simply detach the blouse and wash it yourself.

The other suggestion refers to a boy's knickerbockers. How many times have you seen maybe one or both straps that hold the leg in place at the knees open and the leg of the knickerbocker hanging loose?

Rip off the strap that holds the buckle, and in place of the material that is used, sew a piece of strong, elastic. You can make this a little tight, and it will give, and yet not allow the band to slip down.

—By Jane Eddington—

Mid-Lent Sunday Revives the English Custom of Giving Simnel Cakes.

All recipes have been scientifically tested by Miss Eddington with current market materials and are indorsed by her.

THE calendar of the Christian year has one feast after another. To be sure, we must not in all cases take the word feast as meaning the partaking of mundane nourishment, though that great feast—Easter—does have as a part of its celebration a spread of most solid edibles, and then, too, not all the forty days of Lent have scant faring. It is said that Mid-Lent, or let us use the more fascinating French term, Mi-Carême, was established to keep the undisciplined from backsliding during the forty days; that is, by the establishment of this one feasting day during the harsh Lenten season it made the church rules easier to be obeyed for the remainder of the time.

In Ben Jonson's play, "Every Man in His Humor," we find in what bad humor were some of the people who were supposed to obey fasting days and would not. One of them speaks of "villainous Fridays," and says, "Let who will make hungry meals. It shall not be I." And then goes on to speak of "lean, rascally days." When asked to tell why he disliked them he used some rather rough terms explaining how he disliked leek perridge and going devoutly hungry all day, then supperless to bed. It made him even dislike the almanac, which he calls nithy, and he names the fast days persecution days.

Mothering Sunday.

Mid-Lent, because of a famous English custom, is also called Mothering Sunday. There are other names for the day and curious records about the activities of the day.

It is a considerable number of years since a reader who wished to practice the ancient sentiment of Mothering Sunday in her family talked to me about how to make the simnel or the Mothering Sunday cake. Since then I have collected many simnel cake recipes and items concerning the practice of giving it. This reader had wished to have her daughter make such a cake, and she herself wanted to present cakes to the senior mother of the family.

The first recipe for a simnel cake which I have found was in a cook' book sent to me from Ashburton, New Zealand. I had it tested out, and in fact it is the only tested recipe I have for this cake.

Almond Simnel Cake.

The conclusion from a collection of recipes for simnel cake is that they are practically all almond cakes. At any rate, the New Zealand recipe is and is given a title including the word almond: Five eggs, one cup butter, two cups flour—it was ten ounces of flour in the recipe and that is the more exact way to measure this ingredient always—one-half cup fresh lemon peel which should weigh one-fourth pound, one cup sugar, one-half teaspoon nutmeg, three-fourths pound currants. The recipe for the almond paste is: Six ounces ground almonds, two eggs, one cup powdered sugar, five drops of almond essence. Mix to a paste and roll out.

In testing this cake we made the batter just as I make "grandmother's pound cake," breaking the eggs into five different cups, creaming the butter and working the sugar into it, then adding the eggs, one by one, and mixing them in with the hand, working each until all of the yolk is lost to sight. After the eggs are worked in the flour is added with the currants and grated lemon rind.

The only directions in the recipe for making the cake were these: "Put a layer of almond paste in a cake tin lined with well buttered paper, then put in half of the cake mixture, then another layer of the almond paste, then the rest of the cake mixture on top. Bake in a moderate oven. Ice the top with more almond paste made as before by using only the whites of the eggs. Ornament to taste with white icing, etc."

We baked this slowly for one hour in a large spring mold and got a cake that looked like a cushion plainly dotted all over with currants, and therefore extremely English looking. Our conclusion about the baking was that it would be best to bake it slowly at rather a low temperature and not having it so much like a cushion on top. Later we tried it with candied lemon peel instead of the raw, and decided that the latter was wonderfully better for this cake, because it gave it so fine an aroma.

Making Almond Paste.

The making of almond paste is not easy. For instance, the author of the letter from which we have quoted wrote partly to learn how to crush the almonds. She wondered if she might use a food chopper or whether she must have a mortar and pestle, which were the old utensils used for the purpose. And another correspondent who tried the cake said she could not get the almond paste right. It was too thin and then she added more sugar and that was a failure.

If one uses a grinder for almonds great care must be exercised because they will pack, and some grinders cannot be trusted because they will blacken anything of that sort. But if we use a meat chopper that has been well cared for and clean it out by putting some dried bread crumbs through after it is used, it may come out all right. As everybody knows, the meat chopper requires more prompt attention after it has been used than almost any other utensil. It should be cleaned immediately and never soaked.

The commercial almond paste packs and therefore when used it is grated in order to lighten it. After that the unbeaten white of an egg or eggs and any necessary sugar are added to it.

Scotch Simnel Cake.

The following recipe is from a book of high class cookery put out by the most famous cooking school in Scotland. Perhaps what it says about almond paste is illuminating. The recipe reads: "Three ounces flour, three ounces butter, three ounces sugar, four ounces sultanas, one teaspoonful baking powder, one-half teaspoonful ground ginger, one-half teaspoonful ground cinnamon, four ounces currants, four ounces Valencia raisins, two ounces peel, one-fourth teaspoonful nutmeg, pinch salt, two eggs and, if necessary, milk. Almond paste: One-half pound ground almonds, one-half pound icing sugar, one-two eggs, vanilla, ratafia, orange flower water, lemon juice.

"Prepare the almond paste first. Clean the fruit; cream butter and sugar, and beat in the eggs singly with a little flour; stir in the fruit and the remainder of the flour with the spices, baking powder and salt. Have it of a stiff consistency. Put half the mixture into a papered tin; place a layer of almond paste on this and remainder of mixture on top. Bake in a steady, moderately hot oven two and a half to three hours. When cold, place the rest of almond paste on top, and decorate with balls of icing if desired. Dust with icing sugar.

"Almond paste—Pound almonds well, add sugar and flavoring and enough slightly beaten egg, and mix to a firm consistency."

Another Scotch Recipe.

The following recipe taken from "Tried Favorites Cookery Book," has an item that seems contrary to all good practices, but it illuminates some of the points we are trying to make, therefore we give it. Perhaps some time we might try taking out a partly baked cake and treating it as this was treated for the sake of finding out what would happen: "One-half pound butter, one-half pound castor sugar, two ounces rice flour, seven ounces flour, four eggs, one-half pound currants. Mix rice flour with sugar, beat eggs and cream with the butter. Add all the other ingredients. Mix. Pour a layer of mixture into buttered cake tin, then a layer of almond icing, and so on. Bake in a moderate oven, and when nearly cooked through, take it out and cover with a layer of almond icing, an inch thick. Mark like a chessboard with a knife, and brush with egg or milk. Replace in oven till quite cooked."

Winning the Incorrigible

—By Gladys Huntington Bevans—

Recreate Your Home Into a Place of Friendliness and Dismiss Thoughts of the Reform School.

WE are still on the subject, started in our daily articles, of the boys and girls in their early teens whose parents are so discouraged that they talk of unthinkable measures for reforming them—such as sending them to a reform school.

These letters often ask me for the address of such a school. In lieu of giving them that, I make a few suggestions. They have to be general in nature. I know they seem hard to follow. But we parents have to remember that we can't expect to correct our mistakes without thought and effort. Here are the suggestions, given a little more fully than I can give them in a letter:

The tools to use in helping children who are out of key with their parents, their school, and their social life are: Interest from their parents; interest in worthwhile occupation for their leisure; companionship; understanding; approval. These may be supplied in various ways.

First—If you're the mother, stay at home instead of going to work or business unnecessarily.

Second—mother or father, stop scolding, nagging, punishing, and holding brothers or sisters up as an example. That will get you no where, as you have proved. Show no favoritism. Feel no antagonism.

Try to Understand Him.

Try to understand your child. The girl or boy in the early teens is not like the little child of 6 or 8, and must not be treated like him.

Drop the "commanding officer" attitude, if you're a father, and be a friend to your boy. If you're a mother, be and act more like a loving companion and less like a stern parent.

Avoid making your son or daughter feel reprehensible. "I'm ashamed of you." "You're a disgrace to me" is only making what you feel important. It pulls them down. Instead, build up your child's self-respect and pride.

Avoid all undesirable associations—they are hard for you to work against. Try to do it indirectly—by moving to another neighborhood if possible, or by substituting other interests and by your own companionship.

The various organizations for young people are an invaluable aid in building them up in character, morale, and physical condition. Among these are the Boy Scouts, the Girl Scouts, the Campfire Girls, the Y. M. C. A., the Y. W. C. A., and various young people's societies connected with the churches.

Investigate the School.

When school work suffers, find out why. Go to school. See the teacher. See the principal. Enlist their cooperation. Make them realize your interest and your need of their help. Then they will probably come to feel their responsibility, too, in helping your boy or girl.

Or perhaps the school is the wrong one. It may be that your child needs to learn a trade, a craft—or to take a business course instead of straight academic work. Find out from the principal where you can reach some one qualified to give vocational guidance.

For those parents who are inclined to get help from reading there are a number of books, some of which have been mentioned in this department from time to time. General reading that should be helpful might include: "Mothers and Daughters," by Jessica G. Cosgrove, published by George H. Doran.

"Fathers and Sons," by Samuel Drury, published by George H. Doran.

"The Psychology of the Adolescent," by Leta S. Hollingsworth, published by D. Appleton & Co., and the references in my own booklet on sex education.

Problems Are Related.

The brief pamphlet reading suggested in this booklet constitutes a simple reading course in sex education for those parents who have not thought along these lines. Children in the early teens need wise enlightenment, but their parents cannot give it to them unless they have things clear in their own minds.

An important and encouraging thing to remember if you are helping your boy or girl to work out of discouraging difficulties is this: That behavior problems are interlocking, and in clearing up one trouble you sometimes clear them all up. For instance, trouble at school and consequent punishment and discouragement may be the real cause of other difficult actions. Or undesirable companions may be the root of every other trouble.

For the present, that is the end of the suggestions for helping parents to help their children.

Look to the Home Atmosphere.

The letters which are similar to the one published earlier in the week describing some son or daughter who is out of key with the world, seldom present a picture of warm family life—seldom give the impression of an attractive home.

Children begin life by loving their homes and regarding their father and mother as the very hub of the universe—provided they are given any excuse at all to do so. All through their lives their homes and their parents should be a sort of combined magnet representing warmth, friendliness, understading, happiness, interest—a magnet which draws and holds them.

So, in trying to clear up the mental or emotional troubles of your child, look to the home atmosphere. Is home a rich place (not in the material sense)? Is dinner a comradely, sociable function? Is there any "let's do this and let's do that" feeling? Is every child made to feel its his home and that he's needed in it?

When a father and mother create a child they need to know how to create a home, too. In reclaiming a child—if we may use that word in this way—they need, instead of sending that child to a reform school, often to reclaim and recreate their home.

The Male Gold Digger

By Doris Blake

He Hopefully Eyes the Girl with a Rich Dad; Failing There, He Concentrates on the Earning Ability of His Beloved.

WHO is looking for the soft berth in marriage—our ultra modern young woman or our ultra modern young man? The question, it appears, is due for a lively debate.

Young men have no delicacy about accusing girls of being "mercenary and nothing but" in their marriage calculations. This state of mind and heart is further accused of widening the breach between a young man's normal desire for a home and the fulfillment of his desire. One man in a recent communication worded his grievance: "The young woman's greed for gold with her marriage puts us average salaried fellows out of the running."

The comment stirred up feminine ire, which threatens to turn the tables on the other sex.

"Let the world in on the actual state of affairs," pleads one indignant girl. "It is the men whose affections can only be bought with gold or brilliant prospects."

Martha reports her experience as illustrative of what the average girl of not much money may have to compete with. Martha is an earner. Her salary is good—but not "tempting," as she puts it. Not great enough to tempt a man to marry her for it. She does, however, manage to care for herself and her mother on it. This, Martha thinks ought to give her a good matrimonial boost, since it is in the management of the money one has that Martha sees the happiest marriage solution.

Male Succumbs to Gifts.

For a year and a half, Martha had an idea, supported by fairly strong evidence, that she was in a fair way to becoming the head of the house of Barnes. Dick Barnes paid her attentions and told her what a swell girl he thought she was. He even suggested willingness that she take over him, his weekly stipend and his future for management. BUT along came a girl whose father could place him, at daughter's request, in a position of promise. Dick laughed about it first to Martha.

He did not tell Martha, however, about the fitted bag that was left for him at his boarding place one morning with the rich girl's card inside. He did not tell her about the dozen pairs of silk hose, the half dozen monogrammed shirts, or of the other gifts that followed. Martha found out about them later when Dick had abandoned her completely for the other girl. Also, she learned from a male friend of Dick's that he did not care for the girl the way he did for Martha but his alibi was, "If a fellow has to live, he might as well live as comfortably as possible."

"Sincerely" is a wide-awake young woman whose observations cover a number of men alongside whom she has worked and met socially in an eight year earning period. Her opinion is that men who are eligible for marriage are looking for girls with money. She is no sorehead, either. She is going to be married shortly to a school boy sweetheart who escaped the mercenary marriage curse by his own successful efforts. But the talk of men she has listened to convinces "Sincerely" that there is just as rampant among males as among her own sex a keen desire to "hook-up" with one whose financial resources will make the way smooth and easy.

This One Gets a Settlement.

One of "Sincerely's" friends told her of his pal, a young dentist. He was going to marry a girl whose parents were well to do, not that he had any great affection for her but because the parents had agreed to make a large settlement. And the one who related the story to "Sincerely" agreed that his pal was wise; also that he wished a stroke of luck like that would come his way.

One young man in the office was being "kidded" about a certain girl who apparently did not meet with common approval. "Her dad has a pile of jack," the swain defended. "Sincerely" looked for a laugh to follow the defense. It was not forthcoming.

Another male friend of "Sincerely's" lives in a club. He admits that the hope of meeting a girl with money is commonly expressed. One attractive chap was trying to argue down his particular pal's infatuation for the telephone operator at his place of employment. The telephone operator was under consideration as dancing partner for a certain affair. Incidentally, she did win the invitation, but the objector argued:

"But lookit, Bill. You'll have to take her in a cab. Get a girl with a car of her own. It's just as easy to love a girl with money—and a lot better investment."

Weighs in Her Salary.

So "Sincerely" draws the conclusion that if girls are trying to better themselves by marrying with an eye to luxury, they are being set an excellent example by males of their acquaintance.

It is not necessary that a girl have a rich dad or mater, "Sincerely" further opines. If she has a job that looks as if two could live better with it than they could on the man's sole salary, that girl stands a fair chance of being married. The highest paid girl in her organization won her mate, a man years her junior, because she was able through her influence to lift him from behind a ledger to a minor executive place and because she had a perfectly equipped apartment into which all the mate had to do was to move his belongings.

The young man made no secret about why he was marrying the woman. In fact, in a tearful seession with a girl he did care for he frankly admitted that he knew he would never be in a position to give her the kind of care he would want to, as he was not a success-getter in his own right.

Weak Crying for Help.

In which explanation the young man probably put his finger on the pulse of the situation. The weak crying for help! Isn't that what it boils down to?

Certainly our strong men are not leaning on a rich-dad prospect, nor on a girl with a good job. They are glorying, as they have always done, in the only noteworthy form of success—accomplishing on their own. And in spite of suspicions to the contrary and the occasional bits of evidence that can be drawn upon, the easy marriage-berth seekers constitute a pretty small minority, whether you are judging them from the male or the woman viewpoint.

The surprise to me, in fact, is that living in an atmosphere as polluted as it is with the taint of mercenariness, and in a day of fierce economic struggle, that more greed calculation does not enter into marriage consideration. Indeed, it speaks well for the human race that love still holds first place in this business of mate choosing.

A Friend in Need

By Sally Joy Brown

Babies Born Into Homes That Feel the Pinch of Hard Times Need the Little Clothes Your Youngsters Have Outgrown

I want to be the medium through which the friends in need and the friends in deed may be brought together. It may be you have some discarded article which has not outgrown its usefulness that will make some less fortunate one happy and you would gladly give it. Write to me and I shall be happy to be of service to you. Please write on one side of the paper.

When information is wanted by mail a stamped, addressed envelope should accompany the request. Please do not send article to The Tribune, but write for the address of the applicant and send direct.

THE hundreds of letters which come to me each week depict every type of need and distress known to humanity. There's the invalid who sits day after day looking out with hungry eyes into an aggravatingly attractive world shut off from him because of his disability. And he looks forward to the day when some fairy godmother or angel of mercy will deliver to him the wheel chair which will enable him to go out and enjoy the beauties of life that are left for him.

Then there's the cry from the aged man or woman who finds himself or herself, after a lifetime spent in the service of others, without family, friends, or funds—helpless and alone. Weary, feeble, and sometimes hungry, they long for the rest and comfort due them.

There's the young woman, a stranger in the city, looking for employment; the father who tramps the streets day after day in a fruitless search for work; the tired mother who is confronted with the problem of clothing and feeding and making a home for her brood on the smallest of incomes. These are pathetic and they give you food for thought, but do they incite in you the same sympathy that the needy, expectant mother does?

Think of the preparations that are made in your household or that of your friends when the advent of a baby is at hand. Hours of stitching on snowy linens, heaps of the filmiest of laces, tiny satin robes and coverlets, daintily embroidered dresses—all of these in the months of waiting that precede the happy event.

In the other half of the world, the half you seldom think about, babies are expected, too. But here the infant's coming is not the joyful event you always expect it to be. No handsome layette awaits it. And there's no downy, comfortable bassinette for it. It means another mouth to feed. And the poor, distracted mother wonders where she'll find a tiny garment or two for it and how she'll provide the fresh milk and other necessities so important in the first few months of the newcomer's existence.

Here is where you can step in and help both mother and child. The little garments your son or daughter has outgrown—they are almost never worn out—and the bassinette you've replaced with a bed will provide the proper setting for a happy birthday. In almost every family where there have been babies there are booties, dresses, slips, and blankets still in perfect condition. There will be a happier, healthier, and more comfortable baby if you will donate these, and a distressing situation will become a joyful occasion because of your thoughtfulness.

Phonographs for Paralytics.

"A clinic for poor children is about to start the treatment of birth paralysis with rhythm. To do so it is necessary to furnish the patients with phonographs in order that they may teach the children movements of the stiff limb, the musical accompaniment making this easier to perform. These cases can be improved with persistent treatment. We shall require about six phonographs to start. J. C."

If you have a phonograph you no longer want I can think of no better place for it than here, where it can do such an enormous amount of good. Won't you donate yours to this splendid and worthy cause?

Need for Piano Tuner.

"I am coming to you with an unusual request, but perhaps if you put my appeal in your column some one will help me. When I was a little girl, thirty-seven years ago, my mother bought me a piano. She is gone now, but I still have the piano and love it dearly. While away from home recently, I left it in the care of friends, who abused it terribly, for it is in awful shape now. Not only does it need tuning but two of the keys are broken. Since I cannot afford to have it repaired or tuned, I have been wondering if you know of some piano tuner who would do this for me.

"MRS. O. F."

When one is as fond of a thing as Mrs. O. F. is of her piano it seems pitiful that she hasn't the means to take care of it. However, perhaps we have a piano tuner among our readers who would donate a little of his time to repairing the instrument some day when he is in her neighborhood.

For a Pleasant Confirmation.

"My sister is to be confirmed in April and we cannot afford to buy a dress for her. My father is not working steadily so I am asking your readers for help. She wears size 14. My mother is in need of a spring coat, too, size 43 or 30, and we would be so happy if you could get one for her. She has been sick all winter. H. J."

Confirmation day will not dawn so brightly for this girl if she hasn't a new dress for the occasion and the ailing mother will be disappointed if she has no coat to wear to the ceremony. Can you supply either of these needs?

Sage Tea Puts Color in Gray Hair

By LOIS PAIGE

I am heartily in favor of the woman who refuses to be aged by gray hair. It is every woman's right, even her duty, to retain her youthfulness and attractiveness as long as she can. When a woman asks me about coloring her gray, faded or streaked hair I say, "Go ahead", and tell her the secret of sage tea and sulphur.

A brew of common garden sage tea and sulphur has the power to restore gray or faded hair to full life and color. You can either prepare the mixture at home or buy it already prepared and ready to use. The name of the prepared article is Wyeth's Sage & Sulphur, and since it costs only 75c a bottle at any drug store, there is really no need to go to the bother of preparing it yourself.

You simply moisten a comb or soft brush and draw it through your hair, one strand at a time. Done at night, morning sees the gray gone; another application or two and your hair is once again of the color and lustre of youth and you appear years younger. The whole effort is one of perfect naturalness.

AIR IN A HURRY

By Eleanor Jewett

If wind is not air in a hurry,
Then what can it possibly be?
I know it IS air in a hurry,
I can feel it brush against me.

The wind is really just air,
But it's air that has manners most rude;
It pushes and shoves and goes blustering by
In a way that no proper air would.

I think that I like the wind best
When it comes back from racing the seas
And turns into air again, not in a hurry,
And behaves like a well-brought-up breeze.

While my sister was visiting us this winter our baby, Alberta, aged 3, became quite fond of her. One day her aunt was sitting by a window reading. Alberta propped a box under the window outside and stood on tiptoe gazing into the room, trying to attract her attention.

My sister continued to read until she was startled by a mournful little voice, "Here I's and s'e won't look!"

MRS. A. A.

My young son has a little girl playmate who invariably singles him out for her little attentions. While talking it over with me one day recently I told him to be nice to her, not rough and unkind. He stood musing a moment and then said, "Don't you think she is a bit young for me, mother?"

On my return from a trip I brought Edward, aged 4, a soap bubble pipe. That evening his daddy, while showing him how to use it, was enjoying it so much himself that Edward impatiently exclaimed, "Mother, next time you take a trip you'd better buy a pipe for daddy, too!" H. A. H.

HIGH CALLING

The Story of a Young University Professor and His Wife, Who Had to Choose Between His Love for His Work and Comfort for Their Children.

BY MAUDE RADFORD WARREN

She did her best to interest him, but she felt as if the evening had been blighted.

ILLUSTRATION BY LORENE LANE.

ON her way to the kitchen Marcia Gordon glanced about the living room. The children were all right. Junior was building a bridge with his toys; four year old Mollie was nursing a doll beside the big table; the baby was safe in his pen, riveted to his bottle. The lamps and other breakable articles had been pushed beyond the reach of little exploring hands. The fire screen was fastened in front of the hearth. Quite safe to slip away.

In the doorway she paused and looked back at the precious heads crowned with foamy curls. The children had her husband's fair hair and blue eyes; she was glad to have been the vessel to pass on his good looks to the world. If only the three would grow up to have his character, she thought; his fine ideals; his strict scrupulousness. Those were the qualities in him that had first attracted her, made her give up the vow not to follow her own mother's example and marry a college professor whose thinking, however high, would never be able to ameliorate the accompanying plain living. Marcia's eyes, as she thought of Gordon, were alight with devotion. Her face was not pretty, but it was arresting because it said that she was tranquil and tender.

She allowed herself the luxury of a moment's brooding pride over the children, and then she hurried to the stove. It was a bit after six. Walter would come in presently from his seminar, ravenous. She smiled as she got a long fork and prepared to release the steam from her pressure cooker. How thankful she was that she had learned this fashion of saving gas, and thus money: three things cooked for the price of one. Just the dinner Walter liked, too: roast beef, carrots, and rice pudding. The broth for Junior and Mary was heating, and perhaps they could have just a taste of meat. A salad was already on the table. Everything was all right, she thought happily, as she slowly released the steam.

The food was ready for the table when she heard the front door opening. Walter, but why wasn't he whistling? She ran to him and was enfolded in his arms, her nestling head not quite reaching his shoulder.

"The moment of the day," he murmured, as he bent to kiss her.

So it was for her, too; they were lovers still.

"Nothing happened—has it?" she asked, as he let her go.

He caught her back, smiling as he said: "Woe is me if ever I tried to deceive you. No, nothing to worry about. Tell you when the youngsters are in bed."

A FEW minutes later they were all about the table, the baby in his high chair, bubbling contentedly as his elders ate, the other children bending big intent eyes over their soup plates as they used their hands with careful, clumsy motions. They chattered, Junior about his adventures in school, while imaginative Mary made up still more wonderful adventures that were going to happen to her.

Afterwards Marcia put the baby in his crib, while Gordon read to the elder children until it was time for them to go to bed. Then Gordon helped Marcia with the dishes. When the two left the kitchen and were sitting before the hearth fire, the one extravagance they allowed themselves, she said, "And now, what?"

"It's really nothing. A letter from Uncle Max asking me once more to chuck all this and come in with him."

"That's a sign he's forgiven you, anyhow," Marcia said, her voice relieved. "I was afraid he was never going to speak to you again when you refused, the year after Mary was born."

"Your hand's all red," he said suddenly.

"Nothing," she returned. "I was just a bit awkward with the pressure cooker."

"There you are," he said slowly; "if I accept Uncle Max's offer and join him in his advertising business you need never look at a pressure cooker again. You'd have ease and the children would have advantages I can't give them now."

The Marcia of pre-Walter days expelled a hydra-headed wish: ease; leisure; the chance to take up her music again; to read; to buy all the books she wanted; to have pretty clothes; to own a car; to be able to travel; to have trained nurses for the children; to spend summers by the sea!

"Get thee behind me," Marcia murmured to that other self.

She took her husband's arm and led him to the living room window. A full moon silvered the campus. The sharpness of late autumn had stripped the trees, and their trunks and branches looked like black iron. To Gordon those arched trees were like cathedral aisles, and the gray buildings they surrounded were temples of learning and enlightenment, the background for his career of service.

"You don't want to give this up," Marcia said. "You don't want to stop helping these groping students——"

"It's my job to put out my hands to their groping, I know, but if I stay I might just sit on a platform and get rusted into routine work."

"You never would," she denied. "Let you be taken away from the work you love? Never in all my world! You want to teach English, not write advertising copy. We can afford to educate the children right here and, barring the climate in winter, this is a lovely environment for them. They'd stifle in New York City, and if we lived in the country you would wear yourself out commuting."

Gordon looked at her adoringly. "If there is another wife in the world like you," he said, "there is another perfectly happy man. The trouble is, dear, we have no margin. There always seems to be enough for rent and for food, but nothing else. Besides, we are not eligible for the Carnegie pension——"

"The slogan of the young instructor," Marcia said. "Well, but at the end of the year they will surely give you a raise. It is the logical time for your promotion. Besides, when the baby is older, I'm going to try to get something to do; you said I could. Then your summer teaching will help out. Perhaps something else supplementary will turn up."

"I should not be worn out commuting," Gordon said, "because Uncle Max suggests that we take a little house on Long Island next his place. In fact, he has bought it on the chance that I'll accept. That means I'd drive in with him every day. He'd start me at six thousand—till I learn the business. Other beginners get about sixty-five a week. Don't you see, dear, he's treating me as if I were his son. In the end I should be, practically."

"O, but, my darling," said Marcia, passionately, "you don't want to do it. Your heart is in your work here, and mine for you. I'd be wretched if you were not doing the work you like best. I'm in love with you, and your highest happiness is mine."

HER eyes were shining; her face, turned to him, was beautiful in its devotion, its self-forgetfulness.

"Whatever you do, you'd never turn back," Gordon said. "You'd never do any vain wishing. Uncle Max says he won't listen to any answer till the spring. He reminds me that two-thirds of the young faculty couples cannot live on their incomes, must do something outside. Well, he's right. When I keep putting in my time at summer teaching and tutoring; when I get sick of the endless faculty meetings where nothing is done; when I have committee work loaded heavily on me because I am one of the younger men, then I wonder where the time is coming for the research work which is also expected of me and that I want to do. I wonder whether I wouldn't be wiser to go into the advertising business, make enough money to retire, and then do what I want."

Marcia shook her head. "Too late, then. Uncle Max has taken you up on a high mountain and is showing you the wonders of the world."

"There is a big work here," Gordon said. "The students are just bewildered children. They don't understand the world. They wonder if there is a God. They are full of cockiness and humility, and emotion and questions. They want answers to their questions, and half the time they don't believe the answers or they are afraid to listen. They have no discipline of mind. They are reaching after infinite things."

"That's the answer," Marcia said. "We stay here."

His arm about her was eloquent. She thought, with a thrill of happy vanity, that her own work in the world was indispensable. Gordon had a brain far beyond her own in power and a far greater sense of public service. But without her encouragement, her understanding coöperation, he would not be giving to his students so generously, would not be so serene of spirit.

"I have no doubt I can find some supplementary work," Gordon said. "Ainslee mentioned this afternoon that John Hawley, one of the old graduates, who is head of a publishing business, is coming here to choose a man to edit a series of English classics and to write a text book. Ainslee says that Conklin or Parcher or I will be chosen, and that I am the logical choice."

Ainslee was the head of the English department. Further, he was attached to his young colleague. Marcia's eyes sparkled as she declared, "If Mr. Ainslee said that much it means that the ravens, via this man Hawley, will feed us."

If the necessary margin was to be won it must be done by some outside work, for they could not save a penny more out of their income. Gordon bought second hand clothing, student misfits and the like. Marcia made her own clothes and Mary's of remnants snatched from sales. They used the cheapest cuts of meat. Every spring Marcia preserved eggs in water-glass. She bought her groceries in the cash and carry houses. For all their care they had in the bank scarcely four hundred dollars. Yet their faith was so great that if it did not wholly cast out fear, at least it pushed fear into the background.

THE next morning when Marcia was running her electric washing machine, with the baby and Mary playing on the dry side of the laundry floor, she heard the doorbell. She ignored the summons; if it was a salesman, she did not want anything, and if it was a caller, she was too busy to see any one. The ring was repeated. Presently she heard the sound of high heels tapping down the outside steps and into the furnace room.

"O Marcia," trilled a rich contralto voice.

It was the voice of Mrs. Ainslee. Marcia gave an involuntary frown, which she changed into a smile as she came out into the furnace room.

"Forgive my costume," she said, noting Mrs. Ainslee's glance at her damp pink morning dress, "but I am laundress today."

"Forgive my searching for you," Mrs. Ainslee replied, "but as I rang twice without result I thought the bell must be out of order. Then I heard the rumble of the machine and here I am."

Mrs. Ainslee was middle aged, dark, pretty, plump, with a manner which held more than a touch of patronage. The daughter of one college president, sister of another, and wife of a professor not only prominent but rich, she had no doubt of her importance in university circles.

"I ran in on purpose to tell you that you must come to the meeting of the Quadrangle club today. You didn't attend a single meeting last year and you haven't begun with us this year."

The Quadrangle club, composed of the wives, mothers, sisters, and daughters of faculty members, had been one of Marcia's chief pleasures during the first two or three years of her married life. But as her family cares increased she had foregone attendance. She answered Mrs. Ainslee's reproachful look.

"You see, I have no one to leave the children with."

"My dear, you could get a student. And all work, you know——"

Get a student, Marcia thought; a dollar or a dollar and a quarter for the afternoon. Besides, she did not like leaving the children with a stranger.

"I don't know any student that the children are used to," she said slowly, "but perhaps I can ask Walter to look after them for this afternoon."

Mrs. Ainslee smiled brilliantly.

"Do, dear. I'll call for you so as to shorten Walter's nursery maid duties, and I'll chauff you home."

After Mrs. Ainslee went, Marcia continued her work abstractedly; it was too bad to ask Walter to give up one of his precious afternoons. Besides, it was a beautiful Indian summer day; she could have taken the children out for a picnic. Perhaps Walter could have joined them for part of the time. O, well, it could not be helped. When one is a junior member of a department, the wishes of the wife of the head are sometimes imperative. Also, Mrs Ainslee was right; she should not drop out of everything or she would have so much the less to give to Walter.

Shortly after two o'clock Marcia heard Mrs. Ainslee sounding her horn. The baby was asleep and the other two children were playing on the porch while Gordon corrected papers, a matter he said he could attend to with half his mind. Marcia wore a coat the same age as small Mary, but under it was a new and becoming dress. It was fun, after all, to be playing truant from her job.

Seated beside Mrs. Ainslee was a dark, sparkling young woman in a becoming hat. Alida Conklin, wife of the instructor who ranked just under Gordon. The Conklins had been married almost as long as the Gordons, but they had no children. Alida Conklin had once said to Marcia that she would not give hostages to fortune till the Conklin salary stood at thirty-five hundred a year. Seated in the back of the car as they sped towards the president's house, where the meeting was to be held, Marcia reflected that three fine children versus smart clothes and a perfect complexion were riches versus poverty.

As they entered the president's house it gave Marcia a pleasant thrill to hear the vibrant sound of mingled voices, to catch the perfume of flowers, to see a background of harmonious color. She enjoyed a sense of spaciousness as she descended the wide staircase and entered the living room. The president's wife shook hands with her cordially and then she was passed down a receiving line of women who scarcely knew her.

"An inconspicuous member of a hierarchy," she thought, unresentfully.

The president's wife came first, then the wives of deans, then the wives of head professors and of assistant professors. The rank and file were the wives of instructors whose husbands received not less than sixteen hundred and not more than twenty-three hundred a year. They looked like the rank and file, Marcia thought, because of their youth and their modest clothes. Here and there was a young woman beautifully dressed and with more assurance than the others. That meant that either she or her husband had independent means.

SOME one gripped Marcia's arm and she turned to look into the pretty, careworn face of Lois Parcher, wife of one of the instructors in Gordon's department. They scarcely ever met, but they liked each other.

"I'm glad to see you," Lois said. "I feel like a cat in a strange garret. Did Mrs. Ainslee rout you out?"

Marcia nodded. "She talked to me like a Dutch uncle," Lois continued; said or implied that if I never made an appearance it would tell against my husband professionally. What she didn't say was that we shouldn't have married, Ralph and I, on sixteen hundred a year. What I say is that either the university should pay us larger salaries or else no more should be expected of us than of a clerk and his wife. Why do we have to look like five or ten thousand dollars? Why can't we be frankly poor?"

Marcia understood that Lois felt ill at ease in her cheap dress and shabby hat. Her own experience was that there was very little real snobbishness in a university circle. The senior wives in a department always called upon the juniors. There was a community of interests, a sense of loyalty, a sense of belonging to a privileged group which seemed to Marcia to give sufficient social security.

Marcia sighed, and Lois said quickly, "There, don't let me spoil your lovely afternoon. What's wrong with me is that I have been hunting a job and have been turned down everywhere. I never have told you this, Marcia, but Ralph's education cost him three thousand dollars, and we are paying it back out of our two thousand a year. I'm sick of living in two rooms, and sick of eating substitute butter, and sick of having nothing to give to charity and of not being able to travel. So I've been trying to help out by finding something to do. My sense of failure isn't assisted by seeing all these well dressed women. There, I've got it out of my system, and I won't say another whining thing."

The meeting was called to order and the program began. Alida Conklin was offering a group of songs. Marcia listened to the lovely voice, her eyes straying through the French windows to the lawn, where asters and chrysanthemums made a brave tapestry of color. Beyond the flowers rose the elms she loved, defined against the gray campus buildings. As the music went on, the campus, the students, her own children, her husband's ideals, all became more than ever to Marcia part of a beautiful plan which she was to serve. Two lines came into her mind and chanted themselves with the music:

"Heaven doth with us as we with torches do—
Not light them for themselves."

They had the need to love and serve, she and her husband. That had entered them and shut out all else, including the far and fair horizons of the world.

The program ended. Prolonged applause greeted the smiling and triumphant Alida Conklin. Again rose the vibrant voice of the audience. The odor of coffee overbore the fragrance of the flowers. Refreshments banished Marcia's mood of spirituality.

Driving home, Mrs. Ainslee dropped Alida Conklin first. When they were alone she said to Marcia: "Your husband may have told you that John Hawley, an alumnus and a noted publisher, is staying with us next week. We want you and Walter to come to dinner Friday night to meet him. The Conklins are coming. I asked the Parchers, too, but Lois says Ralph has no evening clothes. As she made no suggestion of buying them, I could not press the invitation."

This dinner, of course, was Ainslee's way of giving Hawley the chance to choose the editor for the series of classics he was going to bring out.

"The Parchers," Mrs. Ainslee continued, "are no more a part of the university socially than are the janitors and their wives. To set aside fifty per cent of their income means robbing themselves and, in a way, the university."

"I wish we all had more money," sighed Marcia.

She was glad when they reached her little brown house on the edge of the campus. Mrs. Ainslee's remarks could not take away from her own serene mood, but they had introduced an alien note. It was good to open her battered front door and be greeted with cries of welcome; to see the baby in her husband's arms and feel the clutch of Mary's eager fingers.

Shortly before the Ainslee dinner, having pressed her one evening dress, Marcia opened the trunk in which Gordon's winter clothes were stored. She unfolded the moth bag which housed his dress suit and shook out the garments. Then she gasped in dismay, searching them frantically. They were moth riddled. Nothing whatever could be done to renovate them.

Marcia sat on the floor and cried. A new dress suit would probably cost thirty dollars, though something might be found among the student misfits. But thirty dollars from their small savings! It was an impossible amount to spend. Impulsively she rushed to the telephone. She would ask Mrs. Ainslee if evening dress were imperative. She would say, "I am desolated, but Walter simply cannot afford to spend thirty dollars for a dress suit."

No, Mrs. Ainslee would consider that a withdrawal from her invitation. She would also be put in the trying position of asking two guests to play second fiddle. Worse still, Gordon would lose his chance of meeting Hawley socially. Somehow a dress suit would have to be bought. Gordon would agree with her. He did not like the fact that dining out sometimes helped a man professionally, but he had to admit that everywhere social endeavor might have business value. Talking over a dinner table somehow always showed a man at his best.

THREE days later Marcia sat at the end of the beautifully appointed Ainslee table. Near the other end was her husband, on the left of Mrs. Ainslee and immediately opposite the guest of honor, Hawley. Marcia had swiftly appraised Hawley; a business man, sheer and simple, interested in his alma mater, as so many of the alumni were, not because it was an institution framed to bring out the best in a student, but because it had been the cradle of his young manhood. It meant to him carefree days, the memory of larks, and careless, sentimental episodes. He liked to come back and be looked up to by the current youth as a man who had succeeded.

He was apparently interested in Gordon, and also interested in Alida Conklin, who sat at his right. Conklin, Marcia reflected, would have his innings after dinner. Marcia was enjoying the soft lights, the gleaming silver and fine linen, the flowers, the delicate food, the gay talk and laughter. Gordon wore a second hand suit he had got for eighteen dollars; not so bad. Lois Parcher was staying with the children. Marcia felt as if she had not a care in the world. It was fun to pretend for one evening to be a person of leisure.

Her pleasure lasted until the salad course and then it changed to anxiety. For Gordon was off with Hawley on a subject he rarely discussed but which he felt keenly—the disadvantages to a university of intercollegiate athletics. This unpopular point of view his students forgave him because they liked him so tremendously. Marcia shared his belief, but not fanatically. Her heart misgave her as she saw Hawley's expression.

"Athletics are certainly overdone in our universities," she heard her husband saying. "The students who need them don't get them; they sit on the side lines and cheer at the football games. The athletic specialists are overtrained, have false ideas of what the values are in university education, and are pretty well let down when they go out into the world. And this evil is emphasized by intercollegiate athletics——"

THERE was more of it, which Hawley combated. Of course he would, Marcia thought. He was like any successful business man who was a college graduate, proud of the publicity a good football team brought his own university, perfectly aware that many students were attracted to a university because of its prominence in intercollegiate athletics. He would have the same point of view as the students themselves or as the average trustee. O, if only Walter would wake up, realize. She saw a malicious gleam in Alida Conklin's eyes.

Hawley was a man of the world. He changed the conversation as if they had been discussing a subject on which he had no particular convictions, and thereafter he devoted himself to Alida Conklin. As the women moved into the living room, Marcia saw Hawley changing his seat to one beside Conklin. When the men left the dining room, Hawley joined her and she did her best to interest him, but she felt as if the evening had been blighted.

On the way home she began some bright talk, but Gordon interrupted her.

"I'm afraid I shouldn't have said what I did to Hawley, but the matter was on my nerves today. Rawden's mother came to see me—you remember, he is the best runner we have. His heart is overstrained, and he has to leave the university, sacrificed on the altar of athletics. And Byers has to go to Saranac to fight off tuberculosis, just because he hasn't had enough exercise and fresh air. All the same, I shouldn't have been so tactless with Hawley."

"Well," said Marcia, carefully, "of course he'd not share your point of view. But that has nothing to do with his choice of a man to edit his text books——"

"Hasn't it, though," said Gordon, hopelessly. "He'll think that one instructor could do it about as well as another, and I suppose he is right. Conklin is just as adequate as I am."

"Ah, no——"

"It has always seemed to me that speaking the truth as one sees it should be helpful," Gordon said, "and that in a university of all places, speech should be free. But I should have remembered that Hawley, in our university is not a university person."

Marcia spoke as her heart bade her, comforting her man. But a little bitter voice spoke, too, in her mind, wearilessly. Surely, even an idealist should admit that a certain amount of deference was due common sense. The speaker must expect to take the consequences of his free speech. If a rich man with patronage to give had a strong prejudice, why not avoid the prejudice, if it meant winning just a margin that would be a bulwark against financial anxiety? As idealistic as uncompromising as Gordon ought to be endowed. In no other way would his wife and children be financially safe.

And why should being an idealist give a man the right to voice his visions without counting the cost? Was there not some egotism there? Then she drove away such thoughts as disloyal to Gordon. Nevertheless, she knew, as well as if Hawley had already stated it, that Conklin, and not her husband, would be given the editorship of the text books.

Before Christmas Gordon had apparently forgotten that lost chance. Through Lois Parcher, who had found a position on the local newspaper, he got in touch with a publisher who arranged to send him the manuscript of occasional novels for criticism. He could count upon perhaps ten a year at twenty-five dollars each. A good little club with which to buffet the wolf from the door, he said.

DURING the next few weeks Marcia wondered drearily how much buffeting that little club was expected to do. For one petty misfortune after another fell upon them, deepening a depression against which she almost ceased to struggle. A thief took the blankets which she had left airing on her back porch, and new ones had to be bought. The landlord raised the rent. Gordon's brother fell ill, and his wife wrote to ask if they could not lend some money; lending there meant giving. Marcia's teeth suddenly needed drastic attention.

So far as she could see, their additional income was already spent. Gordon was cheerful enough. He was unusually absorbed in his work, rejoicing in a number of graduate students who were excellent timber.

She felt as if she were failing her husband in admitting fear, but she could not control her feelings. The best she could do was show a serene face. Yet she wondered if he felt her sense of defeat. He said nothing, but sometimes he was unusually silent. Perhaps the long stretch of cold and cloudy weather affected them both. If just the sun would shine; if just the furnace would not eat so much coal; if just some especial bit of good luck would happen, Marcia told herself that she could see the winter through. But she wanted some sign, something to restore her dwindling faith in the future.

Christmas week brought back some of her old optimism. The children were so happy, so eager. Uncle Max had sent the very things that rejoiced them and, besides that, a substantial check for herself. She would be able to see to those troublesome teeth, and Walter could have the overcoat he needed. Happily, the two dressed the Christmas tree, and watched their little people through the joyous day.

In the middle of Christmas night Marcia was dreaming that she heard Alida Conklin singing Christmas carols. Suddenly the singing turned to discords, and then to keening. She woke to hear Junior crying. Hurrying into his room, she found him sitting up in bed, holding his ear.

"My ear, mother," he wailed. "Make it stop hurting."

Marcia tried the usual remedies, her heart sinking, for she saw an ominous swelling behind the ear. She lit the fire in the living room and for the rest of the night sat with Junior in her arms. The pain was intermittent but agonizing. Each time it stopped she hoped he would fall asleep, but he grew tense, waiting for it to come back. It wrung her heart to see his strained, expectant eyes. At dawn she called the doctor. He examined the ear and then gave the child codein.

With passionate relief Marcia saw the little body relax, the watching eyes glaze and close. Junior was free from pain, at least for the moment. But her relief was brief; the doctor said that he would call in an ear specialist, but that he was certain a mastoid operation was necessary. After he had gone, Marcia sat for a few minutes, dazed, unrealizing. Then grief and fear mastered her. But presently she heard the baby cooing in his crib, and Mary's soft calls to her.

Gordon would wake in a moment and would have to be told. There would be breakfast to get. The day must be lived through as if it were any other day.

Two hours later Gordon and Marcia, Junior in her arms, were being driven by the specialist to the hospital. An immediate operation was necessary. At least they would be spared long suspense. They were fortunate that the operating room was free; that the surgeon had a spare hour; that they could get a good nurse for the day and an equally good one for the night. Parcher was taking Gordon's lectures and Alida Conklin was staying with Mary and the baby.

The long night of Junior's pain had lessened Marcia's courage. She trembled as she entered the gray walls of hospital. She resented the indifference of the nurse at the receiving desk when she muttered to her assistant: "Another mastoid case. Wouldn't you think that people whose children have weak ears would take them out of this climate?"

She shrank from the curious looks of the convalescent patients who sat in the corridors in wheeled chairs, or walked slowly up and down in multi-colored bath robes. As she and Gordon went upstairs to the room where Junior was to be prepared for his operation, they passed a woman being taken on a stretcher from the operating room, leaden faced, reeking with ether. Next door to Junior's room a child shrieked as a doctor dressed his

by OCTAVUS ROY COHEN

The Story in Brief:

TERRY MOONEY, young reporter, "makes the front page" of the Morning Record with the story that Wylie Thornton, matinée idol, is to leave the local stock company and to take a train that night for New York and a Broadway engagement. Terry is engaged to Anice Garet, ingenue of the company. Unknown to the adoring public, Thornton is a drunkard and a wastrel. He has knocked down John Norris, real estate operator, as being ordered from the Norris home. He has, however, superficial attractions which have dazzled Doris Manning, an amateur member of the stock company, who is the daughter of Maj. Manning, industrial banker. He has persuaded Doris to elope with him, promising to marry her after divorcing his wife. Mrs. Thornton threatens to kill him to prevent the elopement. Norris and Maj. Manning go to the theater separately, the former to exact an apology, the latter with the hope of frightening Thornton off. Visiting the actor's dressing room with her fiancé, Carey Weldon, Doris finds Thornton shot to death and her father standing by. Manning enlists the aid of Jim Hanvey, detective. Chief Marty Gallagher is in charge of the investigation. The Record assigns Ken Johnston and Terry Mooney to cover the case. Mrs. Thornton is assaulted. She blames Lovely Holmes, prompter, saying he attacked her because she refused to indorse a $100,000 check made out to Thornton by Carey Weldon. Holmes makes a partial confession. Weldon is questioned.

INSTALLMENT XI.

The Murder Expert.

WELDON rose and looked down on the two detectives. His manner was apologetic and embarrassed but dignified, and both men were impressed with his sincerity.

"I knew that if Doris and Thornton were in love with each other, I was helpless. I also knew that if I were correct in believing that money was the thing which actuated Thornton—then the safest and sanest course to pursue with him was to outbid what Doris had to offer in a financial way. You see, gentlemen, this is an ugly thing to tell. Made public, Doris could never live it down. But I fancy that every man has at one time or another done something with the best intentions in the world which he would bitterly regret having brought to public notice. I hope you understand."

"I do," said Jim.

"And me," echoed Marty.

"Thank you. At any rate, I drew a check for one hundred thousand dollars to the order of Wylie Thornton and had it certified. That is the check. Four days before Thornton was killed I visited him. I talked to him as frankly as I am talking to you. I told him that it was my purpose to bid high because I cared for Doris and wished to save her from a grave mistake. I showed him the check and offered it to him under the express conditions that he was to leave the city at the end of the week without telling Doris where he was going, without attempting to take her with him, and with the distinct understanding that he was not to communicate with her later or answer any letters she might write. Nor was he to see her if she discovered where he was and elected to follow him.

"Thornton agreed instantly to my proposition. At that moment I was satisfied that I had done the right thing, because I felt that any man who could be bought off that way was certainly not the kind of a man for Doris Manning. It was my only weapon against Thornton, and it certainly seemed effective.

"At any rate, I left the interview feeling both caddish and happy. But you can imagine what I felt like when on Saturday evening — the evening Thornton was killed—I learned from Mrs. Manning that news of Thornton's intention and destination was plastered all over the front page of the Evening Record and that Doris was eloping with him."

He paused; then went on slowly. "I have always wondered, gentlemen, why the underworld attaches such great importance to the double-cross. That afternoon I learned my lesson. I think I even surprised the major by the violence of my reactions. I frankly lost control of myself. Here was this rat trying a bargain in words and ignoring it in fact. He was taking what I gave him and also planning to steal what he had been paid to let alone. Perhaps you can understand—perhaps not.

"It's clear as crystal," said Gallagher, "and I'm on the level when I say that."

"Thanks. And I'll say one more thing. The only reason I did not kill Thornton immediately was because—as I was—I retained just enough sanity to realize the scandal which would arise and in which Miss Manning would be involved."

"And so," asked Gallagher, "you did not kill him?"

"No."

"But even that night in his dressing room?"

"I did not kill Wylie Thornton."

"Suppose he had actually started on his train with Miss Manning . . . would you have killed him then?"

"I believe so."

"Aren't you sure?"

"Well, yes . . . I think I would. Because if they actually had started to elope, the only thing which had deterred me would have been removed. That was the fear of scandal. Yes, I am sure I would have killed him if he had actually started with her."

"Then you were in a murderous mood?"

"Unquestionably."

"What happened, Weldon—when you visited Thornton's dressing room right after you returned from your interview with Miss Manning?"

"I didn't go to his dressing room; I didn't see any other time, except when Miss Manning went with me and found her father there."

"You was backstage, though—didn't you?"

"Yes. I wanted to speak with Maj. Manning."

"But you didn't speak to him."

"I didn't see him."

Marty Gallagher shook his head slowly.

"I'm awful sorry, Weldon—but you'll have to consider yourself under arrest again, and this time you won't be let out on bond. I believe every word you told me about the check, but you've got to do a lot more arguing before you'll convince me that you didn't kill Thornton."

"Frankly, I think you're a pretty good scout, and I can sympathize with what you did. But my God! man—if you had told us right away that you killed Thornton and why—no jury in the world would have convicted you."

"That was impossible, Mr. Gallagher," replied Weldon, "because I didn't kill Wylie Thornton."

"You mean you're gonna stick to that story?"

Carey Weldon nodded.

"I must stick to it. It is the truth."

"Hmph!" grunted Gallagher. "I hope so. But I'll be honest with you—I can't believe it."

THE rearrest of Carey Weldon furnished the city with a fresh fund of gossip and served to revive interest in a story which had slipped from the front pages to brief mention inside.

Unfortunately for the reporters, neither Marty Gallagher nor Jim Hanvey showed any inclination to talk and when Max Ross, playing a lone hand, managed to get a few minutes alone with Carey Weldon, that young gentleman merely stated that he did not kill Wylie Thornton and had nothing whatever to add to the statements which had already been printed.

For three days the city editors of the Morning and Evening Record made the most of Weldon's arrest as news copy. But eventually public interest lagged and Ken Johnston was put back on his regular run and the entire Thornton case turned over to Terry Mooney until such time as something definite developed. This was told Jim Hanvey when that ponderous person joined Terry and Anice Garet one night after the performance. They visited an oyster palace and there, in a secluded booth, Anice made her appeal.

"Terry's handling this story alone now, Jim. It's his chance to do something in which nobody else can share the credit—and you're the man who can help him."

Hanvey smiled. "Gosh! Sister—I haven't forgotten my promise to give the boy friend a break."

"All right. Give it."

"But the time ain't ripe, Anice."

Her round, blue eyes turned full on him. "Surely you know more than you've told us."

"Maybe so. But I ain't sure about what I know. In fact, I might say that I don't even know it. I only think."

"What do you think?"

"That'd be tellin', wouldn't it?"

"Sure. That's what we want, isn't it, Terry?"

He pressed her hand affectionately.

"Jim won't throw us down, honey. I'm not afraid of that."

"No. But what you need is somebody to keep you moving Terry——"

"Yes," he grinned. "A good wife, for instance. One about twenty years old, blonde, pretty; preferably an actress——"

"He's talking now, sister," endorsed Jim.

"But not to me." She leaned forward earnestly. "All kidding aside, Jim . . . you will help us, won't you? Terry is handling this thing for both editions of the Record. Max Ross is still on the job for his sheet and he's out to get what he can——"

"He's welcome to what he can find out, Anice. I'd like to think he could learn something worthwhile."

"But suppose Ross scooped Terry on this?"

"Then," murmured Hanvey, "there'd be nothing for the lad to do but confine himself to being a successful playwright and a more successful husband. But honest—I ain't planning to let Max Ross put nothing over on him."

"And you won't tell us any hunches you have?"

"They ain't definite enough." Jim leaned back and looked into the bright, youthful faces opposite. "Listen, Anice—how well do you know your leading lady?"

"Lola Gresmer?"

"Yeh."

"Mighty well, I think."

"Ever meet her before you came here?"

"No. But when you've worked with a woman in stock for nearly six months, you get to be pretty intimate—and I can tell you that Lola is a peach."

"She wasn't crazy about Wylie Thornton, was she?"

"No. But then nobody in the company or crew was."

"Miss Gresmer downright hated him, didn't she?"

"Yes . . . and she had every right to. He was a good actor—no doubt about that—and he always crabbed her scenes. He tried every way in the world to queer her in this town, and he'd have succeeded, too, if all the other members of the company hadn't worked their heads off to make up for the damage he was doing."

Terry Mooney leaned forward.

"You've asked about Lola several times, Jim. Do you think she had anything to do with Thornton's death?"

"Gee, son—whatever gave you that impression?"

"I don't know—except that you seem awfully interested in her."

"I'm interested in any one who might have had a chance to kill Thornton—or any motive for doing it."

"Well, I think it's ridiculous to suspect Lola—don't you, Anice?"

"Of course. And I don't think Jim does."

Hanvey chuckled.

"Keen little trick, ain't you?"

"No. But I ain't entirely dumb, either."

ILLUSTRATION BY W. H. WISNER.

"I did not kill Wylie Thornton."

"I'll say you're not. If I was your husband, young lady, I'd never try to put nothing across on you."

Terry laughed.

"And if I was her husband, Jim—I wouldn't want to."

When they parted from Jim that night Anice slipped her hand in Terry's.

"Sweetheart," she said, "Jim Hanvey has a strong hunch on this case."

"What is it?" he asked.

"I don't know—and neither does anybody else. But those questions about Lola Gresmer were just stalls."

"I kind of thought so."

"I think he'll give you the story when it breaks, Terry; but if I were you I'd stick pretty close to him. Since Max Ross got so independent, you're in line for the tip-off—but you better be in the neighborhood when the time comes."

They were walking down a quiet, tree-lined street. The moonlight filtered through the interlocked boughs with an effect as of silver lace. Terry took a quick look around—then swept the girl into his arms and kissed her.

"Gee, honey," he said in a choky little voice—"gee! but you're regular."

NOR was Anice Garet the only person who suspected that Jim Hanvey had theories about the case that he was not discussing. Marty Gallagher imprisoned the fat detective in his office and demanded to know what was what.

"You've done a lot of talking about this case, Jim—and it always seems satisfactory until after you've gone and I begin thinking over what you've said. Then I find out you haven't said a doggone thing. Just words. Now I believe you know something that you haven't told. If so—what is it?"

"Honest, Marty, I don't know a thing."

"But you've got ideas?"

"Maybe so. But they ain't nothing but ideas."

"What are they?"

"I don't want to say. They're probably crazy."

"Don't you still think it might have been Lovely Holmes?"

"Don't quiz me, Marty."

"Carey Weldon?"

"Aw! Lay offa me, will you, Marty?" Jim dropped a friendly hand on the other man's shoulder. "Listen: I ain't no different from nobody else. I hate to make mistakes. I've got a wild hunch on this thing and I'm playing it. Strong, see? The chances are I'm cuckoo. But if it turns out to be hot—then when the time is ripe, you and me will spring it together. If I'm wrong, it's me who has pulled the bone. If I'm right, it's Mister Marty Gallagher who did the job."

"Like hell it is! If you can untangle this thing, Jim, it's your case. I'm not going to hog another man's glory."

"But I ain't hunting glory, Marty. Honest, I ain't. I just want to clear things up so I can get back to New York. The chief is raising thunder already because I've been away so long."

"Well," sighed Gallagher, "immediately couldn't be too soon for me. I'm just about fed up on the whole thing—every new twist puzzles me more, and that ain't no lie, either."

"I know it, Marty."

"Recently, Jim, I've been doing a lot of thinking about two people: Lovely Holmes and Carey Weldon. There's always the chance that Lovely did it. You know one of the slickest things a crook can do is to tell you ninety-nine per cent of the truth. When you check up on that and learn he shot straight, you give him credit for having told all the truth. That might be the case with Lovely. He's awful slick. And if it was Lovely Holmes, Jim, it would check with every other story—about Thornton being already dead when Manning and Norris were in there.

"The other person I've been wondering about is Weldon. I can't believe he did it, and yet it wouldn't be much trouble to convict him. There ain't but one thing to clear him and that is John Norris' statement that Thornton was already dead when Weldon was out riding with Doris Manning. There's always a chance, though, that he had been backstage before that, killed Thornton—and that was why he didn't want Doris to go busting into the man's dressing room. Knowing what she would find, he might have been scared that she would right away be mixed up in the murder case. You see, Jim, we know that Weldon went backstage once without being noticed. Then why couldn't he have gone twice?"

"He could have," agreed Hanvey. "But, golly, Marty—I sure hope it wasn't him."

"Why?"

"Because I was talking to Doris Manning yesterday. She's a mighty nice kid, Marty, and this thing has sort of made a woman out of her. It shocked her and scared her, and I've got an idea that she's beginning to see things straight. I know she's worried—and frightened—about her father and Weldon. And I was just thinking, Marty, if it wouldn't be great if them two could get together again after all this mess was cleared up."

"Yeh—after! But the thing that's worrying me, Jim Hanvey, is whether we're ever going to solve it."

Jim smiled broadly.

"Sure we will, Marty. We've got to."

"And that," declared Gallagher disgustedly, "is what I call a red hot reason."

. . . .

"There comes a time in the lives of men," remarked the city editor of the Evening Record sadly, "when he gets doggone sick and tired of printing every day a simple announcement that there are no further developments in the case."

The Sunday editor stared owlishly through horn rimmed glasses.

"The Thornton yarn, you mean?"

"Exactly . . . and the confounded thing has driven me nuts. It was the greatest local story that ever broke in this burg and we played it to a million. Then when it began to die, Mary Thornton got her throat massaged. It slithered off again, and they sloughed Carey Weldon for the second time. Now—it just is defunct, and the thing that makes me sorest is that they've never caught anybody."

The Sunday editor grinned.

"They've caught too many, if you want my honest opinion."

"And a lot of help that is to me. With this dumb bunch of cops here—My Gawd! what can a poor guy do? I can't drop the thing out of the paper—and I can't keep it going."

"Who's on it now?"

"Terry Mooney—the blonde kid over yonder."

"Cub?"

"Not exactly. Bright lad, and he's done good work on this. He's cut in the head over that little ingenue and thinks he's gonna make a good husband and playwright. I had Ken Johnston on it, but couldn't waste him any more. Believe me, Sandy—other folks have been getting murdered and divorced and I guess they've got a right to a little first page, too. But I know the minute I begin ignoring this Thornton yarn, it's going to bust loose again with a solution. So I ask you——"

The Sunday editor was thinking.

"You say Mooney is pretty good?"

"Clever kid. I was hoping he could break a smashing good story on this case . . . but he hasn't. Not except the regular run of news stuff. He and Jim Hanvey have been buddying around together——"

THE Sunday editor slammed his fist on the desk.

"I've got it!"

"What?"

"Bring Mooney over here. Lemme have him for a couple of days and both our problems will be solved."

"What you got in that bean of yours, Sandy?"

"Just this. You say yourself that the yarn ain't fit for the news columns any more—it's worn out. All right—there's still one whamming good Sunday feature in it. Mooney knows the story and the theater and the people. Let's turn him loose on a Sunday feature. Get it? 'Police Baffled by Thornton Case. Grim Mystery Not Yet Solved. Who Done the Foul Deed'—with pictures. Photo of Marty Gallagher. One of Jim Hanvey. Pics of Wylie Thornton, the dear departed, and of Kelly Wilson, the intrepid new leading man who nobly entices shekels into the box office by using the haunted dressing room. Good hunch there, too; 'The Haunted Dressing Room.' Then we'll get a pic of the room itself, and a diagram with X marking the spot.

"We'll give Mooney a by-line and turn him loose. We'll call him our murder expert. He'll do us a double page spread of the case; starting off with the finding of the body and tracing the thing right down to its present state of innocuous desuetude. He can interview the dicks and even this Hanvey bimbo. It won't be news, but by golly! it'll be a corking good Sunday feature. What say?"

The city editor sighed.

"Hop to it, Sandy. But remember, it ain't even a twice told tale. It's been written into the ground already."

"Yeh—maybe. But not with my guiding genius helping it along."

He yelled for Terry Mooney and that young gentleman sped across the office. And then, in his own graphic manner, Sandy explained to Terry exactly what was wanted.

"It's a big shot for you, kid—because you've got all the space you want. From this minute on you're an expert, see. You're gonna turn yourself inside out and make the old shine like new. Tell the dead public everything it already knows, but tell 'em in such a way that they won't know they know it. After you finish the story we'll stick in a couple of boxes—one will have a list of suspects. The other will have the clews. If we were a little yellow, we'd offer a prize for the person guessing who did it. Maybe second prize for the guy who would guess who would have done it if the real murderer hadn't. And say—how about getting an interview out of this Jim Hanvey? Get him to tell you just what he thinks."

The city editor gave vent to a large laugh.

"That's a novel idea, Sandy. I've been sic'ing Terry onto that bird ever since the story broke. From what Mooney tells me, Hanvey has a clam lashed to the mast when it come to locquaciousness." He whirled on Mooney. "And listen, son—remember that any time you can get Jim Hanvey to speak his piece, your story belongs on page one of the news section and not in the lousy Sunday magazine that this guy tries to edit."

"That's nothing to fight about, chief. All anybody can get out of Hanvey is 'Maybe.' Ask him if he thinks a certain person did it, and he says 'Perhaps he did and perhaps he didn't.'"

"How about Gallagher?"

"Marty would have had every suspect electrocuted in turn. He's Hanvey's opposite."

"Will he talk?"

"Talk? He talks too darn much. If we printed all the talking Marty has done, we'd have been in a dozen big libel suits."

"Hmm . . . Didn't you tell me that Jim Hanvey promised you a break on this yarn?"

"He did"

"Will he keep his word?"

"Sure he will—as soon as there's any break to give. I thing he likes me personally, and he's crazy about Miss Garet."

"What's she got to do with it?"

Terry blushed. "Whenever we get together—Hanvey and I—he makes me bring her along. Tonight, for instance, we're taking a cozy little dinner in his room at the hotel; Anice Gallagher, Hanvey and myself. Anice isn't in the show this week."

"Great!" broke in Sandy. "That'll give you a swell chance to yank a story out of him."

"Maybe . . . anyway, I'll try him and guarantee you some sort of a story."

AND at six-thirty Terry Mooney and Anice Garnet knocked on the door of Jim Hanvey's room. Inside they found the ponderous detective and his dynamic friend, Marty Gallagher. The two men were genuinely fond of the young couple . . . and during the time that the waiter was fixing a table for four Gallagher and Hanvey jollied them about love and marriage and playwriting and the future in general.

Anice was in high spirits. Her eyes twinkled like twin stars, a roguish little dimple played about the corner of her mouth and she rallied Jim Hanvey unmercifully—a procedure which appeared to delight him.

The meal was excellent, and when it was over Jim lighted an abominable black cheroot, Marty puffed at a reasonably respectable cigar and Terry and Anice contented themselves with cigarets. It was Terry who brought up the subject of the Thornton case.

"How good a memory have you got, Jim Hanvey?" he asked.

"O! pretty fair."

"Do you recall promising me early in this case that you'd give me a break?"

"Sort of."

"Well, now's your chance. I've been assigned to get an interview out of you—a story of your views and suspicions and ideas. A resumé of the whole Thornton mystery."

Marty Gallagher's laugh reverberated through the room.

"Fat chance you've got, Terry. This big baby never tells nothin' to nobody no time."

"Aw, now—Marty. You're doing me wrong."

"Am I? Let's see. I guess you're gonna give the kid that sort of a story for publication, eh?"

Jim blinked with maddening slowness.

"If you say so, Marty. Shall I?"

Gallagher's feet came down flat on the floor, and his eyes bored into Hanvey's expressionless face.

"Do you mean to tell me that you're ready to talk definitely for publication?"

"Sure . . . if you want me to."

"Great suffering tomatoes! Go to it, Jim! It'll be a relief to hear you make one positive statement—no matter how foolish it is."

HIGH CALLING - - - By Maude Radford Warren

burns. Junior, still drowsy from the codein, whimpered in sympathy.

"I could have got a bed in a ward," Gordon said, "but then we could not have been with him so much, and his rest would have been disturbed by the other patients. So I took this two-bed room, hoping no one else would move in before we get him home."

"Of course we could not have him in a ward," Marcia said. "It won't be long before we have him back, safe."

A NURSE came to shave away the foamy curls behind Junior's ear. He screamed as the razor touched the swollen flesh above the mastoid bones, and Marcia cried, "Can't that be done when he is under the ether?"

"The shorter the time they are under the ether, the quicker they get well," the nurse returned placidly.

Marcia quivered and Gordon clenched his hands as Junior's screams continued, sinking at last into pitiable wailing. Another nurse came, then, and gave him an injection of morphine. Presently his crying stopped and he fixed his parents with large, staring eyes, saying, "I want to see you as long as I can see anything."

An old orderly with a benign face slid a stretcher into the room and gently rolled Junior upon it.

"Come on for a little ride, son," he said, "and the next thing you know you'll be well."

Marcia and Gordon walked beside the stretcher, through the corridor and into the elevator. As they rose to the operating room they could hear the light shrill giggle of a nurse. They stepped out into a gleaming tiled room. A white shrouded doctor received the stretcher, said a few reassuring words, and sent them down stairs. With fixed eyes and blank faces they went back into Junior's room. Marcia began a brave sentence, but Gordon stopped her.

"Don't try to cheer me up, darling," he said. "Talk, if you want to, but say the multiplication tables. Something we won't have to put our brains on. I know you'll fail when we come to thirteen times thirteen."

Together they said the tables, but all the time Marcia's thoughts were in the white room upstairs. Had Junior been afraid to be alone with the doctors? Had he dreaded the ether? Suppose the surgeon's hand slipped? She thought of hororrs, and gripped her husband's arm.

"He'll get through," Gordon said, "but that nurse at the desk was right. This is a terrible climate for mastoid."

If he did get through, if only he did, then nothing else mattered. Marcia berated herself that she had been so depressed all autumn. Perhaps her fear, her diminished faith had invited misfortune. What did it matter that she had to work hard; that she could not have the things other women had? She had love; and if only she could keep her beloved four in the same world with her, she asked for nothing else.

The long hour was over at last and Junior was wheeled back again into his room, inert, gray faced, breathing noisily, his head bandaged. The surgeon came, too, telling them that the operation had gone splendidly. He prophesied that Junior would make a quick recovery. The day nurse entered, crisp and white clad and reassuring. Junior might not come wholly out of the ether for two hours, she told them. Mrs. Gordon should go home and try to sleep.

There were the other children to think of, and Alida Conklin did not know much about babies. Junior would be sufficiently content if his father were with him when he woke. Marcia went home, walking slowly through the snow, weary but thankful. It would be all right; they would manage. At the end of three days the nurses could be dismissed; she would spend the nights at the hospital taking care of Junior, and Gordon would be there during the days as much as he could.

The week went dragingly by. Junior suffered intensely during the dressings. His recovery was not going so smoothly as the surgeon had anticipated. Often during the nights the child was feverish, and Marcia would hold him in her arms, singing softly, praying for calm and strength. One morning she went home thoroughly exhausted. Gordon insisted on calling in a woman to look after the children and the housekeeping for the day. Yielding, she went to bed and fell into a long sleep. When she woke, late at night, Gordon told her that Junior had had another operation and that the surgeon had sent to a neighboring city for a night nurse who was a specialist in mastoid cases.

It was four days before Marcia was able to go to the hospital to see Junior. It was three more days before the surgeon allowed the nurses to be dismissed. But at the end of that time she could see that the child was really mending. It was two weeks more, however, before he was home again, pale and important in the eyes of the awe-struck Mary.

THE night of Junior's return, when the children were in bed, the Gordons sat before their hearth. A high wind was rattling the shutters and whirling snow across the window panes. They were silent for a long time. Then Gordon said, "The doctor thinks Junior should have a couple of weeks at Atlantic City. I borrowed some money at the bank today."

"Perhaps—perhaps he will get well as quickly without sea air," said Marcia falteringly. "The cost—just what we have paid out in hospital and nurses' bills, must have taken all we had in the bank. Then there are the doctor and the surgeon and the anesthetist——"

"There is no reason why you should not go and take all three children. I wrote Uncle Max a week ago that I'd join him."

Marcia broke into tears, murmuring, "O, your work here, your beloved work!"

But even as she spoke she felt an overwhelming relief. Never to have to worry about money again! Always to have the best for the children!

"Uncle Max has sent the contract," Gordon said. "It is a generous one."

"Have you signed it?" Marcia asked.

"Not yet."

He had not signed yet? Then he hoped that there might yet be a turning back. If only her faith were strong enough, he could be persuaded to go on with work that brought out his best.

"O, it's not fair to make me choose," she thought passionately.

But she knew that she had chosen. In the one scale, light and leading for a generation of unknown students; in the other, the health and welfare of her own children. How could one tell how much good Gordon would do to casual students? But there was no doubt about the intensive work he could do for his own family.

"I'm a coward," she whispered. "Perhaps it is because I am going to have a baby."

The shelter of his arms, then. After a time he said, "There can be only the one choice. It is not right that the coming of a child should be feared, not welcomed."

"We'll live simply," she said, "and save greatly. When we have enough capital, you can go back to teaching."

"I doubt if there can be any turning back, but one day I may be able to help some man to realize his dream; some young man with my own ideals of teaching."

"Junior, perhaps." Then she wept. "O, my darling, have I failed you?"

As he drew her close he wondered suddenly if he had not failed her in expecting her to live out his dream. When at last he spoke it was almost joyously.

"Somehow, I don't any longer feel it as a sacrifice—going to this new work. We'll be able to educate thoroughly our own four children for work in the world. That's more worth while than——"

She clung to him desperately. "Oh, you're not just saying it?"

"The test of a man after all," he said slowly, "lies in the zest and courage with which he meets what have to be his realities."

Then Marcia relaxed in his arms, convinced, relieved. For she knew that her great fear was baseless; nothing had gone out of their happiness.

A Gun Widow's Story of Life in Gangland

Florence Murphy Oberta's Side of the Case.

In the feverish swirl of the business of racketeering, with its frequent punctuations of murder, woman's part in the turmoil has been quite overshadowed by the bizarre activities of the "boys" themselves. Genevieve Forbes Herrick, recently commissioned by The Tribune to ascertain the status of femininity in gangland, has made a study of and drawn startling conclusions about this phase of hoodlumism. In a fascinating story of the life of Florence Diggs Murphy Oberta, twice widowed by gangland reason, the writer reveals something of the women's place in that tragic, obscure world. The first episode of the narrative is presented herewith; the second (though not necessarily the concluding) chapter will be published next Sunday.

By Genevieve Forbes Herrick.

IN one proud sentence the Widow Murphy Oberta, queen to a pair of Chicago's most enterprising gangster kings, summed up her luxurious matrimonial experience this wise:

"I've had more love and better husbands than most women."

And bowed her head in philosophic grief as a florist's boy heaped orchids on the expensive casket of her late, and second, husband.

Wife, widow, bride, and widow again. All between the June night in 1923 when "Big Tim" Murphy dropped to the grass in front of his home, finished by an anonymous bullet, and the March night in 1930 when "Dingbat" Oberta sprawled across the front seat of his automobile, finished by a volley of anonymous bullets and some nasty blows on the head, possibly with an ax.

Connoisseur of Coffins.

Her men lived vigorously; died furiously; were buried glamorously. Love, in the span of twenty short months, made her a connoisseur of coffins. Not once, but twice, has she led a magnificent funeral procession out to Holy Sepulchre cemetery. Not once, but twice, has she counted the thousands that thronged past the bier of a murdered spouse. Twice has she wept vengeance.

So Florence Diggs Murphy Oberta, dearly beloved wife of:

1. Timothy D. Murphy, wise-cracking Irish labor lord;
2. John L. Oberta, politically-minded Polish beer lord; is no longer in the amateur class. She has professional standing.

Shot, as it were, to fame, this largely handsome woman, not much over thirty, has achieved a career that excels even the love life of Queen Anne of Brittany, consort to a series of fifteenth century kings. But where Anne married for diplomacy, Florence wed for love. Anne's royal husbands were weak-kneed gentlemen; Florence's gangster sovereigns were forceful gents. Anne's partners died commonplace deaths; Florence's men went to their graves in metallic caskets.

The Question of Loyalty.

Anne's reflections are obscured in the dimness of history books. Florence's philosophies are clinical material for this tumultuous generation. Even the more academic of our contemporaries are speculating, for instance, on this question: If loyalty of a woman to her man is a precious feminine trait, is loyalty of one woman to two men a more precious trait? Or does the loyalty, by being duplicated, become halved?

More practically, one wonders if a woman might not be tempted to say to her second gangster husband: "That's not the way my first gangster would have talked to the cops."

Let us look at some of the facts.

Florence, like Peggy Joyce, comes from a Virginia family; the Diggs family. When she was a golden haired child, and she must have been extremely pretty, they moved to Washington. At the age of sixteen she went to work in the office of Representative William J. Carey of Milwaukee. That was during the 62d congress, 1911-1913.

Presently she met the tall, black haired Irishman of the Murphy family back of the yards in Chicago, whom Congressman James T. ["Pipes"] McDermott of the same neighborhood had brought down to the nation's capital.

Trusted with "Dough."

"Tim was sergeant at arms," his widow recalls with loyalty. "He sat in a big armchair and guarded the senators' pay. Now, if Uncle Sam trusted Tim with all that dough it's a cinch he'd never steal a dime, naturally."

They were married in June, 1913. She was nearly eighteen. Tim was twenty-seven. Returning to Chicago the bridegroom still maintained an interest in government which was to culminate years later in the government sending him to a federal penitentiary for his interest in some of their most valuable mail bags. But now, in 1913, he was the feudal lord of the middle ages, home from border warfare, with a taste of power, and an eagerness to extend that power.

So he ran for the state legislature on the slogan, "Vote for Tim Murphy; he's a cousin of mine."

Most of the yards the Fourth district laughed and voted him down to Springfield.

"That's always the way it was," the former Mrs. Tim recalls. "Always makin' a smart crack. Why, he could even get the cops to laughin'."

She has always been proud, too, of his chivalry, she explains.

"He'd never let any hoodlums come around the house, not Tim."

Little Acts of Gallantry.

Indeed, while he was at Springfield, he grew vexed with one of his

GOOD MORNING!

"Sarah WITHOUT Son" would state the case more truly, for Sarah has her son in the first and last parts of the picture, but the reels in between are consumed with the losing of her son and her longings and searchings for the boy stolen from her by his father when he was a baby. [When the boy was a baby.]

You will find this an intensely interesting picture with marked story value. It has been ably presented by Dorothy Arzner, Hollywood's only woman director, who has preserved continuity in a narrative that, of necessity, must make long jumps as to time and place in a short space of time. The picture could easily have been a jerky and garrulous affair. It is neither.

The acting throughout is splendid, with Ruth Chatterton giving a rather astonishingly clever portrayal of Sarah; the late Fuller Mellish Jr. scoring as her loafer husband; Philippe de Lacy as Bobby, again proving himself one of the greatest of the child actors; Fredric March being extremely human as a lawyer interested in both sides of a most unusual case, and Gilbert Emery [that English actor—who was born in Ohio] and Doris Lloyd doing convincing work in rôles that will not win much sympathy from audiences.

Natural Dialogue Is Asset.

So much for the cast. Scenery, such as there is, is fine. Sets and costumes are in excellent taste. Dialogue is natural and to the point and is excellently delivered. [Zoe Akins adapted Timothy Shea's novel for screen use.] There are times, it must be said, when you realize how hard Miss Chatterton is working to get over her German dialect, and moments when the German has a Swedish cast, but on the whole "Sarah" as portrayed is a praiseworthy achievement.

Now, for a tip or two regarding the story:

Sarah is discovered as an ignorant but ambitious German girl who does a dancing turn at a cheap New York variety house with a part time truck driver whom she later marries.

Come a baby—and poverty. Jim Gray, you see, prefers leisure to labor and lives up to his preference. Sarah and he have many quarrels and after one of these Jim goes out and joins the marines. He comes home drunk and spirits the baby away to a certain rich man, whose marriage has been childless and who has made known the longing of himself and wife for a little one. [The baby in this picture is adorable!]

Her husband and child gone, Sarah's

Music, Speeches Fill Week for Teacher Guests

Supervisors' Conference Starts Tomorrow.

By Edward Moore.

MUSIC supervisors from all parts of the country will be meeting mornings, afternoons, and evenings this week at the Stevens hotel and immediate vicinity, and beginning at 9:30 tomorrow morning the second national biennial conference will be in full swing. It would serve no greatly useful purpose to indicate all the speechmakers in this column, since they are all printed in the organization's bulletin, but there will be considerable music outside of the customary list of concerts.

This afternoon at 4 o'clock there will be a concert by the University of Chicago choir, Mack Evans, director, in the university chapel. This evening at 8:30 the Paulist choristers of Chicago will sing under the direction of Father O'Malley in the ballroom of the Stevens hotel.

The same ballroom will house a program of the Northwestern University Glee clubs directed by Glenn Bainum tomorrow afternoon at 2:30. In the evening there will be a band demonstration in the Auditorium. Dr. Victor L. F. Rebmann will be the chairman, and a special communication tells of the presence of Lieut. Com. John Philip Sousa. He will direct a band of 300 players comprising the high school bands of Senn, Hammond, and Emerson of Gary.

Damrosch Will Conduct

Tuesday's announcements tell of the National High school orchestra directed by Walter Damrosch in the afternoon, to be followed by the a cappella choir of Flint High school directed by Jacob Evanson. In the evening the All-Chicago High school chorus and All-Chicago High school orchestra will appear on the stage of the Auditorium. Dr. J. Lewis Browne and Oscar W. Anderson will be the conductors.

Wednesday afternoon calls for a special concert by the Chicago Symphony orchestra directed by Frederick Stock at Orchestra hall. In the evening the National High school orchestra will play at the Auditorium. Henry Hadley and Joseph E. Maddy will be the conductors and John Erskine will be the piano soloist. This concert will be repeated on Thursday night with the single exception that Guy Maier will be the soloist. He will play the Liszt Concerto in E flat.

During the morning and afternoon of Thursday there will be a considerable quantity of chorus singing from Chicago schools of various grades. Some of it will go into the more specialized branches of sight singing, ear training, harmony demonstration, and the like.

Friday's list includes more public school music. In addition, Catherine Wade-Smith, Donald McGill, and Sanford Schlussel, who have been giving a series of concerts in the east, will be heard in the afternoon, and in the evening the National High school chorus will appear at the Auditorium. Here, again, there will be two conductors, Hollis Dann and Frederick Alexander, the latter coming as guest conductor.

There will be plenty going on, and there is reason to anticipate some pleasant incidents.

Music Teacher Expresses Opinion.

This department was somewhat sternly called to account by "Music Teacher" for having said a week ago that an important part of musical development, namely, an outlet for talented musicians, was not being considered at much length by the conference. "Music Teacher" holds that she and other music teachers in the school are engaged to teach music in the schools and not to find jobs for graduates, which is an unassailably correct point of view.

But she adds: "Even so, the question seems especially superfluous in the case of music, when one thinks of the new orchestras springing up all over the country, the increased interest in choral singing, and American opera and composition, to say nothing of the increased demands for highly trained music instructors in the public schools." With all but the last

Public Demands Something New in Film Plots

Wearies of Murders, Jazz, Music Comedies.

By Tom Pettey.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

NEW YORK, March 22.—[Special.]—The moon is right for something new in the way of picture plots. It may be worked out by crossing grand opera with the old fashioned love, honor, and obey opuses of the silent past, or it may be that the talking screen is going to develop a vehicle all its own. Which ever way the young idea shoots, it had better begin shooting with the spring, for a film has to do something more than talk, sing, and exhibit itself in rainbow colors these days to pack them in on Broadway.

The era of the murder mystery drama is past; the underworld has been explored to its last night club, college life as a film topic has been razzed off the screen; the circus atmosphere is becoming tainted; the up in the air epics have reached a point where they cost more than they are worth; the girlie music shows with half pint plots are skating on thin ice, and the all colored comic opera "masterpieces" have become so numerous they are pushing one another overboard.

Hot Dogs and Tombs Feature Two New Plays

Three Dead Men Arise to Talk of Loves.

By Burns Mantle.

NEW YORK, March 22.—[Special Correspondence.]—He walked into the elevator with me and kept his eye on me during the journey down. I wondered at this. It was probably a smudge on my nose, I thought, or he might be an abused actress' brother—or even an injured husband. I fidgeted under his fixed stare. There did not seem to be anything I could do about it at the moment.

When the elevator stopped we stepped out together and then he spoke.

"My wife," he began.

I tried to remember what it was Harry Walsh, the box fighter, told me to do with the right, and then with the left, if trouble came suddenly. Something told me I should at least have more room in which to move about while making up my mind. I edged out into the open hallway.

"My wife," he repeated, fixing me with an eye. "My wife and I saw 'The Last Mile' and liked it."

"Yes?"

"Then we saw 'The Criminal Code.' We liked that, too."

"Yes?"

"Yes. Then we saw 'Berkeley Square'—and, listen, if I could 'a' found a gun I'd 'a' shot you."

From which I gathered that I had some time linked the three plays in a general list of first class entertainment and that he did not agree with me.

I tried a little feebly to explain that there is a difference between the tragic and the fantastic drama, but he had said his say and was little interested.

Robertson's Drama Is Sordid.

It would be similarly difficult, I feel, to explain to Willard Robertson, an actor who has written a play called "This Man's Town," which is the account of one New Year's eve spent in and around a lunch wagon, just why his play, which is quite as artfully photographic, is not just as effectively dramatic and just as good entertainment as, say, "Street Scene." But it is not. Doesn't tell as interesting nor as skillfully sustained a story.

"This Man's Town" is filled with detail. The lunch, or dog wagon, in which it is mainly set, is complete from cash register to coffee urns, gas range, frying hamburger, hot dog roaster and the adventuring cockroach.

The people who patronize it, the smells that come from it, the chief cook and dishwasher who run it are true to everything we know about dog wagons and a lot we believe. But as drama it is no more than a series of sordid pictures, and when sordid pictures are not vitalized by the lift and thrill of absorbing drama they are just as uninteresting in the theater as out of it.

To the dog wagon, come to eat or to chat with the waiter-cook, are hard boiled and sentimental ladies of the streets and the men who buy them; pickpockets, dope peddlers, police, plain clothes men, night life habitues and, as Charlie Butterworth says, sons of habitués.

Busy with Guns and Knife.

One detective is shot down by machine gunmen outside the door of this Ritz diner. Another, getting the scent of the murderer, is stabbed in the back. Finally the proprietor of the wagon, an Italian dope peddler, is killed by a boy he had sent to prison. Three murders and no particular thrill or interest in any of them.

A sentimental lady of the streets gets her mother over long distance and begs for an invitation to come home. Being told by mamma that she is a bum, and goes on being a bum. A pickpocket, caught with the bills he has filched from a gambler, has his wrist deliberately broken in punishment.

The audience shivers in horror at

Get Ready for Mei Lan-fang, Pride of China

Marvel of Oriental Stage Brings Quaint Plays.

By Charles Collins.

NOW is the time for playgoers and dramatic critics to begin to read up on the Chinese drama. For Mei Lan-fang is coming to add a dash of oriental color to the Lenten grayness of the theatrical schedule. He will begin a week's engagement at the Princess theater April 6.

Here is something new to whet the jaded appetite of the amusement seeker. Here is the glamour of the far east, the thrill of the exotic, the enchantment of Cathay. Here, after the bread and butter fare of the stage season, are the Chinese water chestnuts, delicate of taste and rich with artistic pepsin.

And if you should ask, "Who is Mei Lan-fang?" you will be answered with eloquence and enthusiasm. A few years ago only the Sinologists knew him. Last season every American who Marco-Poloed to Hongkong or Shanghai learned his name. Three weeks ago Broadway discovered him, with a great outburst of laudatory broadsides in the Manhattan press. Mei Lan-fang is the latest fashion of the American stage. For the moment he represents the crest of the wave. Next year, perhaps, because of his brief influence, the revues will be decidedly oriental of atmosphere.

He is the John Barrymore and the Douglas Fairbanks of the Chinese drama; also the Julian Eltinge. He represents, to two hundred million Chinamen (and they can't be wrong) the perfection of an ancient and elaborate art. There probably never was, anywhere in the world, an actor who held such a wide and unchallenged sway over his audiences. His income from the practice of his profession runs to $750,000 a year—a fact that will startle the camera idolaters of Hollywood.

He Plays Heroines!

This visit to the United States (his first excursion outside of the orient) is endowed by the Chinese institute, which administers the remitted funds of the boxer rebellion indemnity. He comes as an ambassador of his art, to express, for whatever educational value it may have, the soul of his people in stagecraft.

He is young to carry such a responsibility; he is about 30. But most of his life has been spent on the Chinese stage, and ever since his adolescence the entire nation seems to have held him in fantastic adoration. To caress a fine piece of jade and to watch Mei Lan-fang curve his delicate fingers is the Chinese idea of ecstasy.

His line is female impersonation. He plays the heroines of the Chinese classics in tragedy and comedy; and since the oriental stage deals in symbols rather than realism, his relation to the American idea of female impersonators is like that of a Chinese painting on silk to a billboard lithograph. If he should happen to see Lynne Overman as the mock-chaperon of "She's No Lady" while he is here, he will probably be stricken with a severe attack of the artistic horrors.

Mei Lan-fang will bring a repertory of short plays and scenes from longer works, twenty members of his tong of troopers, and a Chinese orchestra somewhat subdued, in its diabolical choirs, so as not to offend the American ear. The Chinese drama itself is a long story, full of technical words; but its general style may be suggested by the fact that an actor carrying a whip is supposed to be riding horseback, and a cloth arch held up by two bored stage hands means an impregnable stone wall. Any playgoer who remembers "The Yellow Jacket" knows the Chinese drama well enough to enjoy what Mei Lan-fang has to offer.

His name is a title of honor in the Chinese theater; and it means "foremost of the pear orchard"—or as we would say, "the world's greatest actor." Like everything else in China it is sublime with age; it dates back to the reign of the Emperor Ming Huang, of the T'ang dynasty—and, of course, you know how long ago that was.

"Toyland" Traditions.

This theatrical season, what with the revivals and resurrections and farewell tours, has become a frightful strain on the memory. The gossip of playgoers runs to a refrain of "Do you remember when——?"; and those who indulged in the Victorian habit of keeping scrapbooks of their old theater programs now have an advantage over the modernists.

About tonight's revival of "Babes in Toyland" at the Majestic, the recollections of old timers are decidedly vague. The bevy of charming girls who played in this Victor Herbert piece were ephemeral creatures, and it would take a vast amount of research to find out what has become of them. "Toyland," born here, was a bright spot on the Chicago theatrical landscape for many months of the year 1903. It was a children's operetta for grown-ups and it contained a catchy little schoolroom song called "I Can't Do That Sum." No doubt a tide of other memories will come flooding back at tonight's performance.

There is, of course, the story that Prince Henry of Prussia, then touring the country as an emissary of Hohenzollern good will, drank champagne out of the slipper of its prettiest soubrette. That incident has passed into American folk-lore and it used to crop up occasionally during the great war as an illustration of the decadent habits of the German imperial house.

But now, with this revival of "Toyland," the truth can be told. Prince Henry never drank champagne or anything else out of a babe's slipper. The yarn was invented by the press agent of the Grand Opera house, now an eminent dramatic critic in New York. Since he contributed to the fall of a phrase of this sentence, this department has not yet been convinced. The question does not seem entirely superfluous.

Supervisors' Conference Starts Tomorrow.

By Edward Moore.

Joseph N. Weber, president of the American Federation of Musicians, is to speak at the conference Tuesday morning on "The Present and Future of Music Performance as a Vocation." What he is going to say cannot at present be predicted, but for the last several months full page advertisements have been appearing in various magazines pleading eloquently in behalf of the Federation of Musicians for man-made music instead of the canned variety.

As for new orchestras springing up all over the country, it is to be feared that the springing period has pretty well passed. According to the most available information at hand, just one sprang up during the last year. It was in Milwaukee and would seem to have a hopeful chance of success.

As for increased interest in choral singing, one hears few pæans of rejoicing from the soloists who used to take part in such proceedings, and as for increased interest in American opera and composition, one is inclined to think that most opera directors and symphony conductors would probably indulge in some hearty, if rather sardonic, laughter if confronted with the question. Those who have looked at the subject will know how many times the Chicago Opera company during its two decades of life has tried to put on American operas, and how enthusiastically the American public has always stayed away from the performances.

Public Is to Blame.

There need be no attempt to answer the "implications" spoken of in "Music Teacher's" letter, because there were no implications. But unconsciously she may have afforded a key to the problem. The whole trouble with American music is the American public. The American public does not in the least care about American music or American musicians. If anything, it prefers the foreign variety. Until it can come to give its musicians some small fraction of the regard that it pays to its baseball players, its music is going to continue to be a poor relation. Just now it gives regard only to its popular music composers, and these it rewards enormously. That is why American popular music is the best popular music in the world.

So it may be that "Music Teacher" and her companions in the profession will be able to change the public of the coming generation by giving them enough interest in the theory and practice of music in the schools to endure through their lives. Enormous strides in that direction have been made during the last ten years. They may have their influence in the years to come. It is an interesting possibility. At least, it is the only theory that occurs at present.

Excelent Aid to Music Study.

In the seventh and most recent edition of the Victor publication, "What We Hear in Music," by Anne Shaw Faulkner (Oberndorfer), the subject of musical education by the use of records would seem to be brought more nearly down to date than has been done by any other available book.

It is not surprising that it should have been taken up by many schools throughout the country, for it contains an enormous amount of information, analytical, historical, and descriptive, in small compass, and each point with a reference to its illustrative record. Four main subjects, learning to listen and national music, the history of music, the orchestra and instrumental music, the opera and oratorio, are subdivided into thirty-six lessons each, all going into as much detail as the case would seem to demand.

If Russian music is the subject, there are three chapters, one on early Russian composers, one on Tschaikowsky, the last on Russian composers of today, with musical illustrations by famous soloists and famous orchestras. If the orchestra is to be studied, individual instruments are described and presented singly and in combinations, to be followed by the development of instrumental forms, and these by the development of schools of composers, national, ancient, and modern.

These cases are taken at random. There are many others. Mrs. Oberndorfer has done both a painstaking job and an excellent job. One feels that, given average intelligence and liking for music, the user of this book would come through it with a rather more complete knowledge of what music is about than would be gained by seasons of concert going.

Music Notes.

Something new in the way of concerts will be heard at the Eighth Street theater this afternoon. It is a program given by the North Side Continuation schools. Some 200 working boys and girls are uniting in a choral concert with an orchestra of twenty-five. They attend school one day a week and have been doing their musical practice in the evenings. Four choral numbers, including a new cantata, "Spring Cometh," by Kountz, will be presented, and the tenor soloist, Angelo Raffaelli, will sing arias from "Martha," and "Rigoletto." Mary G. Lusson is the musical director.

Serge Prokofieff, who appeared a short time ago with the Chicago Symphony orchestra, will be heard in recital at Orchestra hall tomorrow night. Together with his wife, Lina Llubera, soprano, who will make her first Chicago appearance at that time, he will be presented by the Chicago branch of the American Society for Cultural Relations with Russia (U. S. S. R.). The program will include piano and song compositions by Moussorgsky, Malskovsky, Stravinsky, and Prokofieff.

Percy Grainger, who was to have given a piano recital at Orchestra hall Feb. 17 and was forced to postpone it because of a throat infection, will fill his engagement at the same hall on Monday, April 21. It is not held whether he plans the same program announced for the former date.

WITH NOVELTIES

MARIE SIDENIUS ZENDT.

Not content with the conventional form of song recital, Mrs. Zendt has called for the assistance of the Barthel Wood Wind quintet, and this organization will appear with her in her program at the Playhouse this afternoon. Needless to say, with such an unusual combination there will be unusual and seldom heard music, both from the organization and Mrs. Zendt herself.

Films Approach Status of Real Art—Hammerstein

By Rosalind Shaffer.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

HOLLYWOOD, Cal., March 22.—[Special.]—Oscar Hammerstein, author of seven musical plays being used for the talking screen, which gives him a record of having written over half the musical plays used for the films, so far, has the opinion that at last the moving picture is approaching the status of a real art.

Hammerstein, author of "The Desert Song," which pioneered on the screen as a talking musical play, has recently sold "Rose Marie" as the next vehicle for Lawrence Tibbett. "The New Moon," another of his, has also been sold to the same company. His belief that films are attaining real art Hammerstein bases on the combination of realism, impossible to the speaking stage, with practically all of the advantages of the stage that the talking picture possesses.

"With the coming of the third dimension into pictures in addition to sound and color the screen becomes a perfect medium. It will be the fault of those who handle the medium if real art is not attained in films.

"The writing or adapting of plays for the screen is much less hedged about with artificialties than is writing for the stage," says Hammerstein. "In motion pictures a short situation can be shown convincingly in a few feet of film. On the stage such a situation cannot be shown unless it is of vital importance to the plot.

"The wonderful spectacles possible on the screen and impossible to the stage have always been one advantage of the screen. On the stage back drops and scenery are frankly accepted as false by the audience."

Voice of the Fan

In No Uncertain Terms.

Dear Miss Mae Tinée: I've just read "Anna Christie Disappoints," and want to add my voice of disapproval.

Greta Garbo can't act. All she does does is portray the worst in life, and if she had been forced to submit to the Benét test she couldn't have gained entrance to this country.

The talking pictures are a blessing. They help to weed out the unfits.

Yours truly, "INTELLIGENCE."

dynasty, historians might make note of his name. That imaginative young man was Percy Hammond.

Arrested Development?

Another revival with a definite Chicago background is on the schedule for a premiere Easter Sunday—"The Time, the Place, and the Girl." It recalls the period when the La Salle theater flourished as a sort of upper north of Chicago made musical comedy. Frank Adams and Will Hough, products of the Blackfriars at the University of Chicago, were the house librettists, and Joe Howard, the minstrel of West Madison street, was the composer. They manufactured a long series of successes, among which "The Time, the Place, and the Girl" was the most famous. Cecil Lean and Florence Holbrook had the leading roles in its amazing run, and to a generation of Chicago playgoers who had not begun to dream about motion pictures they were as popular as Mary and Doug.

Joe Howard, who hasn't been heard of for years, has emerged from somewhere to conjure up this revival. His company is now rehearsing here under the direction of Ned Wayburn. The "book" has been retouched and Mr. Howard is composing some new tunes for the show to prove that his ear hasn't lost its cunning.

To the younger generation, all of these revivals upon which so much sentimentality is lavished are symptoms of arrested development on the part of their elders. Joe Howard's attempt to recapture his past may prove that they are right. It has this advantage, however: no dramatic critic is going to speak of it reverently as a "classic."

New in Chicago

"BABES In Toyland" will begin a two week's egagement at the Majestic theater this evening as the fourth in the series of Victor Herbert revivals. This musical show—an extravaganza for children and adults—was first staged at the Grand Opera House of Chicago twenty-seven years ago, and its success was among the notable events of the season. It contains the fairy story and folk-lore nursery characters—Little Boy Blue, Bo Peep, Red Riding Hood and the rest of them—mixed up in a story that was regarded as vastly amusing by the generation that saw it first.

The cast of the revival includes Barry Lupino as leading comedian; Frank Gallagher, Betty Byron, Edith Rose, Rupert Darrell, William Balfour, Jayne Waterous, Marcella Swanson, Mary Thurmah, Dean Raymond, Frances Moore, and Virginia Mauret's ballet.

Erlanger Estate.

F. Richard Anderson has been designated by Mitchell L. Erlanger as his personal representative in the A. L. Erlanger Amusement Enterprises, Inc. Mr. Anderson is also general manager of the Erlanger office. John J. Dillon is no longer connected with the organization.

A FAMOUS RED-HEAD

FRANCINE LARRIMORE.

THIS popular star, who puts all of her red-headed temperament into roles of frivolous and flaming young women, is having one of the best runs of the Chicago stage season in "Let Us Be Gay," at the Studebaker theater. This is her most up-to-date picture.

Theater Guild Is Still Busy; Stage Gossip

PHILIP BARRY, whose "Hotel Universe" is being produced by the Theater Guild, has the idea that it should be presented without intermission. The Guild officials favor a break of some kind. And at the present time, there they stand. One who has read the play says that it is "altogether serious and has no plot. . . ." Speaking of Guild matters, Eugene O'Neill has written from abroad that his next drama is well under way. He has left the promised triology behind him, and he further confesses that the new piece is "simple and straightforward."

"Topaze," the satirical comedy of French origin, a recent success in New York, is having an international vogue. It is being acted all over Europe. A production in Flemish, just staged in Antwerp, makes the twenty-eighth company of "Topaze" in action.

The author of this dramatic epidemic is a certain Parisian, by name Marcel Pagnol. Another play of his, "Marius," is now in the second year of a Paris run. Still another, "Merchants of Glory," has been staged by the Theater Guild. M. Pagnol is said to have collected a million dollars in royalties from his plays—and he is only 32 years old.

When Ethel Barrymore ends her tour for the season, about the first of June, she will have been acting for eighty-five consecutive weeks in the two plays, "The Kingdom of God" and "The Love Duel." She dedicated the New York theater which bears her name Dec. 20, 1928, with "The Kingdom of God," and has been busy ever since. Her tour in the two plays began June 29 of last year. After a summer's rest she will open the new season in her own theater with the dramatization of "Scarlet Sister Mary."

Jack Donahue is among those who are managerially interested in the English play called "Lost Sheep," which will open in Atlantic City on April 21. It is a play about a minister and his family and it has to do with what happens when they all move into a house that had previously been devoted to another line of business.

Arthur Wontner, who acted in "Interference," will have Reginald Owen's part in the forthcoming London production of "The Three Musketeers." That is, the part of Cardinal Richelieu. Another London item has it that Patrick Hamilton, the author of "Rope," has turned out another play called "John Brown's Body," and that it will soon see production over there. It has nothing to do with American history despite the title, but is a play about a murderer.

Oliver D. Bailey, who has had great luck since he quit producing plays and confined himself to managing the Republic theater, New York, is going to produce a play again. It is called "Who Are You?" and Mr. Bailey has been getting it ready for three years. He says he'll do it next season.

One of the Shubert scouts, whose mission it is to see and judge the new plays, has traveled to look at no less than 85 productions during the current season. At the moment just four of the 85 are running in New York at a profit.

David Belasco, looking well into the future, has decided to keep "It's a Wise Child" in his New York theater until July 5, at which time it will be sent out to San Francisco. It has been running since early in August and the profits have been so considerable that the producer has liquidated some three-quarters of the indebtedness into which he was plunged by the late "Mima." . . . Further news of the Belasco office is that Mr. Belasco is not likely ever to produce again the plays called "Virgin City" and "Blind Window," which he caused to be tried earlier in the season. There seem to be second act troubles that can't be remedied.

The "book of the month" idea has been extended to the theater. An organization in New York called "Playchoice, Inc.," selects a "play of the month" to recommend to its subscribers. Its jury is composed of John Corbin, William Lyon Phelps, Jane Cowl, Clayton Hamilton, Donald Freeman, John Jay Cunningham Jr., Emma Mills, and Walter Hampden. To illustrate its taste, "Death Takes a Holiday" was its choice for January and "Topaze" is its best bet for March.

Viola Roth will give a program of character sketches with the assistance of William Ziegler Nourse in the Civic theater this afternoon. One of the numbers will be "Radio," written by Alice C. D. Riley. Another number will be "Sunny Morning," a sketch by the Quintero brothers, authors of "Papa Juan." Miss Roth will also

"This Man's Town," which opened at the Ritz theater, New York, on March 10 as the first presentation of George Jessel's new producing firm, closed after a week on Broadway. Mr. Jessel announces that his next offering, now scheduled for early August, will be "Happy Ending," a musical play in which he plans to appear. "The Mocky," by Louis Solomon, and "The Master of Ceremonies," a melodrama adapted by Mr. Jessel, are also listed for production next season.

B'Way Openings

THE Chicago Civic Shakespeare repertory leads the list of new attractions on the Manhattan stage this week. The Dramatic League of Chicago's "Dear Old England" is also on the Broadway schedule, which otherwise has a sparse, mid-Lenten aspect.

Here are the openings that the New York first-nighters will attend:

Fritz Leiber—Tomorrow night at the Shubert theater. Mr. Leiber and his company, presented by the Chicago Civic Shakespeare society, will give Broadway its first taste of Shakespearean repertory in several seasons. His associate players will include William Courtleigh, John Burke, Lawrence H. Cecil, Virginia Bronson, Vera Allen, Marie Carroll, Kathryn Collier, Olga Cook, and Virginia Stevens. Their bill tomorrow night will be "Hamlet," which will be repeated at the Saturday matinée. The rest of the week's program will be as follows: Tuesday and Friday nights, "Macbeth"; Wednesday matinée, "The Merchant of Venice"; Thursday night, "The Taming of the Shrew," and Saturday night, "Richard III."

"The Old Rascal" — Tomorrow night at the Bijou theater. William Hodge's second play of the season is the work of none other than William Hodge, which should guarantee his public its money's worth. Assisting him in it will be Alice Fischer, Douglas Wood, Herman Lieb, and Donald Kirke.

"Dear Old England" — Tuesday night at the Ritz theater. A comedy by the English author named H. F. Maltby, which Chicago has already seen. It deals with down at the heels English aristocracy, and those in it include Gladys Hanson, Edward Rigby, Reginald Sheffield, Mary Vance, and Reginald Carrington.

Three Dead Men in Each of Two New Gotham Plays the cruelty, and tries quickly to forget it. It is not of such incidents that vital drama is made. Mr. Robertson, the author, plays Buck with perfect realism. The cast include Pat O'Brien, Viola Frayne, and Edouard Ciannelli.

Three Dead Men Tell Love Woes.

From the lunch wagon we go to the cemetery. Here we have another curious example of what as smart and experienced a producer as A. H. Woods and as well informed writers for the theater as Fanny and Frederick Hatton think will sell in an uncertain theater season.

In "Love, Honor, and Betray" there are three dead men. Their shades arise from their graves, or walk out from their tombs, to talk over their adventures with life and discover that each of them has been put there by the same woman.

One is a young man she promised to love, kissed into helplessness and then jilted him because he was not the heir of his rich uncle. The young man promptly shot himself.

One is the millionaire husband she married and left because she was more interested in younger, slimmer, more eager men. Husband died of a stroke when she threatened to leave her favorite lover and return to him.

The last one is the most virile of the lovers whose strength she finally lays waste, as the female spider destroys her mate and leaves him nothing but a shell of his former self.

A satirical comedy, this "Love, Honor, and Betray," but never very funny, unfortunately. An exhibitory drama, given over to such passionate displays of osculation as must exhaust the actors as much as they are supposed to thrill vicariously the audience that sniggers embarrassedly at them. In the end the amorous widow is trying to take a strong young chauffeur away from her daughter.

The story is told by the flash-back method. As each ghost begins his story gravestones and tomb sink from sight and a living room or a love nest is wheeled forward. In this the related episode is acted.

I think probably Miss Brady is unhappy in the part of the heroine of the Hatton piece. It has not been a good year for her. Both her Theater Guild plays were failures, and this looks like another.

Mrs. Fiske Misses a Cue.

I seem to have more hard luck stories than usual to tell this week. Mrs. Fiske figured in another.

After five years, during which she played Mrs. Malaprop many times in other cities, the first actress decided to give New York a peep at her characterization.

George Tyler obligingly assembled a cast and his late partner in production, A. L. Erlanger, booked the revival in his pet theater, called Erlanger's.

During rehearsals Mr. Erlanger died and was buried. Four nights later the first performance was given and there was, for one reason and another, a funereal air about it.

I have no doubt the actors were flustrated, playing in the theater that meant so much to their former manager, though few of them had any personal liking for him.

About the middle of the performance, when Mrs. Malaprop is supposed to surprise her niece, Lydia, in Capt. Jack Absolute's arms, Mrs. Malaprop was in Mrs. Fiske's dressing room fussing with her wig. It was as completely missed a cue as I have seen in years. And when the old lady did come she could not open the door through which she was supposed to enter.

Rollo Peters, playing Absolute, and Margery Maude the Lydia, finished their scene, waited, wondered, grew a little panicky, and left the stage.

Now a flustered Mrs. Malaprop came trotting around the scene, brushed hurriedly past the couple, took her position by the door that had stuck and tried to appear surprised all over again. But the incident did not help the performance.

The reviewers were kindly lenient and most of them approved Mrs. Fiske's performance of the "old weatherbeaten she-dragon," who toys so outrageously with her parts of speech. It is a performance, I would say, that is expert and amusing, but one that adds nothing to the Fiske stature nor anything worth much to her répertoire. Take it for what it is worth, there is precious little in "The Rivals" that calls for revival.

PIED PIPER

GUS EDWARDS.

The leader of this week's vaudeville program at the Palace theater is Gus Edwards, famous as a song writer who discovers and exploits juvenile stage talent. He has been the "pied piper" for many of the stars of the musical comedy stage.

THE ARMCHAIR PLAYGOER

By Fanny Butcher.

IN NEW YORK.

A Turgenev play that New York has never seen before was the offering of the Theatre guild. "A Month in the Country" it is called. It was Turgenev's first play, written at the age of 32, and Russian rumor says that the leading character is autobiographical. His hopeless love had its counterpart in the author's own life. It is this tradition which induced Stanislavsky, whenever he played the rôle, to make up in the likeness of the author.

IVAN TURGENEV.

It is a comedy of disillusion, built up in the Chekov fashion. The scene is the home of a gentleman farmer into which is precipitated a good looking young tutor, who, quite unconsciously, plays havoc with the hearts of the household. There is a significant fact, so dramatic historians say, in the stage set indicated by the author—a salon done in the grand style of native Russia crossed with imported France, a reflection of the same fashion which led the playwright's mother to teach him nothing but French and compelled him to learn his own tongue from peasant servants. The play was written at the time of his mother's death. Armchair playgoers will find the play in Turgenev's collected works, published by Macmillan.

"The Royal Virgin" is Harry Wagstaff Gribble's version of three old English plays. It was originally known as "Elizabeth and Essex" and was mistaken for a dramatization of Lytton Strachey's volume of that name. You may not read the Gribble version of the affair, but if you want to put yourself into the Elizabeth mood reread the Strachey book and add to it Katherine Anthony's "Queen Elizabeth," just to get started in the period.

"The Matriarch," which was current here a few weeks ago, a dramatization of G. B. Stern's gorgeous novel of the same title, is, one must confess, nothing to be compared as a play to the novel. You may not read the play, anyway, because it has never been done into a book. So content yourselves with one of the best novels of its generation. And, by the way, if you like dogs and have never read "The Dark Gentleman," run like a rabbit to the nearest book shop and get it. No book about dogs is more entrancing.

IN CHICAGO.

"Papa Juan," which Otis Skinner is playing, is the same play he did here last year, "One Hundred Years Old," with a new title. It is one of the popular dramas of the brothers Quintero, Serafin, and Joaquin Alvarez. You will find it in a collection called "Four Plays," which includes "The Lady of Alfaqueque," a popular play of the Civic Repertory theater in New York.

"Sentimental comedy" is what the English would call "Papa Juan," say the translators, Helen and Harley Granville-Barker. "It is unashamedly sentimental, but is it wholesale sentiment to be anathema? And see with what artistic tact the authors have placed the sentiment in the mouths of a very old man and a very young girl and have kept them briskly merry besides, and have surrounded them with vigorous comedy."

PUBLISHED.

"Representative Modern Plays," edited by Richard A. Cordell, assistant professor of English, Purdue university, contains short introductions about the authors, and, among others, the compete texts of "A Woman of No Importance," by Oscar Wilde; "Mrs. Dane's Defence," by Henry Arthur Jones; "The Great Adventure," by Arnold Bennett; "The Circle," by W. Somerset Maugham; "Success," by A. A. Milne; "Juno and the Paycock," by Sean O'Casey; "Hell Bent for Heaven," by Hatcher Hughes; "Beggar on Horseback," by George S. Kaufman and Marc Connelly, and "Diff'rent," by Eugene O'Neill.

ON OR BEFORE MARCH 15TH

By Robert Benchley

Why Hurry So with the Income Tax?

I REALIZE that this is a fine time to be worrying about the income tax, a whole week after the returns were supposed to be in, but I am afraid that I shall have to be a little late this year in filing mine. Nobody regrets it more than I do, and I want the officials to know that I am bending every effort to get the thing in just as soon as possible.

But I have struck several snags, and my pencil keeps breaking, and often I get so confused that I have to go and lie down, and all this takes time. I will get the return in. They needn't worry. But I won't be hurried. March 15th! March 15! You would think, to hear them screaming "March 15th" at you, that there was no other date on the calendar. Well, I'll get mine in on or about March 28th or 29th, and they'll like it. I should think that they'd be busy enough in the tax offices messing around with the returns that did come in on time, so that they wouldn't have to have mine right away. Anyway, they're not going to get it.

It's their own fault that I am late. They print blanks for you to fill out, then pass a bill making the blanks no good, then send the blanks out anyway with a little red slip telling you to disregard the blanks. If I had done a thing like that to them, what a howl they would have set up! I would have been just an old slip-shod bungler, an impractical writer man. But the government can go out of its way to confuse and rattle me, and that's all right. Well, the government makes me sick, that's what the government does. And it always has, too.

Lost, Strayed or Stolen.

In the first place, the little red slip got lost just as soon as I had taken it out of the envelope, so I never saw what it said. I can't sit right down the minute my blank comes and fill it out. I have certain other things which have to be attended to, although the government may not think so. And a little red slip is very easily mislaid or lost these days. I don't suppose the government ever loses anything; O, no! They're perfect!

Well, I lost the red slip, and when I came to fill out my blank I filled it out according to printed instructions, as every law abiding citizen should. I took it for granted that the blank was right. I knew that it was gosh-darned unfair, but I did think that it was technically correct. When a government is over a hundred and fifty years old one naturally assumes that it can, at least, put out correct printed matter. This is where I evidently made my first mistake.

It's All Very Confusing.

My second mistake came in handling the "7s" and "8s." I always have had trouble in adding and subtracting "7s" and "8s." Even when I was in the thick of school arithmetic, adding and subtracting like mad every day of the year, the "7s" and "8s" seemed to me to be very complicated and tricky numbers, and now that I have occasion to add and subtract only occasionaly they throw me into something of a panic. If nobody is looking I can get out of the jam by using my fingers to count on, but I rather hate, at my age, to be seen at it. In fact, I have been known to wait fifteen or twenty minutes until people left the room rather than count "7" and "8" on my fingers in front of them. All this time the mathematical problem at hand has been held up.

"I always have trouble in adding and subtracting sevens and eights."

Also, this year, I got a book from my bank telling all about deductions, and this served only to confuse me. In the past, rather than go into the thing thoroughly I have cheated myself unmercifully by claiming only the deductions that I could understand, such as two children and the Red Cross (it is very evident that the treasury officials have no children of their own, if they think that $400 covers even the shoe leather expense of one child). But this year a businessman acquaintance told me that I was a fool not to deduct expenses to which I was legitimately entitled by the nature of my business, and gave me this book from the bank outlining the various forms of money saving which come under the law.

I hadn't got very far in this book before I was tempted to go back to my old system of giving the government everything except my two children and the Red Cross. Sec. 23 (L) mentions "a reasonable allowance for depletion in case of oil wells, mines, etc." Now, I don't own an oil well or a mine, but an oil well in which I had a small financial interest certainly was depleted during 1929, a depletion which amounted practically a complete elimination, and I ought to get a little something off on that, I should think. But I have also learned that most of the items which one would think could be legitimately deducted are just the ones which can't be.

My garden, for instance, which really ought to come in under the "etc." in the "oil wells, mines, etc." clause, being a source of something or other (mostly radishes) which comes out of the ground, is probably not deductible. It was a big disappointment as a garden, and I hardly got my bait back out of it, but I know that, if I went to the government and said: "Look here! If a depleted oil well or mine can be written off, what about those string beans which I went to all the bother of planting (and my time is money, too) and which came up backwards and full of old threads?" I can just hear the government laugh at the very suggestion. One of those nasty, unpleasant laughs.

" Look here! If a depleted oil well or mine can be written off, what about those string beans?"

Is the Government Crazy?

A little further on in the book I found, under Sec. 25 [a], "dividends received from domestic corporations, except corporations taxable under section 251 of the law and corporations organized under the China Trade Act." Now I am frank to say that I do not know about the China trade act. I don't really suppose that it applies to me, but how to be sure? In supplement K there is a paragraph [d] which is headed, "Definition of China," which says: "As used in this section the term 'China' shall have the same meaning as when used in the China Trade Act, 1922." This more or less brings us back to where we were in the beginning. If the government thinks that it has cleared up anything at all in that "definition of China," it is crazy. I sometimes wonder if it isn't, anyway.

This is where I stood on the evening of March 14, the night before the treasury department's Christmas. I had about decided to let the whole thing go as it was and take my losses, when one of my neighbors, a brisk, rosy cheeked man who always gets everything right, came in, glowing with health after a tramp through the country, and said: "Well, did you remember to make your one per cent reduction?"

At first I thought that he was kidding me about a tonic which I am supposed to be taking for my metabolism and said "Yes," very curtly.

"There'll be an awful lot of boobs who didn't," he said, smacking his lips.

"What do you mean—one per cent reduction?" I asked, trying not to appear too interested.

"In your income tax," he explained. "The thing congress passed after the blanks were printed. The blanks are all wrong, you know." He began to suspect that I hadn't known about it and beamed accordingly.

"O, that," I replied, not willing to give him the satisfaction of gloating over me. "O, sure!"

Back Where He Started.

After he had gone, a little crestfallen, I made inquiries and learned about the little red slip which I had lost. I say "lost," because I suppose that I did have one in my envelope, although I wouldn't put it past the government deliberately to have neglected to send me one. They will go to any lengths once they have got a grudge against you.

This meant that I had to do the whole thing over again. It didn't seem as if I could go through with it. Everything went black before my eyes and I sank down in my chair, burying my head in my hands. When I was strong enough I got the blank out of the envelope which I had stamped all ready to send off. [I never trust those envelopes which say up in the corner that no stamp is necessary. It is worth two cents to be sure that your letter is really going to be delivered and not kicked about for months in a postoffice for insufficient postage]. I looked at the neat little figures in which I had done my reckoning—my figures may be wrong, but they are neat—and realized that I should have to get a new blank and begin fresh on the nightmare which had been tormenting me for two weeks. I must have fainted at this point, for I found myself in bed with an ugly gash on the back of my head. Perhaps I had even attempted suicide.

And now, after a week of trying to compute a tax of ½ per cent instead of 1½ per cent on the first $4,000, and a tax of 2 per cent instead of 3 per cent on the next $4,000, and a tax of 4 per cent instead of 5 per cent on the remainder [if there is a remainder], I have about decided to take a leaf from the government's book and pull an "erratum" on them.

System.

I will send in my tax return as I had it in the first place. In the envelope with it I will enclose a printed sheet headed "Instructions," on which I will say:

1. Enter on line 10, Art. 6, Sec. 11, all receipts, fiduciary or otherwise, charged off to obsolescence of either subsection [b] or [c], if, for the taxable year 1926 or 1927, within the provisions of the revenue act of 1926 or 1928, the amount of such net loss shall be allowed as a deduction in computing the net income for the two succeeding taxable years to the same extent and in the same manner as a net loss sustained for one taxable year under Art. 3, Sec. 3 of the China Trade Act, allowed as a deduction for the two succeeding taxable years.

2. Enter as item 3 all items heretofore designated as items 4, 6 and 9 in schedule C, except such items as shall hereinafter be designated as items 5, 2 and 7, if the net income for the period ending during the second calendar year, which the portion of such period falling within such calendar year is of the entire period; and [3] any and all such items, 4 or otherwise, as you jolly well please.

To this sheet I will attach a little red slip reading: "Notice to internal revenue collectors. Read carefully before trying to make out form 1040.

"Since the individual tax return, form 1040, for the calendar year 1929 was made out, the joint resolution of congress reducing the rates of normal income tax for the calendar year 1929 has been called to my attention.

"Throughout this form, therefore, read ½% for 1½%, 3% for 4%, and 4% for 5%. Figure it out for yourself and fill in the enclosed blank check for whatever you make the amount due to be."

I know that the government will gyp me if I leave it up to them like this, but I can't be bothered with the thing any longer.

"Well, did you remember to make your one per cent reduction?"

A Gun Widow's Story of Life in Gangland

By Genevieve Forbes Herrick

Florence Murphy Oberta's Side of the Case.

brother who was "being sort of easy" to Florence. One week-end, back in the family home in Chicago, Tim took a brotherly shot at the offending relative, was brought into court, but was dismissed when the brother failed to prosecute.

But it was just such little acts of chivalry that endeared him to his bride.

Back for reelection, State Representative Murphy came back flushed with power. He looked about for a kingly domain over which to king it. He saw the gas house workers in need of a benevolent monarch who'd fight to get their pay raised. In November, 1913, when this union placed on his head the crown of sovereignty, he made a speech in pungent king's English:

"They shouted around that I was a tough guy and a gunman, but that only made the eggs pile into the union butter."

And of the alderman who opposed the rules he said: "He's got a habit of actually crying whenever any one asks about raising salaries. He must practice bawling every night, but tears ain't gonna buy my men's kids shoes."

Encouraged by success, Tim [they were calling the six foot three leader "Big Tim" now], took two more crews, one from the "'white wings'" [the street sweepers] union, one from the union of street foremen.

The Murphys still lived, modestly enough, over near the stockyards, but Mrs. Murphy's dresses were silk, and her coats were fur. But it was all "on the legit," she recalls emphatically.

Barred "Hot" Stuff.

"For Tim always said that nothing was worth having if you had to have it hot. 'Florence,' he'd say, "if I can't buy you a fur coat, then you don't have no fur coat. There's no percentage in having stuff that's hot.' Why, Tim wouldn't lift a dime's worth, no, sir."

Another characteristic of her first husband that it pleases her to remember during these days of double bereavement is his nice sense of discrimination.

"He'd go out and drink with the boys and pal around with them, but do you think he'd bring 'em home to our house? I should say not. Why, I might be on the street with him and he'd have to stop to speak to some one. But he was so careful of me, he'd not even give 'em an introduction to me. No, sir. Tim was a perfect gentleman. Yes, sir."

He had the same carefulness, doubtless, that made the medieval knight keep his lady home in the castle while he went off to kill dragons and celebrate with the boys.

Big Tim Locked Up.

But Florence Murphy wasn't medieval. She wouldn't have stayed in the bower embroidering a sofa pillow if her knight got into trouble; she'd have rushed across the drawbridge and told the enemy a few simple truths.

For in 1920, when Tim was taken to jail for alleged complicity in the murder of Maurice "Mossy" Enright, his former patron, she stepped across the threshold of her home and hurried down to the jail.

"My God, it was fierce." She is reliving the scene of a decade ago. "It was the first time I'd ever been in a jail and I was scared stiff. My tongue stuck to the roof of my mouth.

But the jailer—what's his name? I've met so many I get them kinda mixed up—well, anyway, that jailer was a swell guy. But Lord, I was scared."

Nice as the jailer was, however, he kept her husband behind the bars, through which she made encouraging love to him. But that wasn't all. She rushed around the town trying to get bail for him. And she took up writing in his defense.

Writes to Tribune.

Here are a few of the phrases from the letter she wrote THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE in February, 1920:

"My husband is absolutely innocent of this charge—Why, Tim Murphy wouldn't harm any living human being, not even his worst enemy, IF he had one—I am perfectly sure that all women who have good husbands stand ready to defend them when necessary—No living person can honestly say that Tim was a gunman, or even associated with crooks—he always had higher ambitions and nobler ideals—I distinctly remember that at the time of the murder Mr. Murphy was in Springfield attending to some very important business—'Framed' and 'jobbed' does not half express what they did to him—In conclusion I can only reiterate that I have the most wonderful husband in the world—God bless him.

"(Signed)

"FLORENCE (MRS. TIM) MURPHY."

And through many a subsequent crisis Mrs. Murphy insisted, "In conclusion I can only reiterate that I have the most wonderful husband in the world."

Stood Up for Baby.

"I was awful busy those days," Tim's widow recollects. "That dirty rat of a Mrs. Enright! After all the times I was good to her, then she framed Tim when he didn't have no more to do with 'Mossy's' death than nobody's business. Why, that fellow 'Mossy' left his wife and I gave her a job at our house scrubbing and washing so she wouldn't starve.

"And when her baby came I bought all the clothes for it, and Tim paid the priest and everything, and Tim and I stood up for it at the christening. Then the dirty rat goes and frames Tim!"

When Tim, released from the Enright murder case for lack of evidence, walked back to the city hall, he was a conquering hero and the number of his vassals had increased during his absence.

With the development of power and the accumulation of money came the desire for a change, so Tim took his wife away from the Murphy paternal manse, 816 West 51st place, and journeyed up north to 4949 Sheridan road.

"It wasn't that Tim was getting high hat. Can you imagine Tim high hat?" inquires Florence. "And it wasn't because he was scared of that Enright family. My God, Tim never was scared. But we just thought it'd be nice to get up north."

Rumor said he was building an expensive north side apartment building.

"But that was all wet," Mrs. Murphy explains. At the time Tim had said, "That's dizzy; all this gab about me spillin' dough on a flat when my wife's still got her diamonds in hock for that Enright mess!"

Hardly had they hung up their new curtains when the police were at the door. This time it was for a robbery of the United States mails. Tim was away. His wife, whose tongue had traveled since that day when it clung, in fright, to the roof of her mouth when she talked to a jailer, talked fast and most plainly to the officers.

"Another damned frame-up by that Enright woman," is what she said.

When Tim appeared he was of the same opinion.

"It's goofy," he insisted. "Just another frame-up. Me, just two weeks out of the county jug, on a bum rap, getting messed up in a robbery. It's goofy, I'm telling you."

Leads Grand March.

He was admitted to bail in time to buy his wife a beautiful party gown in which, blonde and bland, she led the grand march at the spring ball of the Gas House Workers' union. They had a period of recreation: Night clubs, prize fights, the races, dinners, and dances. Tim was always in a correctly cut Tuxedo; she was a stylish semi-stout with a pink and white complexion, lovely hair, and the right clothes.

Mrs. Murphy was taken ill; went to the hospital. Once again the police appeared. This time it was another government mail robbery, but a bigger one.

Tim was mortified. "You come at a bad time," he protested. "My wife's in the hospital. I'm sorry she's got to stand the humiliation."

They searched the home of Florence's father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Diggs, at 857 West 50th street. In an old trunk they found $40,000; thought it should have been more. As they were departing a neighbor lady called out of her window, "Hey, youse guys, there's something on the roof."

Find $100,000 More.

There was. A laundry bag, that had been tossed hastily up through the skylight, gave forth $100,000.

Tim was glib.

"The fellow who pulled that job asked me to take care of the trunk. I did it as a favor. I could have taken it on the lam, or given the trunk to somebody. But I wanted to play square with him.

"As soon as I heard of the fix my dad and mother-in-law was in, with the dicks frisking the place, I offered to go out and show 'em the trunk. What the hell! They're old people, and I didn't want to see 'em locked up."

Somehow the police didn't believe all his story and they locked him up.

Through the bars he shouted to the police words that really paid tribute to his wife's enterprise.

"It's lucky for you," he called, "that my wife's in the hospital. Or she'd be down here knocking a few skulls around getting me out."

Tim Is Convicted.

When the famous "Big Tim" trial came in 1921 Florence Murphy was busy interviewing witnesses, trying to prove her contention that it was "a dirty frame by that Enright woman again."

On her way to court one morning, she was arrested for speeding.

At the policeman she hurled an explanatory:

"You dirty, rotten thing. Tim's in trouble, and I'm in a hurry."

"Tim's in trouble, and I'm in a hurry." It might be the theme song of her first wedlock. And of her second, changing the word "Tim" to "Johnny."

Tim was convicted; given a sentence at the federal penitentiary at Leavenworth and a fine. But he was released on high bail, pending an appeal.

Chicago was just giving to the lexicon the word "racketeer." The phrase "muscle man" was growing popular. Tim, eager to expand his kingly domains, "muscled" his way into the building trades "racket." There were some ugly bombings. Two policemen were killed. And Tim Murphy, out on bail awaiting a trip to Leavenworth, was indicted, along with "Frenchy" Mader and "Dapper Dan" McCarthy.

Bonds Hard to Get.

From his cell Tim talked to the reporters. "It's the bunk. What did they indict me for? Carryin' a concealed idea?" There was an appreciative laugh—feminine. It was Florence Murphy who had just come in and never failed to admire her husband's repartee.

"It's right," she added. "Tim knows more law than the lawyers just from being arrested."

Bonds are harder to get this time. "Big Tim" is tougher. The authorities are tighter. Florence perseveres like a pioneer woman. Only, instead of the pioneer woman's Mother Hubbard, she wears a modish fur coat. Her feet are covered not with hobnailed shoes but smart pumps and sheer hose. Of course her jewels are attractive.

Maybe she talks out of the side of her mouth more than a pioneer woman ever did. But it's a habit she's acquired from her work with the unions.

After one of the longest habeas corpus hearings on record, Florence's efforts are rewarded. Her man walks out of his jail and into her capacious embrace.

As a matter of fact he was never convicted on this charge. Back in active life, temporarily, he falls a victim to the "emperor complex." Napoleon had it; so did Charlemagne. It helped Hannibal along his way. But it kept getting "Big Tim" into trouble.

Goes to Leavenworth.

"Let him stay with his gas house," argued many a friend and foe.

As he was trying to spread out and take in more and more territory Uncle Sam enforced a theory of isolation. His appeal lost, Timothy D. Murphy was obliged to desert his homeland and journey down to Leavenworth. His wife, once more the medieval lady of a two fisted knight, didn't accompany her spouse to the donjon.

But later, and frequently, she went down to visit him. In between visits, however, this "prison" widow stepped into the limelight and sat in Tim's chair at the union headquarters. She settled quarrels, she campaigned for new members; she restrained any defection on the part of jealous members. She was the boss of 2,800 gas house workers.

She believed that if she could raise enough of money she could get Tim a parole; so she started a campaign for a $50,000 liberty fund. She went to Washington, where she had worked as a 16 year old girl, and argued and pleaded for a parole. Her plans weren't successful.

Misses Mother-in-Law's Funeral.

"And then my mother died," she says. "That was in April of 1926. Tim'd always been crazy about my mother and she was crazy about him. He was always swell to her. He wanted to come up for the funeral. But that'd meant he'd had to have a bunch of guards with him, and that'd been sort of conspicuous."

That, of course, was before she had grown accustomed to conspicuous funerals.

The following month, on the 26th of March, in a chill dawn, Tim Murphy walked down the steps at Leavenworth no longer Convict No. 18990; once again the beloved lord and master of an excited woman in an exquisite squirrel coat with a platinum fox collar.

Not immediately can Mrs. Murphy, ex-czarina of the gas house workers' union, relax into the gentle home life. For she hears that the government is going to meet her husband at the train, talk to him about that fine they imposed upon him. So she leaves Tim holding a reception in Kansas City and hurries back to Chicago, getting that business of the fine adjusted.

It is only when he receives the high sign from his wife that Tim takes the train and comes back to a safe and triumphant welcome at the Webster hotel.

What happened after this has several interpretations. His wife says Tim was through with the rackets; that he pined for a farm in Woodstock and the simple life. His foes say he thought he was too smart; he tried to "muscle" into too many things. There was the Newport Beach Bowling club, 5642 Sheridan road, once the home of Peter Reinberg, where Tim and Nicky Arnstein, his pal at Leavenworth, were said to run a swank gambling joint. But police axes smashed that to pieces one night. There were many unions that he tried to organize, none very successfully.

Florence and her husband went to a new home, a bungalow at 2525 Morse avenue. The Blue Ridge hills of Virginia; the nation's capital; a flat back of the yards in Chicago; a Sheridan road apartment; smart hotels. She had moved through them all. And now she tries a more pastoral setting, with rose bushes on the lawn and a radio in the basement.

Shot to Death on Lawn.

"Tim liked to play with the kids in the street. You could tell he wasn't afraid of anybody or he'd not have played around with the kids, would he? And those days he never carried a gun. He was through with all that. And he'd sit down in the basement and play the radio and forget the Enrights and all the rest of that trash."

He was sitting down listening to the radio. They were broadcasting the Democratic national convention at Houston. There was a ring at the door bell. Tim went to answer; found nobody, walked, unsuspecting, out on to the lawn. From a passing motor car an enemy bullet crashed through his lungs. He dropped, and died.

Tim's wife, unmindful of the fact that she was now his widow, was attending a carnival at St. Margaret Mary's church, nearby. She and little Doris, the niece who lived with them, walked into the house and saw "Big Tim" stretched out on the sofa.

The widow shrieked, "My God, if I knew who killed him I wouldn't tell anybody; I'd take a gun and kill 'em the way they killed my Tim. I loved him."

Then she gave orders for a funeral that should be both expensive and expansive.

The casket was bronze. It cost $2,500. A squad of police had to direct the streams of mourners. Five cars bore the flowers to the grave. But the church denied him final rites.

Florence's control broke as she stood in the living room and looked down, for the last time, at her gangster king. Sobbing wildly, she followed the pallbearers down the steps. Directly in front of her, helping bear the coffin along, was a handsome man whom she didn't meet, hardly noticed, in the frenzy of her grief.

But the man did not go out of her life.

Ten months later that man, John L. ("Dingbat") Oberta, took "Big Tim" Murphy's widow for a bride.

MUSIC NOTES

Nathan Eiman is to be the violin soloist on both the Tuesday and Friday-Saturday concerts of the Chicago Symphony orchestra this week. In the first he will play the Brahms concerto, the same that was played by Jascha Heifetz the week before last, and in the second he will take up the fine concerto by Mr. Stock, a more recent and less frequently heard work than the Brahms, but one gradually and rightfully making its way into the repertoires of the professional violinists.

In the symphonies for the week Mr. Stock is going in lavishly for Schubert, playing that composer's Fourth on Tuesday and his First on Friday and Saturday.

One of the earliest artists to return from the tour of the Civic Opera company is Edward Preston, who sang Walther in "Lohengrin" in all cities where that Wagnerian opera was presented. Mr. Preston will be heard among next season's baritones with the company. In the meantime he has turned his attention to the call of radio, having made several broadcasts with several more to come in the immediate future.

DISMISSED again! The president's secretary suspected why. So did others in the office. But no one wanted to tell him. It was too personal a matter.

Was "B.O." the reason—body odor? Judge by the facts. When he discovered his fault at last—and how to correct it—"luck" changed. Today he's a valued junior executive—advancing fast. He knows the easy way to keep perspiration odorless.

Even though you feel that you couldn't be guilty of "B.O.", this is too important a matter to take chances with. Remember this. We all perspire. Pores give off a quart of odor-causing waste even on cool days, science says.

True we don't notice it in ourselves because we so soon become accustomed to an ever-present odor. But it can be most annoying to others. Why risk offending? It's so easy to be safe. Just wash and bathe with Lifebuoy.

"Most refreshing soap I ever used!" say millions of delighted users. A Lifebuoy bath drives away fatigue, makes you feel gloriously fresh and fit. And no worries about "B.O." For this creamy, abundant, searching lather purifies pores—destroys all odor.

Prize 500 Word Histories

Interest manifested in the recent contest for the best 500 word history of the United States has taken the form of numerous requests that additional manuscripts winning prizes be published. The Tribune herewith presents the third prize-winner, written by Louis Pelzer of the University of Iowa, who was awarded $250, and the history by Lowell L. Martin of West Lafayette, Ind., whose effort was ranked best among the seven $50 prize winners.

BY PROF. LOUIS PELZER.
[University of Iowa.]
$250 Winner.

THREE great European powers struggled for the mastery of the American continent for two and a half centuries, beginning with the sixteenth. Religious and political antagonisms and the rivalries for trade and territory brought on wars that eliminated Spain and France. England then for over a decade ruled undisputed the eastern half of the United States. But after her "long train of abuses" the 3,000,000 Americans revolted in 1776 to seek independence, and won it.

Europe poured millions of its emigrants into the new nation whose population in the next century and a half increased from 4,000,000 to 120,000,000. Great areas of land added in 1803, 1819, 1846, and 1848 extended the boundaries from the Mississippi to the Pacific and from Mexico to Canada. In five foreign wars no areas were lost. The war with Spain brought overseas possessions and subject races—the world war lessened American isolation and imposed on it world leadership.

Free, cheap, abundant, fertile lands—not conquest or the golden fleece—drew westward moving tides of migration to displace the Indians, the first occupants. On pack horses and wagons settlers moved through passes and over trails and on keel boats and steamboats down inland waterways. In 250 years population spread from Jamestown, the first settlement, to the Mississippi. In the next half century population leaped over and filled in the regions to the Pacific. On the edges of settlement developed the most American type, the pioneer. To the forty-eight states came men of all nationalities, social inheritances, and religious faiths to find equality and opportunity.

Rooted in English common law, proclaimed in the Declaration of Independence and guaranteed in federal and state constitutions the nation became the world's largest experiment in democracy. Washington and Hamilton established the new nation, Jefferson created its democratic spirit, but Lincoln preserved it from the destruction threatened by the issues of Negro slavery and four years of civil war.

Steam railways begun in 1827 spanned the continent in 1869 and extended the transportation network. Industrial centers and great cities arose where elevated railways and electric trolleys carried millions. The internal combustion engine perfected in the twentieth century afforded automobiles to reduce space on earth and airplanes to conquer the air.

Labor saving inventions—machines for plowing, sowing and reaping, illuminating gas, refrigeration, machine production, interchangeable parts, and electrical devices—and discoveries in surgery, ether, sanitation and chemical processes are tributes to American creative genius. Increase in charity, benevolences, life insurance, and international arbitration betokened an improved world.

The United States contributed the example of universal suffrage and religion free from state control. The diffusion of wellbeing permitted the rise of the common man. Free, universal education was aided by the growth of a reading public through newspapers. The American invention of the telegraph in 1846, the telephone thirty years later, and the linotype and allied processes in printing wove the nation into a mental unity. With the use of the radio instant world communication was attained.

NORTH AMERICA was discovered and attempts at colonization were made by daring adventurers from several European countries; but England early in the seventeenth century first established and maintained permanent settlements which grew into thirteen colonies predominated by Englishmen who indelibly impressed their language, laws, traditions and institutions upon this new world.

Distant England's policies were misunderstood in the colonies and were met by protest, then nullification and finally armed resistance until independence was declared in 1776. Gen. Washington led revolutionary troops, aided by the French, through desultory campaigns to final victory.

The Articles of Confederation held the states together during war, but peace brought such chaos that delegates assembled in convention to strengthen the union. Their labors produced a written constitution, later approved by the states, under which Washington was elected first President.

Meanwhile sturdy pioneers penetrated the fertile lands west of the Appalachians previously taken from France by England. Purchase of the Louisiana territory from France in 1803 added the sweeping Mississippi valley. As Indians were pushed westward new states were formed.

Independence by sea, vindication of honor and new spirit of nationalism resulted from war with England in 1812. Florida was acquired from Spain in 1819. Scholarly decisions of Chief Justice Marshall expanded the constitution and the influence of the Supreme court. President Monroe proclaimed in 1823 the doctrine of new world independence of Europe.

Government changed from aristocracy to democracy under President Jackson. Compromises, beginning in the constitution, attempted to balance the states on slavery. This prevented annexation of Texas, independent of Mexico for nine years, until 1846. England peacefully relinquished Oregon, but acquisition of New Mexico and California in 1848 followed war with Mexico.

The drift towards disunion continued despite compromises. Lincoln's election as President favored extinction of slavery in territories and inflamed seven southern states to secede. Conciliation failed and these states established the confederacy which four border states joined after bombardment of Fort Sumter in 1861.

Four years of war began between agricultural south and industrial north. As neither were prepared, the south sought swift victory or foreign intervention; but effective blockades, lack of intervention and prolonged struggle brought southern defeat. Lincoln's assassination followed victory and complicated reconstruction problems. Constitutional amendments affirmed wartime emancipation of slaves.

With union restored transcontinental railroads accelerated western growth. Alaska was purchased from Russia in 1867. Economic revolutions in manufacturing, transportation, communications and business, unfortunately interrupted by recurring financial panics and increased immigration characterized succeeding decades.

Material development exceeding domestic needs turned attention to foreign markets. Addition of the Philippines and Porto Rico by defeat of Spain in the war of 1898 over Cuban independence; annexation of Hawaii; prevention of China's dismemberment; and construction of the Panama canal established recognition as a world power.

For three years neutrality was maintained towards war covering Europe until German tactics in 1917 caused participation which ended the conflict in 1918. Leadership for peace and disarmament followed decisive war activities.

Government regulation of social, business and financial problems marked the twentieth century.

Public Demands Something New in Film Plots

Wearies of Murders, Jazz, Music Comedies.

mand for something different and are scrambling over one another with fountain pens and check books in hand to buy names. They are buying like a housewife on a shopping spree with her husband's insurance money.

They are buying opera names, Broadway names, best seller names, artist names, and often just names. If they get three ideas, two songs and one actor, out of the lot cinema land will have been saved. But it is going to take just that to fill the houses when the dog days come. Just one new idea-new actor film is needed. The others can copy the hit and get by.

Industrials Growing.

Mr. Talkie has a byproduct that is multiplying as rapidly as rabbits in a magician's silk hat. It is the industrial film. During the last two months it has grown like Jack's beanstalk. Big business houses in almost every large city have made industrial films for the trade, the cost in some instances mounting up around $10,000. The big business man also is going after names for his advertising reels. Ruth St. Dennis and Ted Shawn, the dancers, have had offers pushed under their dressing room doors, stars in the sport world, both amateur and professional, are in demand for trade movies, and Vincent Richards, it is reported, is ready to begin one.

Most of the new industrials are two reelers and the advertising element is cleverly spun into the plot. Many of the films make no direct mention of the brand of goods or house they are advertising, but put it over by suggestion. They have become so successful that they are slipping them in on the chain theaters and presently the censor will have a new job—that of detecting advertising. The independents have rivals in Fox, Paramount, Pathe, and Universal in making these industrials.

The color fad has reached out and embraced the news reel. New Orleans' Mardi Gras has been filmed right in Canal street in all its colorful glory and it is but a step further along to the time when the flames will register red in every downtown fire and even the St. Patrick's day parades will photograph green.

News Reel Theater Popular.

Right now the newsreel theater in Times square is the most popular place in town. One can find a line in front of the box office window every afternoon and evening. Just why the idea has not taken root in other sections of New York and further inland is a puzzle. The forty minute show provides as varied entertainment as any movie bug could wish for and it has the tabloids topped because one does not have to be able to read even captions to get the world's news. The full time news theater idea was tried out in Brooklyn and flopped. It also flopped in the Bronx.

The Pathe studio fire nipped Manhattan's talkie boom in the bud, but sound still rules, out on Long Island sound. Over in Paramount's Astoria factory they have begun rehearsals on "Queen High," with Charles Ruggles, Frank Morgan, Ginger Rogers, and Stanley Smith. "Queen High" is a picture story of the Schwab and Mandel stage musical.

Jack Oakie, grin and all, is due in these parts in three weeks to take the lead role in the "Sap from Syracuse," which will be filmed in the Long Island sound studio from the stage play, which had a short but merry life on Broadway.

Singer Rates Special Script.

That Texas university singer who went Hollywood by way of legitimate drama on Broadway is going to have a piece typewritten just for himself. We are speaking of John Love Boles, who cast the "Love" aside and hit the screen as plain John Boles. Konrad Bercovici, a writing chap hereabouts, has been signed by Universal and will author a singing-talking script for the Texas songbird. In the meantime Mr. Boles is heading New Yorkward to attend the world premiere of "La Marseillaise" next week at Roxy's.

We were writing of color and the newsreel a few paragraphs back. Well, so long as it is the most important thing in pictures right now we will give it stil lanother paragraph. Wynn Holcomb, the New York cartoonist, sends word that the all talking, all color animated cartoon is the latest novelty of the screen. The colored jabbering cartoon will be presented for the first time in "King of Jazz," featuring Paul Whiteman and his band. Holcomb has been in the Universal studio working on the cartoon idea all during the filming of the "Jazz King."

Woman Directs This Movie; Critic Hands It Three Stars

long search begins. She climbs up and up. It's not so long before she's Mme. Sarah, a grand opera favorite. . . . I will leave you in the dark now, if you please.

While perhaps disapproving of the actions of the baby's adopted parents, you will, upon consideration, realize that they are what might be expected from two lonely people who have taken a six months old, bonny, gurgling infant into their hearts and home, grown to idolize the child, and then been faced with the knowledge that they are in danger of losing their darling forever.

Of this be assured—"Sarah and Son" is an intelligent offering that doesn't permit your interest to lag for one instant.

Bits aBOUTem.

JACK OAKIE was once a broker's clerk. From there he trekked singing, dancing, smiling into vaudeville. THEN the pictures felt they couldn't do without him and NOW—Paramount has made him a star. Isn't all that something?

PERCY WESTMORE, head of the makeup department at First National studios, says that movie makeup methods have changed. Sezze:

"Now the makeup man wears a regular artist's smock, has a palette, and does a surprising amount of his work with brushes. Instead of a canvas he uses human skin! Of course, the rabbit foot, the powder pad, and blender, the pencil and the grease sticks are still in evidence.

"Wholesale methods of painting are used for making up extras who will not be too close to the cameras. Regular 'paint guns' or air brushes are used for this purpose, and the paint comes in cans.

"Feminine makeup artists work on the chorus girls, for the reason that the air brushes are used on the surface of the body, and for quick application the makeup is sprayed over the entire body. This prevents getting makeup on the costumes.

"By these methods the makeup department can turn out a chorus girl properly made up in less than two minutes. She touches up her own face, a process that requires about five minutes."

"The biggest problem in making up chorus girls is their knees," declares Westmore. "We usually either do that on the set or at least after we learn the sort of lighting and camera angles which will be used in the number they are to do."

See you tomorrow.

STOMACH ILLS

A Medical Opinion

"The ideal corrective for 'sour stomach' is calcium carbonate—a potential anti-acid, incapable of disturbing the normal action of the bowels and bladder, impossible of overdosage and perfectly safe to use."

—Your own doctor will confirm this quotation from noted medical authority.

A Powerful Anti-acid—yet Safe

Old-fashioned folks, not abreast with medical science, still take burning soda. Occasional doses may do no harm.

But Calcium Carbonate, in proper form, is the modern anti-acid: 2½ times as effective as soda, and is safe in its action and positive in its relief.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are the ideal form of Calcium Carbonate combined with other valuable healing ingredients. Medical authorities commend Stuart's formula as the only kind for use with children and best for men and women.

MANDEL'S CELEBRATES 75TH YEAR

Prices to Voice Store's Thanks to the Public

Mandels Relate Store Philosophy.

Five men, who guide the destiny of a store doing more than $25,000,000, told yesterday what it means to them when an institution commemorates its seventy-fifth anniversary.

The store is Mandel Brothers, and the story of its seventy-five years is an epic of pioneering courage, tested under every condition of prosperity and adversity. It achieved to its present prestige arm in arm with the city itself. Like Chicago, it has gone through fires and panics, good times and bad, sharing the experiences of the city and the people from whom it sprang. But listen to the descendants of the founders as they talk of the coming sale period.

FRED. L. MANDEL.

Fred. L. Mandel is speaking:

"The 75th Anniversary celebration started with a luncheon last Wednesday. It is not only an industrial, but also a great civic event, showing that Mandel's and Chicago have progressed together. We have planned this event, not as an ordinary sale, nor even as an extraordinary sale.

"The object is not so much store exhibition as giving consideration to the great part the public has played in the building of our business. Of course, marvelously low prices will be the major attraction for many visitors. Those who come on that day will have their fondest expectations answered."

In Vision, seventy-five years young, says that you must think in terms of living!

EDWIN F. MANDEL.

On the fourteenth floor of the Mandel Store is the office of Edwin F. Mandel. Thirty years of executive direction lend weight to his statements:

"Say for me that Chicago is going to have its eyes opened by this seventy-five day celebration. My only regret is that the three Mandel brothers who founded this institution could have lived to see the culmination of their efforts in this Anniversary. Fortunately the spirit of enterprise and enthusiasm has been kept alive and thriving by the new fellow-workers who obtained their original training in courtesy and public service under their eyes."

Such Friends and Goodwill.

It is easy to understand why Mandel's is so deep-rooted a part of Chicago's life when you know the present generation of Mandels and their willingness to do the impossible, if necessary, in order to gain goodwill and friends for their store.

FRANK S. MANDEL.

Frank S. Mandel says it is his simple fidelity to a simple fact that makes the store what it is today. "The store has grown in the hearts of the people because we have kept it in the service of the people and now it is ready to do its share in helping the city celebrate its greatest event. It is an event organized with no thought of profit as its primary objective. To-morrow Chicago will fully appreciate what Mandel's stands for. The prices will speak for themselves and speak much for my statement."

There will be other things of interest, too. The historical exhibit on the seventh floor will attract much attention. The store will take on the aspect of a great industrial and civic institution as well as that of a quality mart offering generous savings."

Robert Mandel states that "The Mandel store has served as many as 200,000 people on a single day. And it is expected that more than a quarter of a million will enter its doors tomorrow; a number large enough to populate the entire city of Louisville."

5 Generations in Family Buy at Mandel's

It was in 1855 that Mrs. Tenadore Ten Eyck, residing at Madison and Michigan Avenue, opened a charge account with Mandel Brothers.

The descendants of Mrs. Ten Eyck, who is now deceased, have clung to the practice of their mother and grandmother and great-grandmother and continue to trade at the "new store"—which is celebrating its 75th anniversary this month.

Becomes Family Tradition.

Mrs. W. G. Sholes, daughter of Mrs. Ten Eyck, in turn took her daughter with her to shop at Mandel's. And after the daughter, who is Mrs. George F. James, married, she followed the family custom of opening a charge account with Mandel Brothers. Mrs. James is the wife of Dr. George F. James, head of the Citizen's Military Training Corps and a former professor of English at the University of Michigan.

Three generations of Mandel customers in one family—and now a fourth and fifth! Mrs. Daniel Catton Rich, wife of the assistant director of the Art institute and a daughter of Mrs. James, shops for herself and her year and one-half old son, Michael James Rich, at Mandel's.

Store records show more than one hundred Chicago families who have had charge accounts open since before 1885.

LEON MANDEL II.

As Leon Mandel II. puts it:

"In 1925 we started preparing our store for the fashion trend which is so vital a factor in retailing today. We laid the groundwork then by recognizing the growing importance of high standards of style-rightness. The speedier translation of the smart style trends into merchandise at a moderate price was another important step. This sale will bring home to Chicagoans that we are in tune with the time—eager to serve public demand. That is why I say the curtain opens tomorrow morning on a great merchandising drama that has actually been in preparation for many years."

Exhibit Traces Chicago's Rise in 135 Years

Includes Tomahawk That Bought Loop.

A miniature but graphic history of Chicago, in the form of tomahawks, stage coaches, a prairie schooner and a machine gun, an early fire engine and model airplane is to be found on the seventh floor of Mandel Brothers. The exhibit, which is one of the most interesting features of Mandel Brothers' Seventy-Fifth Anniversary celebration, is a series of dramatic contrasts of the past with the present, including a replica of the Kinzie cabin, the Greenville treaty of 1795 and drawings for the World's Fair of 1933.

Among the fourteen separate displays which make up the exhibit are to be found case-book studies of Chicago's government then and now, its efforts at education, its land and water transportation, its police and fire protection, diagrams of its early systems and the arms and flags of its regiments. Each phase of Chicago's growth and development is clearly illustrated by representations of early methods in sharp contrast to the modes of today.

Mad Anthony's Tomahawk

The famous Chandler collection of Indian relics, loaned by the University of Michigan, is on display. The collection contains the original Greenville tomahawk given the Indian tribes by Mad Anthony Wayne on August 17, 1795, at the culmination of the Greenville treaty, in exchange for the six square miles of territory which were the first Chicago. This same area is now Chicago's Loop, whose value in millions can scarcely be computed.

Indian baskets, clothing, weapons and other handicraft are to be found in the collection, which also contains an authentic medicine slab, said to be the last one in existence. There are early maps of Chicago and also the famous Kempe plaques of pioneer heroes—Shaubena, de La Salle, Tonty, La Taupine, Talon, Joliet and Sieur de Frontenac.

Then too, there are models of the changing types of housing in Chicago during the last hundred years, from a model of the Kinzie cabin to the Palmolive, the Civic Opera and the Board of Trade.

Logs From Fort Dearborn.

The sixty-nine men who garrisoned Fort Dearborn were undoubtedly our original police protection. They defended six square miles of early territory. Police statistics tell about the 6,300 men who now defend Chicago's 210 square miles, with weapons of modern warfare, against Caucasian savages quite as merciless as the Indians ever were. Logs from Fort Dearborn, side arms taken from Chicago gunmen, and the machine gun used in the Saint Valentine day massacre complete this part of the exhibit.

It was not until 1837 that the citizens deemed it necessary to codify their ideas of orderly living. A photographic copy of our first municipal code which proclaims the collective will of our stout forebears, is to be seen also.

In the early days nearly every able-bodied citizen was a "volunteer fireman," which meant that he always slept with one ear cocked for the alarm and held himself ready instantly to jump into his boots and helmet for the dash to what early editors always called the scene of the conflagration.

Fire Engine of 1855

At the Mandel exposition is a quaint contraption called "Eagle No. 1," an early fire engine, dating back to 1855, which, we'll bet a bent cookie, has dashed down many a dark lane with the shouting vigilantes of another day. There was always a tidy niche aboard for a barrel of rum and a box of cookies. Beside the romantic old engine is a wizard's laboratory of wires, tickers, strange lights and other outlandish devices which comprise the latest in fire department switchboards, through which the present conflagree's alarmed cry is handled with neatness, and dispatched to the nearest station.

Then, too, there is an old stage coach which before the Civil war ran between Salt Lake City and Sacramento, California. It has been stopped and looted thirteen times by bandits or Indians, has suffered running fights and narrow squeaks too numerous to be remembered. Near it are neat models of iron behemoths which draw Baltimore & Ohio coaches farther in an hour than the stage could accomplish in a day. Overshadowing them both are maps of our newest air lanes, suggesting that Progress is stepping on its own heels.

You will come, no doubt, to the same conclusion that we did—it has been a busy 135 years!

75 Great Days to Celebrate 75 Great Years

SEVENTY-FIVE YEARS

"CHIC CHICAGOAN" SHOP IS THE WAY TO SMARTNESS

Mandel's has recently opened a "smart shop" on the fourth floor where women can get just the right things for all occasions speedily and without any trouble or worry. All you have to do is sit comfortably in a down-cushioned chair and style experts bring everything to you—the right dress, hat, purse, shoes and gloves to fit your budget and to assure the greatest amount of smartness and style rightness money can buy.

Women who have little time to assemble wardrobes, brides who do not know just what to buy for their trousseau, and the woman who wishes style advice have found the "Chic Chicagoan" Shop a great aid in shopping—a wonderful short cut to chic.

SHEFFIELD PLATE PROVIDES THRILL FOR COLLECTORS

Reflecting the prevailing classic spirit and the importance of the Georgian influence in the decorative arts, the collection of old Sheffield Plate on exhibition in the Antique Shops on the ninth floor of Mandel Brothers provides a rare treat for collectors.

The collection at Mandel's is unusually interesting, unusually comprehensive with its pieces for the tea table, for the desk, and for purely decorative purposes. Practically all pieces were made during the period between 1742 to 1845.

THE WEATHER

AT MANDEL BROTHERS

We wish we could be as certain about the weather tomorrow as we are about the remarkable values all over our store. But 75 years in Chicago haven't increased our influence with the weather man at all. So our advice is—let the weather man predict in vain. Be here rain or shine—the bargains waiting for you are worth coming through any kind of weather to get.

Chicago's Fashion History Shown in Souvenir Book

Quite a fitting selection for a valuable souvenir of Mandel's 75th Anniversary celebration has been made in an elaborate, illustrated Historical Booklet devoting its pages to summaries of the lives of famous Chicago women. The booklet is titled "CHICAGO FASHIONED" and, as the name suggests, it introduces some interesting highlights of people and fashions in bygone years. It is available upon request at the store.

Murals Portray Streets of Old and New Chicago

How Chicago's loop looked from 50 to 75 years ago is shown by a group of murals on the first floor of Mandel Brothers' store. There is the famous Woods' Museum, its intriguing sign picturing the world's fattest woman. And the old courthouse on La Salle street, with the Chamber of Commerce Building in the background. Likewise a view in 1851 of the Grand Central depot on Randolph street. In Sharp contrast is a magnificent panorama of Boul Mich, its spires and domes piling up Chicago's tremendous skyline.

Greeter Ends 58 Years in Mandel Store

E. G. HARDENBROOK

In 1872, when Mandel Brothers operated a little store, 50 by 100 feet, at 22nd and Michigan, E. G. Hardenbrook, the store's most famous employee, joined the organization to take charge of the cash boys. He rose to the position of assistant superintendent and, although he gave up active participation in the management of the store two years ago, is still active.

He's Reception Committee.

Today Mr. Hardenbrook is the company reception committee, greeting customers on the first floor as they enter the store.

Clerks whom Mr. Hardenbrook hired ten, twenty, thirty, forty and fifty years ago stop to chat with the old gentleman as they come in and out of Mandel's. Many of them are married with children and grandchildren of their own and are numbered among the store's charge customers. Among the cash boys hired by Mr. Hardenbrook at various times are such famous Chicagoans as Gen. Abel Davis, Alderman John Toman, Jacob Loeb, L. C. Greenburg and D. F. Kelly.

Imagine collecting a nickel from a group of boys to buy a wedding present! That's what Mr. Greenburg did in 1879 when Mr. Hardenbrook was married—assessed each cash boy 5 cents. A chair was presented to the boss for a wedding present, and the chair is still in use in Mr. Hardenbrook's home, one of his most cherished possessions.

"Men will stop me in the store and want to shake hands with me," says Mr. Hardenbrook. "I'll remember their faces but cannot recall them. Very often one of them will say: 'You hired me as a cash boy fifty years ago and I chipped in a nickel to buy you a chair when you got married.'"

Mr. Hardenbrook's reply is a cordial invitation to "come out and sit in the chair. I still have it."

Recalls Advent of Phone.

Radios and airplanes and other astounding inventions of a modern world are accepted with eagerness by Mr. Hardenbrook, although he recalls that the first time he was told to order goods by telephone he thought it a joke. Will Rogers, Quin Ryan and the Chicago Symphony Orchestra are his favorite entertainment on the radio.

Meeting old acquaintances, making new ones, being reception committee and head of the friend-making service of Mandel Brothers, makes life more than worth while to Mr. Hardenbrook—who is always a good fellow!

Seventy employees have been with Mandel Brothers more than twenty years. Alfred Johnson has seen 42 years' service; F. Lenhoff, 44 years, and N. Benson more than 40 years.

16 MODEL ROOMS HAVE ENSEMBLES FOR ALL TASTES

Pine paneling, maple furniture, the chintz and pewter of the Early American period, or the polished woods, tubular lights and low-swung chairs of today's mode—in the furnished rooms on Mandel Brothers' tenth floor you have your choice.

There's a girl's bedroom with crisp green organdie curtains; a boy's room in tawny red-browns with hangings of India prints. And flower pots done in paint run a gay race around the kitchen walls. These, and the early American living room, are in the budget house, with an Early American dining room whose wallpaper is an enchanting shade of blue. A sun room, and a bedroom are also included.

If you've a yearning for grandeur it will find response in the living room of the 18th century. Rich walnut paneling, tapestries, a Spanish leather chair in red effective against all the dark magnificence. And an 18th century dining room with blue wallpaper copied from that used in the Hawthorne home. A bedroom of the Directoire period, its painted furniture and pastel tones a fitting background for one of Watteau's lovely ladies.

A living room, bedroom and sun room done in the modern mode complete the exhibit. Hardwood inlaid with pewter is used for the smart low beds and chairs, with coverings of rose to introduce color. In the living room, 18th century bird prints marching up the wall on each side of window hangings are very much of-the-present. And the effect is good. Lighting is smartly done in tubular and disk effects. The sun room has something new in furniture of stick reed used entirely in horizontal lines, and fibre rugs with odd blockings in blue, red and steel-grey.

Modern Cinderella Shop Keeps Patrons Step Ahead

Original in design and decoration is the new Modern Cinderella Shop that Mandel Brothers opened on the eve of their 75th Anniversary. A very striking note is taken in the wall tint of cool pink, and the display cases in modern fashion.

Shoes a step ahead of the season's mode—shoes for every occasion, for every mood of young sophisticates, are featured in the Modern Cinderella Shop. Every characteristic of this shop is typical of Mandel Brothers' policy of introducing extraordinary sections and providing unusual appointments for them. This progressive spirit, seventy-five years young, has developed a truly absorbing "city of shops" in its building on the world's busiest corner.

$75,000 Tax Certificates Purchased by Mandel's

Mandel's has purchased upwards of $75,000 worth of city of Chicago tax anticipation certificates, according to Leon Mandel, II., general manager, who stated, "Purchase of these certificates is both an expression of our belief in Chicago and a sincere desire to show our interest to the many city employees who are our friends and patrons."

Army of 3,000 Serves 50,000 Patrons Daily

Speed!

Try to run a modern department store without it! Try to serve an average of 50,000 customers a day, with efficiency and dispatch, without taking advantage of every high-velocity aid that science provides!

This is the observation of J. L. Coyne, store manager of Mandel's. Mr. Coyne has been on the job at Mandel's for more than 36 years. Starting out as an errand boy at $4 a week, he today is the field marshal who directs the activities of the army of 3,000 men and women throughout the 14 busy floors.

"The founders of this institution would never recognize the Mandel's of today as the outgrowth of the store they started 75 years ago. But here we are governed by the law of change. Style and the times wait for no one. We have to be up-to-the-minute, from basement to attic, in our methods and in our merchandise, or we are out of the running.

Frequent Changes Required.

"So we make changes constantly. We are never finished. Two years ago we realized that our elevator equipment could be improved to accommodate 20% more people in the same period of time, with greater safety and convenience to our customers. So we tore out the 28 old elevators, one by one, without interruption to business. Two weeks ago the job was completed, at a cost of $1,500,000. Today our elevators are as modern as any in the world. With one lever motion, doors are closed automatically and the car ascends or descends quickly, stops exactly at the next floor level, where doors again open automatically. It cost us a million and a half to do the job, but it saves our customers a few seconds of their time. These elevators make about 4,000 trips a day, or a distance of about 300 miles.

"Speed plays an important part also in our delivery system. Wrapped packages are carried from our top floor to a sub-basement on a spiral conveyor. Here they are checked and then dispatched through an underground tunnel to our depot on Franklin Street, where a fleet of 124 delivery trucks waits to speed the customer's purchases to her home. Every day 10,000 or more packages are handled in this manner. Some of them are sent by truck as far as 65 miles from the loop. In a year these trucks cover more than 1,500,000 miles and burn up about 100,000 gallons of gasoline.

As Much Electricity as Rockford.

"We use 21,000 tons of coal a year generating our own electricity for the store, which consumes as much in a day as is required to light a town the size of Rockford, Illinois.

"One of the most important features of department store operation is the training of sales people. Mandel's has a training department in which every new employee is given a thorough course in the correct methods of meeting and dealing with customers."

Add 600 Workers for Sale.

More than 600 extra salespeople have been engaged for the seventy-fifth anniversary sale, Mr. Coyne said. Most of them have been on the job for the past few weeks, getting ready for the big selling event which begins tomorrow.

Each day has its quota of human problems, the store manager pointed out.

"We never can tell what's going to happen in dealing with 50,000 people every day. But we have come to anticipate certain things. Every day, for instance, ten or more children will stray away from their parents and get lost. Then we have to set about bringing them together again, safe and sound.

"Many mothers 'park' their children in our playroom, which is under the care of a competent nurse. One mother not long ago—and this is hard to believe—left her child in the playroom while she made her shoping tour. Six o'clock came, but no mother. She had forgotten that she had brought the child along with her, and went home alone. She phoned frantically, but in the meantime the nurse was taking the child home in a cab."

Store of 1930 a Monument to Early Mandels

Founders Are Set Back Twice by Fire.

Today, the great store of Mandel Brothers stands serenely at State and Madison streets—a monument to the courage of its founders, the Mandel Brothers. It bespeaks little of the epochal struggles of those men who won for their establishment and themselves a high place in the world of business. But behind Mandel Brothers store, as we Chicagoans know it, is a story that parallels the history of Chicago itself.

LEON MANDEL.

Established 75 years ago, Mandel Brothers, the great merchandising house of today, owes its position to the spirit which refused to accept defeat. The founders—Leon, Emanuel and Simon Mandel—were twice burned out within three years, each time with terrific losses and twice they rebuilt their shattered fortunes to rise eventually to success.

Imigrated After 1848 Revolt

We have to go back to a little German country, the small Rhenish Palatinate, and farther still to a little town of Kerzenheim to arrive at the background from which the founders sprang. There in this little village of less than a thousand souls lived Faber Mandel, his wife and sons. Then came the revolution of 1848 that set that part of Germany in a turmoil and precipitated the great emigration to America. First, the eldest son, Solomon, set out far across the seas to Chicago accompanied by his mother's brother, Simon Klein, and shortly after Mrs. Mandel left her homeland with her three younger sons for the new country.

SIMON MANDEL.

When the Mandels arrived in the growing metropolis of the middle west, Chicago was just an overgrown village of about 60,000. That was in 1852. The boys began their careers as clerks, Leon Mandel working as a cash boy with Ross & Foster, then one of the largest dry goods stores west of New York for the princely sum of $2 a week! This continued for about three years when Solomon Mandel and his uncle pooled their interests to open a dry goods store at Van Buren and Clark streets under the name of Klein & Mandel.

Present Name Since 1865.

That was the real beginning of the firm, in the year 1855, that was one day to grow up to be one of the largest concerns of its kind in the country. Shortly after the opening of the new store, Leon and Simon Mandel joined the firm as clerks in the store, and were later taken in as partners. Solomon died, and the firm, originally styled as Klein & Mandel, became known in 1865 as Mandel Brothers.

EMANUEL MANDEL.

Mandel Brothers was prospering when Mrs. O'Leary's cow kicked over a lantern in a barn on DeKoven street and started the Great Chicago Fire of 1871 that wiped them, and a good part of Chicago, out. They had to start all over again and they could find no better temporary location at first than the corner of 22nd street and Michigan avenue.

Burned Out Second Time.

The following year they built a store of their own at the corner of State and Harrison street, moved in, and gathered about them their old customers. Then disaster descended upon them once more—hardly before they had really recovered from the previous set back. In 1874, they were swept into oblivion again by a fire that destroyed several blocks of the south side.

But again the plucky brothers persevered. They opened a store on Washington street between State and Dearborn streets and again they rebuilt their fortunes. From then on their fortunes changed. They moved into a new store at 123 State street and gradually, little by little as their prestige grew, they added to this store—a store that after 75 years, marked with heroic struggle on the part of the founders, ranks as one of the greatest establishments of its kind in the world.

MANDEL'S 75TH YEAR

HERE IT IS! The GREATEST EVENT in MANDEL'S HISTORY! It's ANNIVERSARY WEEK

"SHAGMOORS!" You Say "At THESE Prices?"

These Two Shagmoor Coats Are Fur-Trimmed . . and they're only

$55

We think these Shagmoor coats must have had a peek into certain Paris workshops just before the Spring Openings—because they've burst out already with all sorts of things from the most famous models! The narrow belt, for instance (a Vionnet trick), on the coat above, left . . . and the use of Opaline pink (that Patou is so proud of!) in the tweed fabric of the other, at the right.

As for the Furs . .

They appear nonchalantly—as smart fur does this season—in banding sometimes . . or in flattering collars. Not at all the sort of furs accustomed to be on coats tagged just $55—fox and squirrel mostly . . . warm enough to break cool Spring winds . . . but not heavy enough to worry you on warm days later! Sizes from 14 to 44.

Mandel's Misses' and Women's Coats—Fourth Floor—Olympia Sports Shop—Third Floor.

Upon Request, All Charge Purchases Made During Anniversary Week Will Be Charged on April Statements—Payable in May.

Well, It IS Pretty Unusual--BUT--This Is Mandel's 75th Anniversary!

You see, we wanted you to be thoroughly astonished at the fashions we had for the Anniversary—and we thought that the NEW Shagmoor coats—exclusive at Mandel's in Chicago, and known the country over, would be pretty astonishing at only $35 and $55! So we planned them for a surprise—and here they are, in the exclusive Shagmoor tweed-like fabrics for Spring . . . unperturbed (as always) by thought of future situations that involve wrinkles—or moisture—or dust, but a little excited themselves to be in an event like this—because they've never been in one before!

Three Shagmoors Are Untrimmed . . .

and they're only

$35

If you have an untrimmed coat in your wardrobe (particularly a Shagmoor!) you'll be one of those smart persons who will be serenely unperturbed by undependable weather—who'll be terribly self-satisfied at any daytime affair . . who'll be one of those jaunty souls who can wear an Ascot scarf— and be nonchalant about it!

One Is Fitted . . (Sketched just left)

Chanel's little fitted topcoat, that's been a tremendous success—probably because it makes you look slim and young—and very 1930! Sizes are from 14 to 20.

One Has a Belt . . (Sketched at center)

Vionnet might have had a hand at this . . because it's her favorite belt, worn right at the normal waistline. It has the casual saddle shoulders and amazingly practical pockets. The sizes are from 14 to 44.

One Has a Yoke . . (Sketched far left)

Not the ordinary kind of a yoke at all—but one that starts at the shoulders and curves down to give a flaring effect to the skirt. And sizes are from 14 to 44.

French Noble Gives Chateau to the Sorbonne

Home of Cardinal Nou for Professors.

By May Birkhead.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS.—[Special.]The duc de Richelieu has just given his handsome chateau to the Sorbonne to be used, with its extensive grounds of something like 1,000 acres, as a place where Sorbonne professors may go for repose. Despite having two handsome chateaux in France, the duc de Richelieu spends most of his time in America, being part American through his mother, who was formerly Miss Heine of New Orleans, and having married an American, the former Eleanor Douglas Wise of Baltimore.

The chateau, the gift to the Sorbonne, lies somewhat off the beaten path of tourists. Although it is in the region of the Loire, the famous chateau district, it is just far enough south of the marvelous ruins of Chinon to involve a sharp detour. Furthermore, the chateau itself, despite its associations with the great cardinal, has been inaccessible to the public, although the handsome park about it might be visited.

Built in 17th Century.

Cardinal Richelieu, when ordering this structure in the seventeenth century, built a grandiose rectangular palace, somewhat on the order of the Palais Cardinal, or Palais Royal, in Paris. He seldom lived there, and all the original buildings except the outside pavilion were demolished early in the nineteenth century. The famous marble table from this chateau is now in the Louvre.

The duc de Richelieu is a descendant of the cardinal's family, and belongs to a highly individual line of this clan. It was a duc de Richelieu, so much in evidence in the latter half of the eighteenth century, who made Bordeaux wines so popular in Paris. The next duc de Richelieu emigrated to Russia during the French revolution, and remained there for many years, becoming a great friend of Czar Alexander I. and was for many years governor of Odessa.

Premier Under Bourbon Rule.

During the early Bourbon restoration he became premier, and it was through his ties with Czar Alexander I. and his repute with the duke of Wellington that the occupation of France by foreign armies ended in the year 1818.

The present duc de Richelieu, who happens to be in New York now with his wife, has another residence in France in the town of La Ferte Bernard in the department of Sarthe, between Paris and Brittany. This property passed to the cardinal about 1640 and remained in the family until the revolution. It will be remembered that the present duc de Richelieu's mother first married the late Prince Albert of Monaco, from whom she was divorced.

Artist Entertains.

Alfred Kotz, the Chicago artist, who spends much of his time at his Brittany chateau, now has a Paris studio, and is painting the portrait of Mrs. Carleton Holdredge. Mr. Klotz and his wife have just given a big dinner at the Interallied club, having the Holdredges among their guests.

Another Chicagoan who had a portrait painted recently is Mrs. Livingston Fairbanks. The painter was the American artist, Alfred Orr, who is also doing a portrait of Ambassador Walter E. Edge's wife. Mrs. Fairbanks gave a party for friends to see the portrait, and then went to the Riviera to spend a few weeks.

Mrs. Gertrude Morse Webster and her small daughter are sailing for home after five months in Paris. Mrs. Webster plans to spend the summer in Chicago.

Society Maids Pick Britishers for Husbands

By Nancy Randolph.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

NEW YORK, March 22.—[Special.]—There have been quite a few marriages of late between our New York girls and Englishmen. Not only did Alastair McCormick marry the exceedingly wealthy Miss Emery, sister of Princess Dmitri, the one time Audrey Emery, but only a few days ago John Ormonde Lawson-Johnston married Mrs. Lyman B. Kendall of Washington and New York.

What I would point out, however, is that this is not the younger English generation. Far from it. Ally McCormick is more than in his thirties and J. O. Lawson-Johnston will never see—if not, fifty, then—forty again, and I'm being kind.

It's rather strange, but the pre-war generation of Britishers is much more interesting than the post-war lot. The older men are as well known here as in their own London. There are no end of Englishmen of mature years and slim purses who are persona grata all over town, and they have a better time here than they do at home.

Third Venture to the Altar.

But I was interested to note that, while every one spoke of Lawson-Johnston's first marriage in England, no one mentions his second marriage—for his recent union with the widow of the immensely wealthy Lyman B. Kendall was J. O.'s third venture to the altar.

From Lawson-Johnston's first marriage, with the wealthy daughter of a man in trade, came young J. O. Lawson-Johnston who married Barbara Guggenheim. Upon the father's divorce his wife left every penny of her money to young Lawson-Johnson. The elder Lawson-Johnson then married a girl who was quite well known in London—but whether the marriage ended in divorce or not I have not heard.

Now that he has married Mrs. Kendall that was, J. O. Lawson-Johnston will be able to enjoy his London once more ,and again make the round of the clubs, where his somewhat colorful remarks have long been famous. As one wit remarked on the avenue this week: "I say, Lawson-Johnston is simply in his element now. He's skipping from one Rolls to another."

"Aida" for Students.

The students fine arts committee did quite a job on Friday, when it stage managed the performance of "Aida" at the Metropolitan for the instruction of many young musical students who could not otherwise afford to attend the opera.

The whole huge place was sold out, with the result that the committee is planning to give more performances during the year. Many noted people bought boxes and then donated them for the use of the young music lovers. Among them were Mrs. Myron C. Taylor, Mrs. Christian R. Holmes, Mrs. W. Watts Sherman, Mrs. George C. Fraser, Mrs. Marius de Brabant, Mrs. Jeremiah Milbank, Mrs. Charles V. Paterno, and Mrs. Anthony Paterno.

Included among the patrons and patronesses were Mrs. W. Bayard Cutting, Cornelius N. Bliss, Mrs. Courtlandt D. Barnes, Mrs. Devereux Milburn, Mrs. James F. D. Lanier, Russell C. Leffingwell, Mrs. Walter B. James, Mrs. William L. Harkness, Mrs. John S. Merritt, Harry Harkness Flagler, Mrs. George Nichols, Mrs. John S. Rogers, Mrs. Adolf Pavenstedt, James Speyer, Mrs. Whitney Warren, Mrs. Lucius K. Wilmerding, Princess Henry of Reuss, and Mrs. John R. Delafield.

Gossip About the Isabels.

The sight of Isabel Townsend Pell's brown countenance on the avenue today reminds me that town is full of gossip concerning her bosom chum, Isabel McMillan, who is at present sojourning in Paris.

The two Isabels are among the most famous of our bachelor girls. Isabel Pell has a penchant for newer and bigger cars, not to say a word about more colorful ones. When I saw her on the avenue she was ensconced behind the wheel of the hugest phaeton I have ever seen. I wondered just how she managed to go around corners. But then I've seen her holding up the Fifth avenue traffic while she backed her bus to make a better turn into 46th street and the Ritz. Does she detest the interest she arouses? No and double no.

But about Isabel McMillan. For a long time she and Isabel Pell shared an apartment and did their hunting together, like all good bachelor girls. Then McMillan decided that Paris offered her a much wider scope and she forthwith packed the handbags and departed in company with Princess Helena Murat, the one time Helena Stallo. Helena divorced Murat some time ago, after the scion of the noble house had been imprisoned for various unusual actions. Helena was forced to open a restaurant on the Riviera and eke out an existence of some sort for herself and her child.

Helena and Isabel McMillan lived together in Paris, went on tours together and in general were great friends. All the time Murat was giving Isabel a huge rush and his ex-princess didn't seem to mind. However, the news that is going around town now is that Isabel succumbed to the lure of the title, if not of the man, and has gone and said "I do."

Those who have inquired have discovered that she denies positively having foregone her bachelor existence, but the news will not down, and furthermore she and Helena are no longer friends. From the way her friend Isabel Pell is beaming I think there is more than just smoke to the matter. But I shall know more later on in the week.

Annual Charity Carnival.

Lent will barely be over when the charity carnival will burst upon us. The annual affair in aid of the Judson Health center will take place as usual at the Garden and on the 29th of next month.

This year the motif will be "romance" and the pageantry will depict famous lovers of history and literature, from Antony and Cleopatra, Aucassin and Nicolette, Pocohontas and John Smith to Priscilla and John Alden and Napoleon and Josephine.

Mrs. Arthur B. Claflin and Mrs. Edward F. Hutton are honorary chairmen of the carnival and are to personally supervise the activities of a thousand social and theatrical lights who will take part. All the Broadway notables will send members of their theatrical casts to perform and there will be a huge fashion show as well.

At present the choosing of committees is going slowly. An advisory committee has been formed that includes A. J. Drexel Biddle Jr., Col. James A. Blair, Irving Brokaw, Frank Crowninshield, Condé Nast, Esmond P. O'Brien, Charles S. Sargent, Henry W. Taft and Elisha Walker.

Another Belgravia Dance.

The Belgravia idea seems to have caught on. So huge a success was the first of the Belgravia dances at the Park Lane that I hear there is to be another at the end of April. The ruling that only full evening dress be worn by men does not appear to have had an adverse effect. Every one in town thought the last dance the jolliest of the season.

A new committee is being formed which is to include H. R. H. Prince George of Russia, Mrs. Sumner Taylor, Mrs. S. Stanwood Menken, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Content, and others. I am inclined to believe that next season will find white ties and swallowtails absolutely the thing at all the dances and parties in town.

Aiken Sports Feel Effect of Weather

AIKEN, S. C., March 23.—[Special.]—Rainy weather has interfered somewhat with both golf and riding here. The residents of the colony are commenting upon Miss Jean Regan's riding, particularly in the competition held at Ivanenko field. Miss Regan promises to be the outstanding girl star at exhibitions this summer.

Mr. and Mrs. George E. Kent have arrived here from Florida and are occupying the cottage they have leased. Mr. and Mrs. Joseph W. Wilshire have departed for New York.

Mr. and Mrs. Dudley Clark and Forrester Clark of Dedham, Mass., are guests of Mrs. Duncan A. Holmes, while Mrs. Walter Eaton is hostess to Mrs. Joseph Gould Remick. Margaret Ladenburg is visiting her uncle, Joseph Stevens.

Martin Quigleys Among Chicagoans at Pinehurst

PINEHURST, N. C., March 22.—[Special.]—Visiting here are Mr. and Mrs. Martin Quigley of Chicago, who were among the dinner guests recently of Mr. and Mrs. Harry J. Davenport of New York.

Others here include Mr. and Mrs. Richard Tufts, Mr. and Mrs. Herbert D. Vail, William H. Todd, Mr. and Mrs. George Betts, Mr. and Mrs. D. L. Chamberlain, and Mr. and Mrs. George Kremer.

Madame X. Leaves California; Bids Good-by to the Sea Lions

By Mme. X.

LA JOLLA, Cal.—[Special.]—The X. family, by the time this reaches your eye, will have turned its back on sea lions, pelicans, California's beautiful coastline with its background of pink and purple mountains, and all that lures even the mortal of scantest pocket book to make the long journey hither. I don't believe any nation has two such strikingly different boundaries as has our own United States of America. I don't mean geographically different. A profound intellectual difference in mental outlook exists between, say, for instance, New York and California. The Empire state represents the ultimate word in the practical and financial development of today. California, on the other hand, has an expression of youthful romance and hopefulness quite unknown in the industrial and commercial east.

Age, here, for instance, doesn't mean at all what it does to us. The horses of California could easily foil the expert eastern horse judge if the latter were taking the equine's teeth as the customary age gauge. I am told that the barley fed horses of this part of the land keep their teeth so much longer than do our oat fed animals that the mouth of a twenty-year-old California animal looks younger than that of an eight year old one with us in the east. So it is with the people here. They have a young and eager look which doesn't seem to depart with years.

The most remarkable person I have met since I left home is Miss Ellen Browning Scripps, ninety-three and a half years young, frail, vivid, eager, and more up-to-date than many a woman half her age, in the east. She is the dominating personality out in this part of the country.

Youthful in Outlook.

Today in all its aspects is none too young for her luminous intelligence to understand and sympathize with its many manifestations. For you and me it is hard to disassociate the soviet experiment, with its tremendous effort to exalt the mass above the individual, from what seems to us its bloody methods. But this remarkable woman, on the brink of eternity, has a clear enough vision to see beyond today's horrid cruelty and suffering to a something new and glorious that I, for one, can't envision, I confess. In the few minutes' talk which I was permitted to have with her she half opened the door to something she believed lay ahead of humanity, though she, too, admitted to a horror of much that comes out of Russia in the way of information.

What I want to present to you, however, is not Russia or humanity's progress, but the fact that this extraordinary woman, almost finished with our earthly concerns, is nevertheless completely up to the moment and looking at life with as clear and eager an eye as any youthful visionary. Her eyes, by the way, are her most striking feature; the eyeballs are large and rather prominent, and the look out of them is even now keen and searching. She must always have been a hard woman to fool, though an easy one to interest in new and worth while enterprises.

She has done much, not only for La Jolla, but for all of southern California. To this town she has dedicated an important group of enterprises at the south entrance, on the road from San Diego. These are all what is described as architecture with a Mediterranean motif, which suits the landscape as no other could. The straight, simple lines, the fine proportions and the mellow cream color of their plaster walls harmonize perfectly with the semi-tropic verdure and the beautiful background of sea and mountains.

Community Is Benefited.

It might be in Greece or southern Italy that some potentate had erected these classic buildings to exalt his fame. Instead, it is in the greatest democracy in the world that a single woman has created a collection of thoroughly up to date structures and laid out playgrounds entirely for the benefit of the community in which she makes her home.

In this group on one side of the wide roadway are the Scripps Memorial hospital, the Scripps Metabolic clinic, the Scripps physiotherapy department, the Scripps nurses' home, while on the other is the Bishop School for Girls, the children's playground, the La Jolla Woman's club, and the chapel or church, with its industrious chimes that sound every fifteen minutes between 7 a. m. and 8 p. m., eager to tell the world as to the passage of time, even though the bells are not in perfect tune.

The clinic is said to be one of only five in the entire U. S. A., and quite perfect of its kind. I know that this member of the X. family gave it a chance to make maps of the X. interior. We admire their technique, though we had no idea that inside we looked just like that. But a pleasanter lot of people doing mysterious things than those doctors and nurses we never met up to now. Before we got through we almost began to understand what metabolism was, but now, thank heavens! we've entirely forgotten.

We do remember that they attempted to suffocate us to find out how much oxygen we needed; and that they nearly electrocuted us in the name of studying the action of our blood vessels. Also, they attempted to bleed us to death [a quite painless end it would have been] several times. But each time we foiled them and came out much alive at the end of the ordeal, with, moreover, a keener understanding of the emotions of some of those who have either gone through the Spanish inquisition or been assisted out of this mortal existence at Sing Sing.

A Charming Home.

I am, however, departing from my topic, which is Miss Ellen Browning Scripps. I forgot to mention that her home is one of the charming buildings that make the above mentioned group on the outskirts of La Jolla. It has a superb sunroom overlooking the sea and mountains from its three glass sides. Here its mistress spends much time, I fancy, though when I saw her she was lying on a sofa in her study.

Her many benefactions to La Jolla include also a fine museum, the Scripps Institution of Oceanography, where the many mysterious denizens of the Pacific ocean are studied by scholars especially dedicated to this department of natural history. The general public finds it an interesting place to visit, as many strange finny monsters and sea goblins are shown there in arrays of glass tanks such as the Shedd aquarium will soon have on view for us in Chicago.

These Pacific ocean critters are a strange looking lot. Some of them, as they glide slowly around viewing their visitors, usually with an air of profound disapproval, look remarkably like people you and I know, but we won't say who.

Besides founding and endowing these enterprises at La Jolla, Miss Scripps has contributed many valuable things to the zoölogical gardens at San Diego, including a clinic for animals, where their needs and maladies can be studied with a view to promoting their welfare. There is a natural history museum also in this park, in which Miss Scripps is actively interested.

One of her latest undertakings is Scripps college, which is a part of Pomona university at Claremont. This is for girls, and was begun by an up to date dormitory, in which all the latest ideas for such a residence are being carried out. It isn't just a dormitory; it is a charming residence for students. To this are now being added other buildings, colleges.

The idea in this college is to turn more to English ideas as to what a university should be, which includes a shift of emphasis from the curriculum and the program of studies to the individual. Just as the same garments do not fit the same students, so the same mental attire does not suit each student. In this institution the ideal is to foster individuality and cater to the trend of development which will best bring out the real personality of the youth or girl seeking knowledge and education. It is an interesting experiment and one well worth study on the part of all American educators. We are so dedicated to mass production that we are prone to carry it out in directions where perhaps it does not produce the best results.

NEWS OF CHICAGO SOCIETY

Comes of Interesting Family.

Miss Scripps is English by birth, her father, the late James E. Scripps, then a widower, having brought her and three other children over on a schooner from England when she was about 6 years old. Later he married an American woman, by whom he had five other children. The family settled in Rushville, Ill. In the course of time the sons, when they grew up, established a series of daily papers which were most successful. Associated with them in this were the Booth family of Detroit, and the Scripps-Booth names were spread from Detroit westward to the Pacific coast. Miss Scripps was a member of the staff of one or more of these papers, in which she made a name for herself in the newspaper world.

She has traveled a long path, one that has led continually upward, and now it is as if she were resting on a high mountain, looking out over a world from a height few mortals reach and with a clear vision that still fewer attain. At least, that is the impression she made on one lowly newspaper woman. With those pale, wide open eyes she sees the goal of the Russian leaders of today; she sees whither we Americans are headed; she sees life as a splendid procession going to some unknown, but most desirable goal, and it is to show other women what one of us has accomplished that I give this sketch of this the most remarkable woman I have ever met.

At this moment there comes to me an extraordinary and overwhelming realization: I have lately been reading several of the recently published lives of Queen Elizabeth of England, in which her likeness has appeared in many guises. Miss Scripps looks enough like these portraits to have sat for some of them. There are the same striking eyes; the aquiline nose; the proud and decided mouth, and the air of stately self-confidence.

One of the monuments that adorn La Jolla is set in the grounds of the Bishop's school at the entrance to town. It is a charming little fountain representing a child, done in green bronze, kneeling at the brink of a fountain and facing a semi-circular seat of stone on the back of which is inscribed these words: "A gift from San Diego to La Jolla as a memorial of Ellen Browning Scripps."

Chicagoans in California.

Chicagoans keep dropping in at La Jolla at the House of Tomorrow, on the tip of old Solidad's toe, friends who have been motoring to Palm Springs, to El Centro, and other nearby points. The latest to appear here were Mrs. Ernest Hamill; her sister, Mrs. Ambrose Cramer, and Miss Anita Blair, who are all spending these early spring days at Pasadena. Miss Blair is there with her parents, the Henry Blairs.

Two former Chicagoans, Mrs. William P. Nelson, and her cousin, Miss Bessie Cudahy, also stayed over a day or so here on a motoring trip through this lovely region. They are both now well intrenched residents of Santa Barbara's charming suburb, Montecito, where is to be found the largest Chicago colony on the continent.

Returning home in the near future from La Jolla is Mrs. Clyde M. Carr, who has been spending four weeks on the brink of the Pacific ocean at the House of Tomorrow. She plans to take a most interesting trip this summer on a ship that will take its passengers in the most comfortable fashion possible to that most uncomfortable of all countries, modern Russia. That is, Russia is without the ordinary amenities of daily life to which we Americans are accustomed and can't have there unless a traveling agency conducts us. Mrs. Carr is taking this trip with the Charles Boydens, and the excursion will include Denmark, Sweden, and Norway.

It sounds delightful. The tourists will be taken in de luxe fashion to the Russian capital, Moscow, and also have a glimpse of its old chief city, once St. Petersburg, later Petrograd, and now Leningrad. Perhaps, when its present dictator, Stalin, dies the name will again be changed to Stalingrad. It would be interesting, but confusing, to have the name of the national capital changed, after the death of each despot, to his name.

Apropos of Russia, have you seen a little pamphlet written by Oswald Garrison Villard after a visit he made last summer to Russia? He is a radical and believes in a pretty complete change from individualism to collectivism, yet even he can't quite stomach the prevailing methods of today's reformers in Russia. The remedy evidently seems to him worse than the disease. The pamphlet is called simply, "Russia from a Car Window." Miss Scripps read it and through a sister-in-law of hers it came to us.

Chicago Society Treks Northward as Florida Season Comes to Close

By Mildred Jaklon.

WITH the close of the Florida season, Chicago society has moved northward and westward to align itself in a different pattern of geographical arrangement. The hunting crowd is at Aiken, S. C., where the strenuousness of riding pell mell over brush and through brambles is being enjoyed.

At Virginia Hot Springs, and White Sulphur Springs in West Virginia, there are contingents of Chicagoans whose tastes are better suited by a less hardy régime of outdoor life. They ride along well kept bridle paths and roads, and their sports clothes are more delicate in type and texture than the British looking tweeds of the hunters.

Bermuda Still a Favorite.

The California sojourners are staying put, with occasional arrivals augmenting their number. Many of the young people who are at finishing schools and colleges in the east are being taken for fortnight holidays trips to the springs, or to Bermuda, where bicycling and leisurely driving or walking are favorite diversions. There are other quotas of fashionables in the dude ranch regions of Arizona and New Mexico, and some at the gulf coast resorts in Mississippi.

The Chicagoans at home are more numerous now than they were earlier this year, as many have returned from winter vacations. The most interesting events of this week's calendar seem to be crowded into this afternoon. The Alliance Francaise is having a reception for Mlle. Jeanne de la Mare, the charming little French woman who has been delighting smart audiences with a series of talks on "Man, a Cosmic Being," held at Mrs. Rockefeller McCormick's, Mrs. Walter Borden's, and Mrs. Chauncey Blair's residences. She will speak on "The Rosicrucian Influence on French Contemporary Civilization."

Irish Free State Rules Emigrant's Passage Tax Free

DUBLIN.—(AP)—The practice of Irish-Americans of sending money to enable relatives to emigrate to the United States raised a curious point of law just decided by the Saorstat high court.

The Cunard company sells in America certificates which can be exchanged by the recipients in Ireland for steamer tickets. A large proportion of the steerage passengers have had their passages thus provided.

The Free State revenue commissioners ruled that the profits on the passages were profits of trading in Ireland and so liable to tax here. The Cunard company appealed to the high court where it was held that, since the contracts were really made in America, the Cunard company was not liable to Free State income tax on them.

FLOWER ENTHUSIASTS, VOTERS GATHER

Show, Luncheon Attract Two Club Groups

Woman Suffrage Sees Tenth Birthday.

By Roberta Nangle.

TWO affairs of widely different intent but of equal interest to a large number of women are scheduled on this week's club calendar. The fourth annual Chicago Garden and Flower show, which will open Friday at the Hotel Sherman and continue until April 5, will attract club members from all of the nearby districts. Another auspicious occasion will be the luncheon on Wednesday at the Palmer house at which members of the Cook County League of Women Voters will gather as part of the nation-wide celebration of the tenth anniversary of woman suffrage and the tenth year of the league.

The Illinois Federation of Women's Clubs is to play a large part in the flower show activities. Garden departments of the federated clubs have been gratifyingly successful since their organization, a year ago. Under the leadership of Mrs. Charles E. Caldwell, state garden chairman, and Mrs. J. Marc Fowler, state president, garden department members are to direct the amateur section of the flower show. Ninety clubs have entered competitions, with nine separate exhibits divided into the following classes: 73 table decorations, 40 bud and bark, 27 floral or fern arrangements for room decoration, 39 miniature home grounds, 62 garden of flowers poster competition, 46 flower arrangements in shadow boxes, 20 sun parlor decorations, 20 exterior window boxes and 19 interior boxes.

Club Women in Attendance.

In addition to the club competitions the federation will take charge of show activities, which will necessitate the assistance of several hundred club women. They will conduct the tea-room service and the cut flower booth, and programs will be sold by members of the junior auxiliaries. There will be hostesses to receive visitors and to answer the innumerable questions of the garden fans. The federation will also provide a lecture program with speakers on every phase of gardening.

The state executive board will meet on Thursday and Friday and will attend the formal opening of the show. Most of the board members will remain until Saturday to attend a luncheon to be given at noon in the Bal Tabarin for officers of the federation, state and garden chairman, and representatives of all the clubs competing in the show.

The luncheon of the Cook County League of Women Voters will be one of numerous similar affairs to be held at the same time by leagues in 45 states. A radio program, with talks by Miss Belle Sherwin, Miss Katherine Ludington and Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt, will be broadcast over the chain by the National Broadcasting company. This celebration is to be the opening event of the national league's entire anniversary program, which will culminate in the national convention in Louisville on April 28.

Two Noted Speakers.

The broadcast will be followed by a Cook county program with Mrs. Catharine Waugh McCulloch and Miss Julia Lathrop as the principal speakers. Both these women have long been prominent in public affairs in Illinois. Mrs. McCulloch, who has been practicing law since 1890, became interested in woman suffrage as a student and became president of the Rockford College Equal Suffrage association in 1887. In 1890 she was elected chairman of the legislative committee of the Illinois Equal Suffrage association.

As president of this association she organized a systematic tour of the entire state by automobile as part of the campaign which resulted in the limited suffrage bill passed in 1913. Her topic at the luncheon will be "Our Debt to the Suffrage Workers."

Miss Lathrop, who will speak on "The League of the Future," was president of the Illinois League of Women Voters from 1923 to 1925 and is now a member of the national board of the league. She was appointed by President Taft as head of the children's bureau in the department of labor in Washington, and was reappointed by Presidents Wilson and Harding.

Play Will Be Given.

Another feature of the program will will be the presentation of a play, "Not Guilty," by Mrs. Harold Wood, based on the question of women on juries. Mrs. Gerhardt Meyne is chairman of general arrangements for the affair, Mrs. John Merrill Baker, chairman of tickets, and Mrs. William G. Hibbard, program chairman. Mrs. Eric W. Stubbs, president of the Cook County league, will preside.

CLUB ETHICS . . . . By Maude Swalm Evans

"THAT was a good report the finance chairman gave yesterday," observed the suburban member as she lingered at the club with a group of friends. "I guess she's had a time keeping expenditures within our income this year. We seem to have acquired some members who would be exceedingly generous with the club funds if they were allowed to have their way."

"It's a good arrangement to have all requests for money go to the finance chairman before they're brought to the club," voiced the long time member. "She knows just how much is available, according to her budget, in each fund."

"I was particularly interested in the way she ended," commented the committee member. "You remember, she said, the club had never had a deficit during its thirty years of existence. She emphasized the fact that the policy of never exceeding its resources was established in the beginning and always lived up to."

"I belong to a club that went a thousand dollars in debt in one year," recalled the visiting member. "The funny thing was it was in that club I learned about budgeting my own income. We took up the study in the home department and continued it a whole year."

"Evidently those who had charge of the club's finances weren't in the class," decided the committee member. "What did you finally do about the debt?"

"We elected a new finance chairman, for one thing, and she cut as much as possible from the appropriations. Then we all knuckled down and worked—gave frolics and parties, charging a moderate fee, and we had lots of fun doing it. By the end of the year the debt was entirely wiped out."

"I suppose your finance chairman was rather unpopular when she cut down the appropriations," suggested the long time member."

"She mentioned that when she gave her annual report and she declared that she'd rather be unpopular than in debt."

Question.

"Our club objected to action taken by our board and refused to allow the minutes to be read that would have explained the action. Was the club within its rights? ANN P. M."

Reply.

The club was within its rights, but it was not courteous.

Question.

"Should the chairman ask for the negative votes on a motion of thanks to one who had rendered service to our club? M. R."

Reply.

The chair should never put the negative of a complimentary motion.

Art Critic Meditates on Windmills and Manners

Modernism Is Often Matter of Expediency

Good Taste Endangered by Acquisition.

By Eleanor Jewett.

AND now for a tilting at windmills! A Joan of Arc character is out of place in 1930 unless a pungent flavor of Don Quixote lights up the sterling qualities Mark Twain saw no need of taking from the lady.

Frederic Clay Bartlett with the greatest polish in the world set up a few of provocative windmills in his talk the other evening on modernism before the Association of Chicago Painters and Sculptors. For instance, he entirely neglected every element in modernism except its gayety. He selected Raoul Dufy as the most proper exponent of the movement and for sparring partners he introduced Gauguin and Van Gogh.

Dufy, as explained by Mr. Bartlett, was an unfortunate illustration because it is impossible for any one else to follow him unless he is the father of thirteen children and the possessor of various female relatives. As Dufy, because of his children and grandmothers, now owns a yacht and a pleasant estate on the south coast of France and a more than satisfactory income, perhaps his methods should be explained as they were detailed in the talk. Dufy was not always popular. In fact he and his numerous infants and the relatives were living in approximately one room and were down to their last crust when chance intervened.

In Cleaning Out the Paint Box.

Raoul was cleaning out a box of water colors, his last, in despair, intending to give up painting at which he could not make a living. He dotted the paint from his box here and there and at random made various patterns with the flecks of color. A friend dashed in:

"Ah, Raoul! What are you doing? Marvelous—marvelous——"

And with scarcely a word of consent from M. Dufy he darted from the room, the damp picture in his hand. You can imagine the Dufy children sitting in a circle, mouths open, eyes aghast; the grandmothers knit; Madame Dufy puts more water in the soup. An hour passes. The friend clashes in again.

"Sold! It is sold, my dear Dufy! Look, here are twenty francs!"

And that is not all. The dealer wants three more at once. Dufy clean out another box of water colors [or the same box over again—that point was a little obscure] and with the three new pictures the friend dashes to the dealer and Dufy spends the time while he is gone in buying bread for his family.

Back comes the friend on the dead run.

"Raoul, dear fellow. You are a success! He took all those and wants thirty more. He wants them at once. Hurry!"

Family Helps Out.

Even for a man who makes pictures by cleaning up paintboxes, thirty at one time, and at once, was something of an order, but Dufy was equal to it. He rushed out and visited every tourist agency in Paris. He seized upon folders and illustrated matter relative to travel from the north pole to the equator—a huge bundle of it—and rushed back home, stopping only to buy a chain and a hook. Think of the subtlety of his mind. He could reason out even the least link in this great conception that had dawned on him. He did not forget that pictures need some basis other than man's imagination.

Fortified by soup and bread he found his family still seated in an expectant group waiting for him. Rapidly he strung his travel data on the chain, attached the chain to the hook and hung the lot to the ceiling. He opened the windows for the breeze to blow the papers about.

"Now, my little ones, my lambs," said he, "and you, too, wife, and grand'mere, take boxes of paints—this and this and this—arm yourselves with brushes and make me pictures. Look at the pictures on the chain how they turn and blow. Make me your impressions of them."

It was not long before a stack of pictures lay before Dufy. He sorted the pile and chose the best. He fixed the thirty up a bit and signed his name. The impassioned friend wrung his hand, took charge of the finished paintings and departed to the dealer who bought them all. More orders came in. Dufy raised his prices, developed a temperament and a bank balance. Today none of his thirteen children have to paint pictures, but think how useful those thirteen pairs of hands were to him in the beginning. So to play a brilliant part in this variety of modernist effort one must start with a family big enough to count.

Gauguin and Symbolic Feet.

Then Gauguin and the feet of the women of Tahiti. Another windmill raised by Mr. Bartlett in the kindest way. The idea back of it was that the unfettered feet of the native woman typified the spirit of today and so Gauguin purposely made them larger even than nature, to be in harmony with the spirit of the age.

There is something wrong about that. The spirit of the age—this age of machinery—has nothing to do with bare feet. In fact, bare feet are an anomaly. Mr. Bartlett rather derided by gesture the shoes of civilized people, but where should we be today if we did not put leather between the soles of our feet and the asphalt and macadam of our streets? How much chance would a barefoot woman have of getting across State street at Madison any noon? How much chance would she have in a shopping crowd? What chance would a man have? And what do our leading pediatricians say about children's running barefoot? Even that freedom in summer is frowned on now by the latest teachings of science. Therefore Gauguin in the particular of big bare feet was far in the rear of his time.

Then Van Gogh and the color of his people—that violent color he delighted in. With his mentality it would have been extraordinary if he had not loved and used strong colors. The lower the mentality the greater the appeal of color. We have not much farther to look than the Negroes and Indians. Mr. Bartlett, in fancy, placed a Van Gogh beside a Rembrandt and the parity of the two was striking, so we were assured. A Van Gogh beside a Jules Breton might have been more two of a kind. Both painting peasants, Van Gogh flowery, highly keyed; Breton solidly human, greatly sane. This, mind you, not to belittle Van Gogh, for many of his pictures are powerful and even brilliant, but he is as uneven as other men and possibly more so than most because of his erratic mind and troubled spirit.

Becomes an Acquired Taste.

Then consider modernism, as this lecture gave it, an acquired taste. Olives are an acquired taste; so are oysters. In acquiring tastes something is invariably lost. It seems a pity if a taste for modernism can be acquired only at the cost of the loss of good taste. Highly spiced food precludes an appetite for plain cooking. Which is the healthier? Let modern science answer.

A simplification of dress, diet and living are the characteristics of today to counteract the speed we live at. Modernism brings exaggeration and confusion. It denies the normal. Modernism is not a cheerful terrier racing along a dusty road with a high bark and a wagging tail. Indeed, it is not. Gayety is not its predominate characteristic. Are Modigliani, Chirico, Matisse, Picasso or Derain childishly gay? Dufy is, often, but he no more typifies modernism than does Robert Lee Eskridge, who is a gay souled Chicago modernist, one of the blessed ones.

The question penetrates far deeper than Mr. Bartlett's speech. It goes beyond anatomy [a bone that stuck in the throat of the lecturer's argument and refused all medication]; it goes beyond color; it goes beyond sense. The question of modernism is more nearly a question of good taste than of anything else. It is a question of standards. Too many painters are making it a question of expediency.

Don Quixote and Joan will now retire from the platform.

Exhibits Open at Art Institute.

One of the three important exhibitions which opened last week at the Art institute was the superb exhibit of paintings by Delacroix. It was with great pleasure that one noted that several of the most beautiful and stirring canvases are owned by the museum.

Delacroix was a master at portraying horses. Horses, lions, tigers in the heat of the fight or the calm of repose were magnificently depicted by his fertile brush. His color is brilliant; his action swift; his fingers well drawn and well modeled. His mastery of anatomy [and without this the painting of animals in particular is a farce—one can do better with ignorance when man is at stake] is clearly shown in the group of drawings which are hung in the gallery succeeding the paintings.

The international water color exhibition at the Art institute is a triumph. It is startlingly successful. From the room where Charles S. Chapman holds one in thrall to the magic of color, through the other galleries where hang the works of Pop Hart, Robert Lee Eskridge, Winold Reiss, Mabel Hall, Bertha Martini, Louis J. Walter, Louis Weiner, Charles Demuth, Heitland, Louis Bailly, Emil Arnim, Lloyd R. Jones, Elina Nutting, Harry Alan Weston, Helen West Heller, Robert Blum, Benjamin West, Walt Kuhn, Thomas Benton, Glen Mitchell, and countless others from our country and abroad, there is not a dull moment. It is an alive show—colorful, amusing, vivacious, varied, and extremely well hung.

The third exhibit is that of glass and rugs, and it, too, is unusually interesting.

Pictures for Children's Rooms.

In the children's museum is a fascinating exhibit of colored fashion plates loaned from the collection of Mrs. Helen Benton Minnich of Minneapolis. New acquisitions of the children's room are "A Rabbit," by Maurice Bardin, presented by Frank G Logan, and the "Running Colt," by Renee Sintenis, the gift of Charles H. Worcester.

In the Carson, Pirie, Scott galleries a splendid exhibition of paintings by Pauline Palmer opened last week. It is a group of brilliant canvases. As a portrait painter Mrs. Palmer is one of our best; as a landscape painter she is remarkable; as a genre painter she is superb. She has a running use of color which makes her canvases glow. She is a craftsman and an artist. Her pictures are eminently livable. "A Rainy Day" and "June Roses" are two exquisite canvases; one falls in love with them at first sight.

"The Studio, Provincetown," and "The Golden Altar" are larger and more formal paintings, but both possess a rare beauty. The portraits of the various little children are entrancing. One can hardly tear one's self away from the brown curly-heads. The infant is cherubic. The little old-fashioned girl in "Mother's Bouquet" and "The First Trip" is a demurely charming creature.

The various still life arrangements of glass and fruits and figures are each in turn beautiful. Mrs. Palmer has a knack at texture and details, and her still lifes are as vivid and personal as the portraits. It is a stunning exhibit and will continue to April 5.

News of Art and Artists.

The fine exhibition of paintings by Stark Davis, E. Martin Hennings, Carl C. Preussl, Edward T. Grigware, John Nolf, J. Jeffery Grant, and R. F. Ingerle may be seen at the Chicago Galleries, 220 North Michigan avenue, through March 25.

Chicago's first antique exposition will take place at the Drake hotel from April 21 to April 25, and promises to be one of the interesting events of the spring.

An exhibition of early drawings by masters of various schools and countries is current in the Ackermann galleries.

Three magnificent examples of Corot are on view at the O'Brien galleries.

The All Illinois Society of the Fine Arts is sponsoring an exhibit of paintings by Edna Vognild and Robert P. Kilber in the Revell gallery.

A memorial exhibition of etchings and lithographs by Hedley Fitton, R. E., is announced in the Marshall Field galleries.

The Anderson galleries are showing an exhibit of paintings by Edward Bruce. Portraits in sepia by Rafael Sanchis Yago may also be seen in the Anderson galleries.

"THE FIRST TRIP," by Pauline Palmer, one of the several fascinating paintings of children in Mrs. Palmer's current one-man show at the Carson, Pirie, Scott galleries. This exhibition is one of the most brilliant and diversified to be found at the moment in Chicago. Landscapes, still life, interiors, portraits and figure studies contribute to the interesting array. Pauline Palmer's brush is versatile and her skill uncanny. She is a leading figure in contemporary art. The exhibit will continue to April 5.

Australians Import Fur Bearing Rabbits

SYDNEY, Australia.—(AP)—The prohibition against importation of rabbits has been lifted and fanciers are importing fur bearing bunnies in great numbers, in the hope of establishing a new industry.

Most of the newcomers are of the Angora and Chinchilla long haired types and some of the bucks are valued at $1,000 each.

It is hoped that the common rabbit can be exterminated or crossed with his aristocratic fur bearing relative and thus changed from a pest to an asset.

Turks Ban Teachers from Beauty Parlor

ANGORA.—(AP)—The Turkish minister of education has taken a complicated way of telling school teachers of the nation to be simple.

Orders were given last year forbidding school marms to use rouge or wear silk gowns. Now a new ministerial decree proclaims:

"The punishment of removal from their posts shall be inflicted upon teachers of both sexes whose visages are indicative of too prolonged sojourns in beauty parlors."

Seek Hebrew Subtitles.

TEL AVIV, Palestine.—(AP)—Movies with subtitles in Hebrew are advocated by the "Language Defenders' league." The only films shown here have French or English subtitles, but small screens at the side carry translations into Hebrew.

Keep Juveniles from Court.

LONDON.—(AP)—Juvenile courts have been reorganized so that young offenders are no longer brought into London police courts. They go before women magistrates, who conduct informal proceedings as little like a courtroom as possible.

Premiere of Polish Opera Gala Event

National Flavor Charms Gotham Audience.

By Joan King.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

NEW YORK, March 22.—[Special.]—New York, according to the best figures available at the moment, numbers among its polyglot population some 162,000 Polish folk, but apparently official program makers hereabouts, at least of the musical world, have just awakened to this fact. At any rate the music of Poland has remained neglected.

In fact, that opera, "Halka," which has been acclaimed as "the first truly Polish opera," standing, according to one commentator, in relation to the lyric theater of Poland as Glinka's "Life for the Czar" does to that of Russia, had never been heard here until Sunday evening last. On this occasion it was brought to light by the Polish Opera company under the patranage of the Polish ambassador to the United States, Tytus Filipowicz.

With the great Mecca auditorium decked in American and Polish flags, the national anthems of both countries being sung, and the audience which filled the hall largely comprised of compatriots of the singers, the event took on a gala tone.

The opera, which is the work of Stanislaus Moniuszko, is in four acts. Its first performance was in Warsaw in 1846, when the composer was but 26 years old. Sunday evening's offering proved it to be a melodious work, modeled after the older Italian style. The score has a large degree of national flavor, however, especially the "Mazur" with which the first act ends.

Those who heard the Polish Opera company at Mecca, seemed well pleased with the performance. The cast included: Jan Steszenko, Zofja Halska, Valentine Figaniak, Genia Zielinska, Stanislaus Wyszatycki, Leon Ciesiuch, William Kostecki, Stanislaw Martuszewski, and Frank Martin. Walter Grigaitis directed and Lunita Nestor, assisted by G. Volodin, was the premiere danseuse.

IT'S INVISIBLE DIRT THAT RUINS A LOVELY SKIN

THE tiny particles of dust which you do not see, the little specks of grime which superficial cleansing cannot remove, those are beauty's deadly enemies. Unsuspected, and therefore doubly dangerous, hidden dirt clogs the skin; it leads to ugly blackheads and enlarged pores.

But this hidden dirt can now be easily removed. Dorothy Gray has perfected a remarkable liquid cleanser called Texture Lotion. Texture Lotion picks up every invisible particle of dust and grime; it cleanses thoroughly, searchingly, and yet it does not dry the skin. Texture Lotion removes greasiness after any sort of facial cream has been used, leaving your skin exquisitely clean, cool and fresh.

And besides—Dorothy Gray Texture Lotion refines the texture of the skin. It keeps the pores small, and it reduces enlarged pores to their normal size.

Don't let hidden dirt and conspicuous pores ruin your lovely complexion! Dorothy Gray Texture Lotion will guard the beauty of your skin, and increase it. You will find Dorothy Gray Texture Lotion at the Dorothy Gray salons and at all leading shops.

Two sizes: $1.00 (4 oz.) and $2.00 (10 oz.)

In a lovely old house in Paris is the newest of the Dorothy Gray salons, where you are most cordially welcome. Conveniently located at number 34, Avenue George V, expertly staffed by skilled operators, the new Paris salon offers you the same Dorothy Gray treatments so justly famous in America.

Luncheons, Receptions for Delegates.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON.—[Special.]—Although there has been a lull in the political activities of the naval conference, the wives of the delegates have not been allowed to obtain much full in the entertaining which is still being done for them, though there have been fewer luncheon parties and tea parties of late to give them opportunities for shopping, picture gazing, and exploring old London.

The reception at the foreign office was a formal affair which, nevertheless, turned out such a jolly party when dancing was begun later in the evening that most of the guests had almost to be turned out at midnight. Mr. and Mrs. Stimson, with the other American delegates and their wives, were there, the principal delegates having dined first with Mr. Henderson, the foreign minister, at the foreign office, while Mrs. Henderson had been host No. 10 by the prime minister for a ladies' dinner party. Every one admired the gilded ceilings of the foreign office reception rooms, the gold and red brocade hangings, and the singularly pompous and official looking lift to the first floor, where the entertaining suite is.

The following night Mr. and Mrs. Stimson were guests of honor at Viscountess Astor's dinner party, when a number of people had been asked to meet them, and around the long table in the lovely Adams dining room were the Spanish ambassador and the Marquesa de Merry del Val, the Belgian ambassador and the Baroness de Cartier de Marchienne, the Danish minister, Senator and Mrs. Robinson, Senator and Mrs. Reed, Mrs. Dwight Morrow, Mrs. House, Mrs. Miller, Lord Berners, the artist and musician whose music figures in the new C. B. Cochran revue; Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Glasgow, the marquess of Hartington, son and heir of the duke of Devonshire, the earl and countess of Cromer, and the marquess and marchioness of Salisbury.

Lady Astor, by the way, has been enduring the noise of housebreakers next door in St. James square, where a house was completely pulled down to make way for modern flats.

Women's Societies Entertain.

Two prominent women's societies have given small receptions to the women of the delegations lately, the London and National Society for Women's Service, to the secretaries, and the British Commonwealth league to the wives of the delegates as well as some of the secretaries. The former society was able to use the new hall that was a present to them from Annie, Viscountess Cowdray, which is in the fashionable little Tufton street, Westminster, and has woodwork of the new natural colored oak. Miss Elizabeth Scott, the designer of the much criticized new Shakespeare Memorial theater at Stratford on Avon, was an interesting guest.

A great many of the hostesses at the reception given at the Suffolk galleries by the British Commonwealth league, who wore white tickets, spent their evening vainly searching for their appointed guests, who had green tickets, as each guest had been allotted a hostess so that no one should feel left out. An excellent idea this, once hostess and guest find each other.

Mrs. Train, Mrs. Taylor, Mrs. Yarnell, Mrs. Pringle, Mrs. Hilary Pratt, and Mrs. Burnett were some of the American women who watched with amusement the Morris dances done by young men in white trousers and shirts and gay ribbon scarfs, and young women in red country dresses, such as are still done in English villages on special occasions on the village green.

Quiet Weddings Popular.

The last bride of importance to follow the new fashion for sudden and quiet weddings, with no bridal finery and the guests summoned the day before by telephone, has been Lady Doria Hope, daughter of the duke of Newcastle, whose wedding to F. B. Childe took place recently at Christ church, Down street. The bride, who worked for $30 a week as assistant in a New York sports store and lived in a Greenwich Village apartment until an English friend gave away her identity, was married in a sand colored tweed coat and skirt with a jumper to match, a long coat of the same color, and a beige felt hat. The young couple have been honeymooning in Italy.

Miss Teresa (Baby) Yungman, daughter of Mrs. Richard Guinness, has been chosen to represent Pollaiuolo's "Picture of a Lady" at a matinée of tableux of famous pictures in the exhibition now at Burlington house, to be held at the Prince of Wales theater on April 11. This picture is on the official poster of the exhibition, and Miss Yungman has been chosen for her striking likeness, which many of her friends have remarked upon, to the original. Lady Diana Duff-Cooper has promised to depict one of the famous madonnas in the exhibition.

Needlework Exhibit.

Mrs. S. A. Ionides, formerly Miss Silliman of Chicago, has sent a silk rag rug about 150 years old to the exhibition of the Embroiderers' guild at Walker's galleries, Bond street, in which Queen Mary was much interested when she paid a visit there.

When Chicago Was Young

By Herma Clark.

Letters from Martha F. Esmond to her friend, Julia Boyd of New York.

Chicago, Jan. 15, 1870.

DEAR JULIA:

I have been making, or trying to make wax flowers, and have stayed at my task too long. I'm not an artistic person, anyway, and my roses look like the last ones of summer. I feel like thrusting all I have done into the fire, for I can't think they will ever amount to enough to be put under a glass dome on the parlor mantel. I saw yesterday at Mrs. Jesse Spalding's a lovely wax piece, consisting of apples, pears, peaches and grapes, most lifelike, resting in a wax dish—a real triumph of art. But I shall never be able to achieve anything like that.

Will says some of the present day wax pieces could be worshipped by any church member, without violating the Scriptural injunction against idolatry, for they are not like anything that is in the heaven above or in the earth beneath, or the water under the earth.

Indeed, my respected husband is quite sarcastic about all our feminine foibles, shuddering with disgust over the various protuberances of our costumes. He is especially severe on my appearance with a shawl over my pannier, and calls it a deformity.

But to return to our own fashions. I read lately in a fashion column that lamé lace jackets and casaques would banish shawls this season. I thought it an opportune moment, when Will was so hard on shawls, to order a Bedouin mantle. I presume you have seen them in New York, as I notice they are exhibited at A. T. Stewart's there.

Really, I do love our fashions this year, don't you? Mrs. Hopson is showing the new Tyrolese hat—a high, rakish looking felt, dented in at the top, and I fell victim to its charms. Some of these hats are trimmed with an enormous steel buckle, with a standing ostrich plume, but mine is a modified form with a puffed brim and drooping aigrette.

Will and I have just been laughing over a column in THE TRIBUNE, written by Peregrine Pickle. Peregrine Pickle's real name is George P. Upton, and he is most amusing. Every one looks forward to his essays in the Sunday issue. He is a music critic and a delightful man. He often drops in to see us on Sunday afternoon, and we are proud to have such a literary light on our list of acquaintances.

His column today is a dream of Chicago in 1970, and I'll copy a little of it for you, the paragraphs we thought most striking.

"I dreamed I stood in the city of Chicago in the year of our Lord 1970. Not where the city stands now, for the heart of the city was in Calumet. Ten million souls of various descriptions inhabited it, and land below Calumet was selling for $9,000 a front foot. Acre lots could be purchased more cheaply, if a person was willing to live a little out of town, say near Kankakee.

"The male population of the great metropolis was in a condition of abject wretchedness, having been for nearly a century ground under the heel of Tyrant Woman. The most industrious were able to make a few dollars by taking in washing, or scrubbing public buildings.

"My guide, a stout, honest, good natured woman, mentioned several places I should see—'The Erring Men's Home,' 'Home for Indigent Bachelors,' and 'Refuge for Decayed Gentlemen.'

"My guide, knocking the ashes from her cigar, nudged my elbow, and called my attention to a fine looking fellow, who was passing. 'Deuced pretty, isn't he? Wonder who he is?' she said. The poor young creature overheard the remark and, casting his eyes modestly on the ground, hurried on.

"My guide hailed a curious looking machine coming toward us through the air at a frightful pace. It stopped and in an instant we were drawn up into it by some unseen power, and off went the machine through space."

Mr. Upton does love to joke about the dangers attendant on Women's Rights of which we hear so much these days. But he really seems to think there will sometime be a conveyance which will sail the skies, as ships now sail the seas, and he and Will discuss the matter often. Well, we have so many wonderful inventions nowadays, anything may be devised, I suppose.

Before I close I want to tell you of an amusing remark, supposed to have been made by a great lady of our city recently. Perhaps she never said it, but she is rather a Mrs. Malaprop, and any slip of the tongue is likely to be attributed to her. Her husband is one of the successful business men of our city, but I will be discreet and "name no names," as Sairy Gamp would say. This grande dame told a friend of ours, according to his story, that her husband once attended a fancy dress party, "clad in the garbage of a monk."

But I must add that there are fewer Mrs. Malaprops here than in any other city of its size anywhere, I believe. I am always so proud of my Chicago friends.

Much love, dear Julia, from your old friend,

MARTHA FREEMAN ESMOND.

Footnotes

Woman suffrage was beginning to be, in 1870, a mooted question, and George P. Upton's raillery showed the trend of masculine thought on the subject. Mr. Upton was the first musical critic in Chicago to speak with anything like authority. His dream of the airship seems prophetic.

Mrs. Hopson was the milliner to Chicago's fashionable set in the seventies, and maintained her preëminence for many years. Her shop in later times was on Wabash avenue near Randolph street.

The Jesse Spalding family has played a great part in Chicago history. Mrs. Charles Spalding of Scott street is a daughter-in-law of this pioneer; Mrs. Robert McElwee of Lake Forest is a daughter. Vaughan C. Spalding and Mrs. John Coleman of Lake Forest are grandchildren. Mrs. Adele Harris Whiting is a granddaughter. Mrs. Hugh McKennon Landon of Indianapolis is a daughter.

LIQUIDATOR BATTLES CHAOS IN FINAL HRS!

Dear Folks:

I want to have a heart-to-heart talk with you. I have written much to you about this great store, and have tried to tell you all about the sad plight that it was in. But now I'm going to talk plain, as I would to my own brother.

There is still over $1,000,000 worth of beautiful merchandise in this gigantic building, and every stitch of it must be sold by Midnight, March 31st. I secured this job because I promised to liquidate everything. It has been up to me to make the prices. The next 7 days mean success or failure.

I just cannot afford to be a failure, so I have gone through the store and insisted that every price in this building be reduced. Half price . . . less than half price . . . I don't care what price. Everything must be sold. You'll never have another opportunity like this. Store hours tomorrow are 9 A. M. to 6 P. M.

Around the PACIFIC

To the Orient, Java and South Seas...on the great MALOLO

THIS year, another Around Pacific Cruise by the great Malolo! Twelve countries and 19 ports of the mysterious East and exotic South Seas will be visited.

Japan and China, of course—with shore excursions to ancient cities and shrines. Historic Manila in the Philippines. Teeming Singapore in Malaya, Bangkok in Siam, Batavia in the East Indies. You'll shop leisurely in quaint Macassar in Celebes. You'll spend delightful days in modern Australia and New Zealand, primitive Fiji and Samoa, and colorful Hawaii.

While America is facing early winter, you'll be "down under" the equator where it is balmy summer. You get back home for Christmas—your Christmas shopping already completed in the Orient's fascinating bazaars.

Assuring you perfect arrangements, the Matson Line operates this second cruise in cooperation with the American Express Company. Your cruise ship is the 23,000-ton Malolo, holder of Pacific speed records, one of the world's finest liners. She sails from San Francisco September 20 and returns December 19.

There is but one cruise Around the Pacific—the Malolo's! Owing to the wide interest in the first cruise last year, we suggest early reservations. Membership is limited. For folders and stateroom charts, ask the Matson Line, American Express Company or your travel agency.

Spiritual Life in Universities Offers Problem

Lutheran Educator Sees Church College Need.

By the Rev. John Evans.

HOW members of the rising generation may carry their religion through university unscathed is a problem vexing religious leaders. It is asserted that college experience breaks in on a modern youngster's life just at the time that parents and spiritual leaders should be putting the final touches on the adolescent's religious structure. All too frequently, it is pointed out, present day university experience makes it difficult for one to be both educated and religious.

In general, two lines of attack on the problem have arisen. The first is the founding of colleges and universities with semi-private or private funds in which the policies and teaching standards are under direct supervision of religious leaders. The second attack is still experimental, and thus far the results of it cannot be estimated. It is an effort to recast the methods of religious education of young people in their earlier years in order to ease the intellectual and spiritual jolts administered by present day secular colleges and universities.

Related to the second attempt is an expanding of courses in religion in practically all secular colleges and universities during the last few years. There is also growing coöperation between college faculties and leaders of elementary religious education in many denominations. Such a movement, it is said, will tend toward making religious education a series of smooth successions up to the point when degrees are conferred.

This movement would be most satisfactory to a great section of American religious leadership if it could be proved that a quart of knowledge about religion is equal to a quart of religion. It is further maintained by religious leaders that religious experience will not stand the analytical spirit pervading present day universities any more than a flower will remain a flower when reduced to pistils, stamens, sepals and petals. The function of religion in life is the reverse of analysis, they declare, and hold that religion takes the "parts" of life—takes the sepals, petals and other parts—and relates them into a fragrant unity.

In a two day meeting of last week, held by the National Lutheran Educational conference, it was affirmed by President Otto Mees of Capital university, Columbus, O., that tax supported schools do not dare concern themselves with religion. President Mees defended the maintenance of church colleges on the ground that religion is a fundamental element of life to which all other pursuits should be related.

"It is an alarming symptom," the university president pointed out, "when we know that so many young people frankly attribute their loss of faith to their college or university experience."

QUESTION BOX

The Rev. John Evans, religious editor, will suggest answers to questions of general religious interest in this column. Anonymous questions will not be considered. Contributors are requested to confine their questions to fifty words.

Guides for Early Christians.

B. V. H., Chicago, writes: "So the full New Testament was not completed until many years after Christ's death and was not fully authenticated for about 300 years, and that but few script copies were in existence in this period—or until about 1600. If so, what guides for faith and discipline did Christians have? How did Christianity survive without the Scriptures for all but 400 years of its existence?"

It is hard for us to see how religious experience and symbols of faith among individuals and communities could be conserved and communicated when few could read, fewer could write, and with printing and paper uninvented. It is important to remember that memory is stronger and "word of mouth" quotations more accurate among people so deprived. It may even have been an advantage to the spread of the Gospel for considerable groups to have learned the story by rote. Few manuscripts would thus care for multitudes.

Present day Christianity is divided as to what constitutes "Church." Perhaps I am safe in assuming that each of the two general, but conflicting understandings of it—Catholic and Protestant—rests ultimately on modes of faith founded on the life, suffering, death, resurrection and diety of Christ. The word "Catholic" I am extending here to include the various bodies holding claim to some form of historical authority, such as the Roman Catholic, Greek Orthodox, Anglican, and others. "Protestant," for the purpose of this reply, includes all bodies with origins in the reformation which took place shortly after and partly as a result of the invention of printing.

It is thus apparent that both questions refer almost wholly to "Catholic" Christianity. The question, I take it, asks: How could faith be conserved, spread, guided and discipline administered without a definitely authorized and written New Testament?

1. In addition to "word of mouth" repetition and the strong teaching letters of such leaders as Paul, a definite church authority was developed or accepted before the end of the first century. The scriptures grew because there was a church to produce and preserve them.

2. Based on what is understood as the Founder's institution, the church at once came to use powerful conserving media known as sacraments. The sacraments brought into play the earliest mode of communication. It is a mode that conveys ideas and values from group to group as readily, and perhaps more accurately, than written words. I speak of drama. Drama, among other things, may express corporate memory, and as such is involved in the sacraments. It may not be altogether wrong to define a sacrament as a "drama—plus." Just what and how much the "plus" means I am not at liberty here to attempt to state. Guides of faith and discipline could thus be administered by the custodian of the sacraments long in advance of the written New Testament.

NEWS OF CHURCHES

THE REV. DR. F. C. EISELEN.
[Toloff photo.]

President Eiselen of Garrett Biblical Institute, Evanston, announced last week a tentative program for the observance of the 75th anniversary of the seminary. The dates of the anniversary coincide with commencement, June 8-11. Garrett is one of the three largest Protestant theological seminaries in America.

Catholic Tells of Exploration of Central West

Father Siedenburg Cites Work of Hennepin.

INFLUENCE of 17th century missionaries in the explorations of the central west was related before the Chicago Historical society last Friday night by the Rev. Frederic Siedenburg, S. J., of Loyola university. Father Siedenburg especially stressed the work of Father Louis Hennepin, the discoverer of the falls in the Mississippi river, which he named for St. Anthony of Padua. St. Anthony's falls is between Minneapolis and St. Paul.

Father Siedenburg is the founder of the school of sociology at Loyola, which is the first school for Catholic social workers in America. He is also the president of the Illinois Catholic Historical society and vice president of the board of directors of the Chicago library.

If it had not been for Father Hennepin there would have been no details left concerning La Salle's voyage through the great lakes and their connecting rivers, Father Siedenburg pointed out.

"In 1678 Father Hennepin accompanied La Salle and Tonti to and through the Mississippi valley," said Father Siedenburg. "The Chicago Historical society has a copy of the rare book telling of the explorations. Although the book is full of exaggerations, it is of value because it pictures the life and habits of the Indians of the northwest."

The book relates that: "These vaste countries are so full of prairies that it seems that this is the element and the country of buffalos. The meat is very succulent. In season you see herds of two and even four hundred."

The Holy Name cathedral men's choir and boy choristers, directed by the Rev. Philip F. Mahoney, will sing the "Missa Solemnis" of Pietro Yon at the solemn mass at the Holy Name cathedral at 11 o'clock today. The soloists will be Master Rosario Lombardo, Master Edgar Strong, Edouard Dufresne, and Earl Alexander. The proper of the mass will be chanted by the Quigley Seminary Plain Chant choir, directed by the Rev. Edwin V. Hoover. Father Hoover will preach on Anglicanism, which will be the third of his Lenten series, "A Catholic Looks at Protestant America."

The Rev. James J. Mertz will preach on "The Secret of Success; Christ and Education" at the evening Lenten devotions.

On Wednesday Father Mertz will preach on "The Plain Gold Ring—Christ and Marriage."

The meeting of the Catholic Writers' guild which was postponed because of Lenten engagements from March 19 will be held Thursday night. The Rev. Dr. James Magner, professor at Quigley seminary, will speak on "Modern Rome."

The new $60,000 Lincoln Memorial Congregational church, 65th street and Champlain avenue, will be dedicated this afternoon. The Rev. Dr. Ernest Graham Guthrie, director of the Chicago Congregational Missionary and Extension society, will preach the sermon and the Rev. Dr. Ernest B. Allen, Oak Park, will offer the prayer of dedication. The Rev. L. A. Scott is pastor of the church.

The Rev. Walton E. Cole, pastor of the Third Unitarian church, 5521 West Lake street, this morning begins a series of four sermons on psychology and everyday life. The first sermon will be on the subject, "Building an Attractive Personality."

"The Power of the Individual" will be the subject of an address by the Very Rev. Duncan H. Browne, dean of St. James cathedral, Cass and Huron streets, before the annual spring meeting of the Brotherhood of St. Andrew, Episcopal laymen's order, at St. Chrysostom's church, 1424 Dearborn parkway, tomorrow night.

The Right Rev. H. P. Almon Abbott, bishop of Lexington, Ky., and former rector of St. Chrysostom's church, will be the speaker next week at Lenten noonday services being held at the Garrick theater by the Church club.

Rabbi George Fox of the South Shore temple will be the speaker at the evening service of the South Shore Community church, 74th street and Yates avenue, this evening at 8. Dr. Fox will take as his subject "A Jew's Interpretation of Jesus."

Every one of the 2,000,000 communicant members of the Presbyterian churches in the United States is asked to give one full day's wages or income to the benevolences of the church on "Great Commission day." The estimated income of the members is more than $11,000,000 daily. The general assembly authorized the observance today as the 1900th anniversary of Christ's charge to his disciples to go into all the world and teach the gospel to all nations.

In accordance with the plan of the general assembly, the 10,000 Presbyterian churches are asked to have special services at which their members are to dedicate at least one day's receipts, or some other gift, as evidence of each member's devotion to the evangelization of the world. Emphasis will be laid in the utterances from the pulpits upon the fact that Christ always had the whole world in view in all his ministry, and that it was this world commission that he passed on to his disciples and thence to present day Christians.

The Rev. Dr. Cleland B. McAfee, moderator of the Presbyterian general assembly, will preach this morning at the Bethany Presbyterian church, 1847 Humboldt boulevard.

Herman Cohen, chairman of the educational committee of the Chicago Loop Orthodox synagogue, 110 North La Salle street, announced that the synagogue will launch its educational program with adult classes in Hebrew. The first session will be held tomorrow noon at the synagogue. Rabbi Elias Ganze will be in charge. The classes will include conversational Hebrew, writing and the study of classics.

Those desiring to attend the classes will register at the synagogue office prior to the first session. In keeping with the regular custom of the synagogue, no charge is being made for the enrollment and no qualification is necessary other than the will to attend the classes.

then turn to Today's Want Ad Section

Clue: This picture represents one of the Want Ad classifications in today's Want Ad section. Decide which classification you think the artist had in mind and then run through the ads under that heading in the Want Ad section to find Wanda's first hidden Want Ad. The first hidden Want Ad will tell you where to look for the next one, and so on. Read the simple directions and start now!

What Want Ad Classification Does This Picture Represent?

CAN you follow a trail? Do you like games and puzzles that make you use your wits? Here's the game you've been waiting for! Here's a golden chance to beat Sherlock Holmes at his own game! Want-Ad Wanda challenges you to follow her through the Want Ad columns of today's Tribune. If you haven't played the game before, get in on the fun today! And if you played it last Sunday, try your skill at trailing Wanda again today.

Just Follow These Simple Directions

In today's Want Ad columns of the Tribune there has been inserted a number of mysterious Want Ads. These Want Ads look exactly like regular Want Ads except, of course, the wording is different. All together there are between 10 and 15 hidden Want Ads. You are invited to hunt for these hidden Want Ads and try for the $100.00 in cash prizes which the Tribune will pay.

The game starts with the picture on this page. This picture represents one of the main classifications of Tribune Want Ads. Decide which classification you think the artist had in mind and then turn to that classification in today's Want Ad section. Look through the Want Ads under that heading until you find Wanda's first Hidden Want Ad. You can't possibly miss it.

All Clues Are in Sequence

After you have found this first hidden Want Ad, read it over carefully. EACH HIDDEN WANT AD GIVES A HINT OR CLUE TO THE HIDING PLACE OF THE NEXT ONE. It's just like a treasure hunt. You don't have to search through the entire Want Ad Section to find all the Hidden Want Ads if you keep your wits about you. The hidden Want Ads are all related in a certain definite sequence.

The first one (the one which the picture helps you locate) helps you find the second one. The second one helps you find the third, and so on. Remember, there are no less than 10 hidden Want Ads and no more than 15. It's up to you to decide when you have found them all.

Awards will be made to the persons who send in the most nearly complete sets of hidden Want Ads arranged in the most nearly correct order in accordance with these rules. You may indicate what you believe to be their proper order or sequence by numbering them 1, 2, 3, 4, etc. You may clip the hidden Want Ads from the paper, using the handy blank at the right, or you may copy them down on a separate sheet. Neatness and ingenuity of presenting them will count. In case of ties, duplicate prizes will be given.

This Offer Is Open to All

This offer is open to all—men and women, boys and girls—except employes of the Chicago Tribune and their families. You pay nothing. Just prove your skill.

Entries should be mailed to "HIDDEN WANT ADS 'H'," the Chicago Tribune, Postoffice box 1539, Chicago, Illinois. All entries to today's game must be received in the office of the Tribune not later than 6:00 P. M. on Thursday, March 27, 1930.

You need not purchase the Tribune to compete. Copies of the Tribune may be examined at the Tribune office or at public libraries free of charge.

No entries will be returned. The Tribune cannot engage in correspondence on this subject. The prize winners of today's game will be announced two weeks from today.

Tailoring Salesmen
Can You Answer These
Two Questions?

1 Have you had at least four season's experience selling tailoring direct to wearer? Not as a clerk in a tailor shop, but as a salesman calling on his own clientele.

2 Have you, for the past two seasons, averaged at least 200 orders per season?

If you are a real salesman and can meet these requirements, write at once, giving such information about yourself as will convince you from the great mass of mediocre tailoring "starvers" that we can enable us to recommend you unhesitatingly as one of the outstanding tailoring concerns in the quality field.

In reply, you will not be sent a barrage of printed literature, as this is NOT a mail order proposition. Instead a personal appointment will be arranged at our expense, at which time complete details of an entirely new plan will be given you, whereby you can at least capitalize upon your ability to the ultimate earning power. We have nothing of interest for sixwel chair district managers or other parties, but if you are a PRODUCING SALESMAN, address in confidence, Robert N. Dixon, care of H. C. Goodwin Advertising Agency, 70 Exchange-st., Rochester, N. Y.

A New Building at 7321 South Shore Drive

Offers You

AN APARTMENT HOME OF DISTINCTION

The prevalent conception that all co-operative apartments are for the wealthy alone is erroneous.

For instance, there is for sale a seven room apartment on the 11th floor, with lake view from each of its 17 windows. The entire monthly operating charge is $210 and the equity can be bought for $6,450—half cash.

Other 6-7-8 room apartments are correspondingly available.

Enjoy your own private beach within twenty minutes of the loop!
